Dear Choi Soon,

thanks for the letter. I agree with your P. D. and he rightly should be concerned about my proposed interview with you. HE SHOULD BE PRESENT DURING OUR INTERVIEW BY ALL MEANS. THAT'S GOOD. But I haven't heard from Rees yet.

Neither have I heard from lawyer Hintz about my repeated requests to see your case file. Neither has Jay Yoo heard from him despite his repeated requests, Yoo told me. I guess we will keep trying.

Yoo and I drove to your home in San Jose and we had a very nice visit with your mother and Mary. They are great human beings. We talked for hours. And we all cried. Your mother and Mary are wonderful human beings. Your mother in my book is a heroic figure. I am certain any human being who learns how hard she struggled to survive in this country should feel the same way as I do. I and Jay told Mary and your mother to try to help you. keep healthy and live a normal life. That's the best way to help you. Ranko is another great human being. Yesterday, Sunday, she drove down to DVI to see you but was turned down after hours of waiting. It's outrageous how heartless prison authorities are in treating so many people who try to see inmates. After the visit with your mother Sunday, Jay and I were to drive up to SF to visit Ranko, but Ranko returned late that night, and we returned to Sacramento without going to SF. I talked with Ranko late Sunday night by telephone and she told me she couldn't get to see you. She is a beautiful human being. As you may know, she is in her last year in law school and facing her final exams this week. I told her to write me--after she finishes the exams--why she is convinced you are innnocent of the SF killing. Also we were to visit with Doris at her beauty parlor in SF but when we telephoned her place from San Jose and nobody was in. So we will try to see you at a later date.

Did you give your investigator Ryan a letter of release on your background profile?(mostly what you told him about your life)?
I think I will be abld to get on your story right after our interview.

keep your spirit.
