Students Against Viet War Organize

Students Against the War in Vietnam announce their first meeting on Wednesday, April 12, at 4 p.m., in the Third Floor Conference Lounge.

Co-chairmen of the group, John Fay, John Monson and Ron Ridg, are working at present with the other two county committees, Against the War in Vietnam in Orange and San Diego Counties, to launch such a movement through Orange County. The routes of these organizing efforts are being decided by the student committees in the various counties. The groups in Orange County would be invited to the event in San Diego, and the opposite would also be true.

Students in all areas of California will join Orange County in the effort to launch such a movement through Orange County. The purpose of this movement is to integrate the University of Mississippi, the University of California and the University of California campuses throughout the state.

"We feel that if people are accurately informed about the background of our policies in Vietnam, they will join in our efforts. Political background is unimportant. We are united in the belief that the war in Vietnam is not in our, nor the Vietnamese', best interest."

JAMES MEREDITH, Negro activist, will speak tomorrow noon to the Associated Students.

JAMES MEREDITH, the first Negro to integrate the University of Mississippi, will speak in UCI's Gateway Plaza tomorrow noon.

Meredith's topic will be "Racial Peace in America." His appearance at UCI is sponsored by the Associated Students.

Meredith gained fame when he entered the University of Missis-iippi. He participated in a one-man civil rights march in Mississippi, and during that march Meredith was shot by a sniper.

Recently, Meredith entered the Congressional race in Harlem and was planning to run on the Republican ticket against Adam Clayton Pow-ery. However, he withdrew from the race.

Philosophers To Discuss

Ten internationally noted philos-osophers will gather at Irvine on April 7 and 8 for a series of lectures and discussions.

Philosophers from the Southern California area will be invited to attend, commented Jack B. A. M. Mellen, chairman of the UCI department of philosophy.

The sessions are designed to bring together philosophers who have a special interest in the philosophic problems of race and ethnicity. The program is for an intensive series of dissussions based upon scholarly papers and commentaries delivered by internationally distinguished men, Mellen said.

Entitled the "UC Irvine Philosophy Colloquium," the series is sponsored by the UCI department of philosophy and the UCI graduate division.

The sessions will be held in the Interfaith Center conference room in the Irvine Town Center building.

Berkeley Health Officials Disclose High Drug Usage

The student health center at Berkeley announced last week that one of every four students at their campus smokes marijuana. Dr. Henry B. Brun, Berkeley health director, that as many as 60% of students at some eastern universities smoke marijuana, also stated that 80% of Berkeley students take LSD.

The filing date for Supreme Court Justices has been extended to Friday, April 7 at 5 p.m. Applications are available in the main American Office.

The Supreme Court will have fewer cases than expected, as stated in the ASUCI Constitution. Nor will Justices be "hearing appeals from all decisions of inferior judicial bodies," but they will also have the power of judicial review.

Justices "will judge in all cases of impeachment, as well as disciplining members who do not conform to judicial procedures. Positions on the Supreme Court extend for one year.

UCI health officials report no knowledge of drug abusers at the Health Center and refuse to estimate the number of users of illegal drugs on the campus. Students may fill out the drug questionnaire on page 4 of The Antelope and have it returned to the Health Center before May 1.

Searching Characters
Find Way To Irvine

Student Repertory Theater's third production, Six Characters in Search of an Author, has been extended to run Friday-Saturday nights, April 14 and 15, as well as April 7, 8, 9. Performance time is 8:30 p.m.

Six Characters in Search of an Author is a play-within-a-play which offers the audience insights into how plays and their characters are created. This most realist drama in the repertory of the Student Repertory Theater of UC Irvine will show yet another facet of the talents of the 18-member group.

Twelve members of the acting company play members of a theater company in rehearsal. They are interjected by six characters who claim to carry a play inside them. As the play progresses it becomes difficult to tell who is playing-acting who is not. Character and illusion, truth and reality come intermingled.

Penny Buyer, who was last seen as Morris Biedermann in "The Death of Morris Biedermann," will be given Saturday, April 7, 8, 9. Performance time is 8:30 p.m. for a two-performance engagement.

The American History and institutions examination will be given Saturday, April 2, 10 a.m. in the SLH. Students must bring their registration cards.

Recommended reading for the test is Nevins and Connolly, A POCKET HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES and, as Sayre, AMERICAN GOVERNMENT Computer instruction is also available.

Supreme Court Duties Outlined

by STEPHANIE BURCH

Recently, Jack Lewis, president of the ASUCI, brought to light the duties of the Supreme Court (SRT), which is the student-run version of the Supreme Court as proposed in Articles IV of the UC Constitution.

The UC Supreme Court will act in much the same manner as does the national Supreme Court. (71) It will check, interpret, act in appeals, and preside. As a di- vision of the student body, it is distinct from the executive and the legislative branches, it will check those two bodies to assure that only actions in the student's best interest will be taken. The Supreme Court will act as a guide and interpreter of the loosely struc-

Kerr considers UC Return

Clark Kerr, former President of the University of California, still has been reported as possibly returning to the University next September as a professor of political science. As Kerr has said, he will retain his status as a full tenured professor of political science.

Kerr has been negotiating with departmental chairman who will be affected by his return.

He was appointed last week a Marshall Lecturer at Cambridge University in England. This post would take about a month of his time, Kerr said, and he would be available to the student community as a consultant.

Yes! We Have No Bananas!

by Amanda Spake

From Vons to Food Giant, from Albertson's All American to Stater Brothers, from Market Basket to Ti To... grocery stores all over California are feeling the pinch. The Bananas People are here.

Banana peel smoking, the newest and psychedelic experience, is the subject of much debate. Many claim they can reportedly believe it. Doctors deny it works. And authorities are trying to figure out some way to outlaw it.

"Banana peel smokers are not too difficult to find and few people are unwilling to admit that they have tried it. It was therefore able to talk with an experienced banana smoker in order to obtain some curate information."

"You've smoked banana peels lately?" I asked.

"Oh, yes. Bananas are only two dollars for a five pound basket."

"Oh, well, would you tell me the process for preparing the bananas?"

"The first step you have to go into a store and buy the bananas. My friend and I went in a big, fancy grocery store that's ten pounds of bananas."

"You went into a store and bought ten pounds of bananas?"

"Yeah."

"I imagine you got some way of opening them."

"Well, as we were leaving the store, we were handed with the ten pounds of bananas, this box boy asked the customer 'Bana-nana splits or what?' We didn't tell them what they were for."

"So you left the store with ten pounds of bananas?"

"Yeah."

"I imagine you got some rather odd look."

"Well, after you get the bananas home, oh, it's better to be prepared. We bought a box that's ten pounds of bananas."

"Well, then you peel all of the bananas?"

"All ten pounds at once?"

"Yeah. And you stack up all of the bananas and worse luck to the inside of the peel. Then you keep scrapping."

"But how did you take it to scrape the peels of the banana?"

"Oh, I guess it took about an hour. But your hands get real gooey."

"Sticky."

"Yeah. Then you put all of this stuff in a pan and put enough water in it just to cover the top of the scraping and boil this for three hours until its pasty and gooey."

"Okay."

"Well, then you put the don't you think?"

"Yeah. It takes quite a while."

"Does it work?" I asked.

"Well, I don't know. I felt something."

"It could have been exhaustion from scraping ten pounds of banana peels. One thing is bothering me. What did you do with the insides of all of those bananas? You couldn't have eaten that many banana nases."

"Well, we went down the street to this guy's house and threw them on his front porch."

"You threw ten pounds of banana peels on this person's front porch?"

"There are not too much you can do with ten pounds of bananas without the peels."

"You bring ten cans a pound in Anaheim this week."

"It's a way of life, not just a job. And I love it. I wouldn't have it any other way."

That's how Norman Weinberger, UC Irvine professor of psychology, describes his work.

Weinberger figures that he averages about 60 hours a week on the job, teaching, counseling, working in his laboratory and taking care of university business.

His day at the office begins at about 8:45 a.m. and ends at 5:30 p.m. He usually eats both his lunch at his desk or grabs a quick bite before operating in his laboratory.

Then at home, after his six children have gone to bed, he reads and writes until midnight. About every other Sunday is spent at the University in the laboratory.

According to a recent survey by the news media of the widespread drug usage by college students, the ANTHILL requests UC1 students to complete the following questionnaire so that we may determine the extent of drug usage on this campus. All questionnaires will be submitted anonymously. Please include reasons for all answers, if you determine the extent of drug usage on this campus.

Do you approve of the usage of non-narcotic drugs such as marijuana, LSD, bananas?

Have you ever tried them? Which?

If you have not used these drugs, will you ever in the future try them?

How would you estimate drug usage by college students?

Do you consider drug usage a worthwhile experiment?

Should it be more than an experiment?

Do you think marijuana and LSD should be legalized?

Grading Should Not Interfere With Concerns of Education

by GREG HOFFMANN

Much of the debate that has been raging in the past several months has struck me as amusing and appalling. I would hope that professors feel free to discuss the problems of education — you, know, teaching, students. But it seems that some of them need the reminder that this is a University, not a Boot Camp, that grading is a secondary matter which should not interfere with the business at hand, and that students are not necessarily dishonest, though an educational system that teaches them to think in terms of emphasis on achievement (to the point of regarding a grade as a measure anyway) is not likely to allow them to think and create, such that a system may well lead to dishonesty.

Grading, it seems to me, has four important effects on our students beyond means of enforcing in students whatever standards of behavior and thinking they may have — this does not always lead to independent and experimental work, 2) it teaches the students to value things such as money, one works for money at his job, rather than because his work is meaningful or fulfilling, so one works for grade-money; learning might take place, but only when nobody's watching. 3) it enforces upon the students an authoritarian role of the teacher in the "learning" becomes the record-playback system of lectures and tests we all know so well, instead of the free give-and-take of the "discussion" or "demonstration" of knowledge. 4) it breeds the student— the A student is the good student; the B student, much, and a person who gets a D not only feels only is wrong with him (or her), to displease you, to do something (or fail to do it) in the case, unfortunately), but also gets ignored by the faculty, who seem to feel that "horrible students, how real that, and they might be a little breathing room in an association of scholars. They sure don't run things this way.

Any alternates I might try to outline would immediately be labeled by some as idealistic, by others as impractical, and yet the consensus that can be put on an idea nowadays is that it's idealistic, especially here. After all, what do you think this place is, a University?

Birth Control Is Only Means For Solving Poverty Problems

by DON SHEPARD

If the conclude is to be as biased as the March 30 Antihill makes it look, we will be subjected to nothing but speakers who say the way to avoid having uneducable, unemployable, and antisocial people is to change the environment in which they develop. I wonder if any of them are going to tell us how this can be done? How do you give a passion for learning to children whose parents sneer at education? How do you imbue a child with honesty when his mother makes a living by deceit and cunning? This is not simply a matter of the lowest kind of charity for generations? There is only one possible answer. The environment of these children can be significantly changed only by removing them from their parents altogether, because a child "inherits" his attitudes from those who bring him up.

Where, then, are these children to be reared? There aren't enough successful homes to place them in. Successful people, after all, like to have their own children. Again, there is only one answer. They would have to be brought up in government-operated centers. And it doesn't take much imagination to think what kind of blackboard jungle that environment will turn out to be. Only not just confined to school hours, this would be in operation 24 hours a day.

In short, there is no prospect of ever being able to change the environment of the children of poverty. The only way to keep poverty from breeding more poverty is to keep poverty from breeding. And since poverty-stricken people welcome family planning assistance, the solution is satisfactory to all concerned.

Some of our weak-headed do-gooders moan about "Who are we to judge our fellow man?" Judge, fiddlesticks! Give them the pills and let them judge for themselves.

What The College Students Are Saying About Education

by Dr. Lynn Sheller

President, Fullerton J.C.

Part I

During the past two years we have been reading of student demonstration at the University of California on its Berkeley and Riverside campuses; at Yale and Chicago and Ohio State and Oklahoma State and Princetion and Virginia and the University of Michigan and Alabama State and St. John's, and a number of other colleges and universities. The public has been alarmed at these demonstrations, colleges have been disturbed, and students have been actively involved. This enthusiasm is not without reason. It seems to me that the sympathetic student response to these demonstrations indicates that the demonstrators at Berkeley and elsewhere are expressing feelings that are common among students everywhere. In these demonstrations the students have been, and are, saying things to their institutions and through their institutions to us. What are they saying?

In discussing this topic I want to acknowledge my debt to a number of sources: books and reports — Addresses and Proceedings of the 42nd National College Association, 1965; Current Issues in Education, 1965; a publication of the American Association for High- er Education; Research — Report of the Select Committee on Education (1965); Revision of the Student Street and the College Experience (1965); to a number of magazines and newspaper articles; to the written communications from a number of our graduate students; to Fullerton Junior College, at Berkeley, and elsewhere.

Students Speaking Out

As far as their words are saying to us, please remember that I do not pretend that I am an expert on this, but I do make the effort to study what they are saying, and I do not mean to suggest that they are speaking for all students. I do mean to say that all they say is that they are speaking for all students. I want to say that a significant number of students, mostly upperclassmen and graduate students, are speaking through a group of speakers, and they are being listened to by a much larger group who are not speaking, and that a significant number of questions are raised, questions which are being asked by a much larger group who are not speaking and are being listened to by a much larger group who are not speaking, and the questions which are being asked, and they are the ideas and attitudes of the students.

Now, what are these ideas and attitudes? I will mention briefly. First it may be well to say that they reject much of the conventional wisdom in American society. In general they reject big business, which they call "economic imperialism." They reject our increasingly impersonal society, which they think is resulting from mass production and mass communication, which they think is leading to mass production and mass communication; they reject the church and the political system, which they think is leading to mass production and mass communication; they reject the Christian church and the political system, and one of their spokesmen has described the student body as a public utility, run by the National Student Association to serve a big business. They are contemptuous of patriotism; they denounce the bomb, and they denounce the use of force in setting international disputes. Generally they reject conventional values and have a tolerant attitude toward obscenity in speech, books, or films; toward free sex relations, and toward the use of marijuana, LSD, and hallucinatory drugs. They reject work and even something about the students themselves, that is about the million dollars a year that the strikers disposed of. I can describe them in one word: the stench of their existence and the way they try to make charity a way of life for generations? They object to conformity and are impatient with the "normal" or the "ordinary" society. They are the people, after all, like us, who say the way to avoid having uneducable, unemployable, and antisocial children whose parents sneer at education? How do you imitate a child with honesty when his mother makes a living by deceit and cunning? This is not simply a matter of the lowest kind of charity for generations? There is only one possible answer. The environment of these children can be significantly changed only by removing them from their parents altogether, because a child "inherits" his attitudes from those who bring him up.

Corps Shirk's Responsibility; OC Discrimination Prevails

It will come as no great shock to anyone if I disclose that several basketball players at Orange County Community College have complained about it to the newspapers. Another case has arisen two months ago when I disclosed there is a Marine Lieutenant was transferred to El Toro earlier this year, who was transferred to Vietnam. Since the Marines don't permit dependents in that particular type of service, the Marine decided to buy a $500 house that he knew he was to leave his family in while he was overseas. Not having lived here all his life, he was unaware that Negroes aren't supposed to live in certain parts of Orange County.

Picking Tustin is a nice place to live, he wandered into a realtor's office on his first day here. They showed him a house that he knew he would never buy and gave him a rundown when he asked for something better. Most Negroes tire after a few days of this and give up. But the Marine didn't. He took the real estate agent to see a house where he expected to spend about a year before being sent to Vietnam.

Air California Joins San Fran, Orange Co.

by Jill Garber

Air California, a creation of a group of young California executives, now flies five non-stop flights each day between Orange County and San Francisco.

"Many visitors to Southern California make their headquarters in Orange County," stated Richard A. Dick, vice president of traffic and sales for Air California. This fact motivated executives from Uni ited, Pan American and Lockheed to explore the possibility of an airline which would serve the Orange County area.

The new airline, which began flights January 16, is a $61 million dollar venture. Eight members of the Board of Directors repres ent businesses from all over the state will be responsible for the future development of the company.

The success of the venture will depend on how well Air California can "sell" Orange County to San Francisco. The air corridor between San Francisco and Los Angeles has been the most heavily traveled in the world since 1964. In 1965 over three million air pas cengers traveled between the two points.

Four days in the past eight years at Berkeley show that 81 to 90 percent of the graduate students pay part of their education costs out of their own pockets. This means that large numbers of UC students must pay for their own education costs, and a large number of the undergraduates are women.

More than half of the undergraduates are women. This is a very unusual situation for students in urban areas.

The average age range for both En campments is 17 through 21. Cost of board, books and other expenses.

Money remains a major hurdle for students.

The average UC student now must pay $1,000 for a nine month academic year to cover fees, room, board, books and other expenses. The UC survey points out that, in many state systems, debt-free doe nuritionists and State contributions for new student residents ease the cost loads. At the University of California, students must pay for most of the cost of construction, oper ation and maintenance of their campus residences.

Less Privileged Californians Prefer UC To Private Colleges

According to the UC staff study on tuition, far more students from poorer California families are going to the University of California than to the state's private colleges and universities. And a majority of UC students work to help pay for their education.

The study attempted to answer criticisms that UC students were getting "free rides," education to which they were not contributing. In fact, the survey indicated, even at UC already place it is out of reach for many young Californians who may have the ability but not the money.

UC needs five times as many students from the lower-income families as do private colleges and universities in California, says the report, citing a State Scholarship Commission survey. Thirty-six per cent of UC students come from families with incomes below $10,000, the report noted.

Money remains a major hurdle after enrollment. Repeated surveys have shown that the main reason for student drop outs is lack of funds.

The average UC student now must pay $1,000 for a nine month academic year to cover fees, room, board, books and other expenses. The UC survey points out that, in many state systems, debt-free doe

The New York Encampment, to be held July 2-August 12, will focus on urban area problems and world affairs.

The Inter-American Encampment, to be held in Luguillo National Forest, Puerto Rico, drawing participants from throughout the Americas, will be held June 21-August 1. Its program empha sis will be on community development and human rights in the Americas. The age range for both Encampments is 17 through 21. Cost of board, books and other expenses.

Money remains a major hurdle after enrollment. Repeated surveys have shown that the main reason for student drop outs is lack of funds.

Four days in the past eight years at Berkeley show that 81 to 90 percent of the graduate students pay part of their education costs out of their own pockets. This means that large numbers of UC students must pay for their own education costs, and a large number of the undergraduates are women.

More than half of the under

California Club Names Seventeen UCI Members

Seventeen UCI students have been appointed to the Irvine chapter of the California Club. The announcement came from Acting President of the University Harry Wellman, who was instrumental in the selection. Cal Club, which was started in 1974 by former UC President Gordon Sproul, was originally designed to eliminate conflicts which existed between UCLA and Berkeley. Since then it has grown into a campus-wide organization, serving as a communication network between campus communities. President Wellman connected each of the Irvine members personally, notifying them of their eligibility to the organization. In each letter he stressed Cal Club goals, stating, "It is an agency for the communication of opinion between the students and the President of the University on matters concerning the University."

He also pointed out that the club "...seeks to maintain harmonious relations and unity among the student groups of the several campuses of the University" and that it "serves to increase and clarify the community's understanding of the University."

Each student who was accepted was one that "possessed the loyalty and the ability to assist in furthering these purposes."

During Easter vacation Irvine members joined Cal Club participants from other UC campuses for the California Club Conference, held in San Diego. The UCI chapter was installed during the three-day meeting, and Irvine members were initiated.

UCI Students appointed to the club include Jack Lewis, Walter Draff, Anne Dryden, Paul Ideker, and Barry Gla!

Additional members are J ohn Bradley, Bill Singer, KC Westburg, Diane Berkey, Ken Charlton and Sandy Wall.

The final five students accepted were Jim Creedon, David Althislub, Jeff Stone, Stan Chipendall, Sharon Storm and Caren Davis. Sophomores Sue Chipendall was appointed temporary chairman of the group until members can formally elect a president. Activities Advisor Neil Mahlberg is serving as group adviser.

Friday Concert Series Begins Tomorrow April 7

The first of the Friday One O'clock Concerts, a new series sponsored by the Division of Fine Arts, will take place on Friday, April 7, at 1:00 p.m. in Fine Arts 1656. This initial concert will feature J. S. Bach's Concerto in D minor for two violins and orchestra, which will be performed by Donald Abraham Lobor and Paul Pearson, with members of the UCI Orchestra conducted by Professor H. Colin Slim.

Subsequent concerts will feature other student performers and a wide variety of works from piano music for four hands to complete operatic arias. Performers in these concerts are drawn from the student, faculty and staff of UCI, as well as residents of Orange County communities. All interested performers should contact Mrs. Traughber in the education abroad committee.

Constitution committee.

Louise Lindo has been appointed to the committee on undergraduate scholarships, admissions and awards, and Peter Herman to the committee on privileges, tenure and academic freedom.

Sandy Smith will participate on the selection abroad committee, and Don Elder on the library committee.

Appointed to non-Senate committee positions were Senators Wallace and Morey, who will act as the two student government representatives to the (student) publications committee.

President Lewis, who is anxious to involve students on the Academic Senate, commented, "It is obvious that if our plan for a faculty-student partnership in the formation of student-related policies is to become real, that these representatives must exist every effort to make their membership on the Senate committee meaningful."

The ASUC Senate is accepting the names of graduate students who are interested in serving on the Academic Senate Graduate Council. Any student wishing to submit his name may contact Don Chiu, 1549.

Rogers Quits Basketball Post

An English major at USC with nearly 30 minutes over his A.B. Rogers has been offered several lucrative positions. ‘I’ve not made any decision on exactly where I’ll work yet, my contract doesn’t expire until June, so I’ve got a while to decide. Very generally, I intend to go into public relations, sales, or management.”

“Coaching here has been a great experience and I enjoyed it tremendously. I have a real feeling of association with this institution that can’t be easily severed. I’m continually impressed by the people involved here, but in my own best interests I think I’ve made the right decision.”

“We’ve established a stable basketball program here and I’d like to feel that I’ve played an important role in that organization process. There are few other schools in my recollection which could in two seasons boast of the rogor with which we are presently treated.”

“It’s a rough thing to establish a self-sustaining sports program in an academically oriented school, but that is what has been done. I have no doubt that under Dick Davis it will not only sustain itself, but markedly improve as well.”

Leaving basketball, Rogers leaves behind an impressive ledger both as player and coach. At Fullerton JC, he captained his team into the state finals in successive years, with Fullerton winning the tourney in his second year and with his being named commissioners tournament player.

In his senior year at USC, he was named captain and Most Valuable Player. In that same year he broke Bill Sharman’s school scoring record and was named first team All West Coast. Rogers stayed on as assistant coach at SC before taking over his present USC post.

Davis Displays Mixed Emotions

Quite naturally, coach Dick Davis reacted to Dan Rogers’ retirement from the varsity basketball coaching post with mixed emotions.

“I’m very sorry to see Rogers go. I’ve immensely enjoyed knowing and working with him,” Davis remarked. “But of course I am excited about coaching the varsity, too.”

Davis expressed surprise at Rogers’ decision, but added, “I know he will be a success. We will miss him at UCI. He was an excellent head coach and a good friend.”

Rated as one of Southern California’s most successful high school basketball coaches, Davis came to UCI from Glendale High where his teams won 147 and lost 34 during a seven year span.

In the past two years, Davis’ fresh and jayvee teams have won over 80% of their contests. The likelihood of matching that achievement in the varsity level is slight, although the high degree of jayvee success this year would suggest a weighty opposition was wholly unpredictable at the season’s outset.

Ciudad Leads Trophy Race

The spring quarter brings the intramural sports program at Irvine to a climax. With the all-sports trophy at stake, Ciudad will be trying to hold its lead over defending champion Arroyo.

In the previous two quarters Ciudad has built up a wide lead over the rest of the league by winning every event in the dorm competition, except handball. In the modified point totals, Ciudad has run up 401 points to 334 for Arroyo, 258 for Fair, 234 for Balboa, and 206 for Coachella.

In intramural polo Ciudad, a team that did not win a single game last year, has developed a strong team that he formed defending champ Loma into the rule of underdog.

UCI Crew Team Debuts Saturday

The Newport area’s crew enthusiasts will be offered their first chance of 1967 to see several fine crew teams, including UCI’s, in action in Saturday’s Festival of Rowing.

The competition, which commences at 8:45 a.m., will take place in the north Lido Channel, which can be viewed from the Orange Coast Yacht basin adjacent to the Balboa Bay Club.

The undefeated Irvine and UCSB jayvee teams will “be at each other’s throats” in the premier event at 8 a.m. according to UCI coach Duval Hecht. Hecht himself rowed three years at Stanford, competed in the 1952 Olympic Games, and, with his partner, won a gold medal for the United States in the 1956 Olympics.

Meet a national resource named Steve

Steve is a cross-country track man, an artist, and an explorer of worlds that do not exist. That spirit of intellectual freedom is an attempt to study that lies beyond our three known dimensions.

At the 1966 International Science Fair, Steve won a ribbon for his theory of dimensions. But he doesn’t stop there. He believes the number of other dimensions is limitless, and is hard at work to prove it.

Why our interest in Steve? Because young people are our greatest national resource.

They deserve all the help they can get toward realizing their potentials. Contributing to science fairs, providing scholarships and fellowships, refined tours, and geography tours, and teaching materials for schools, are just some of the ways our Company shows its active interest in today’s young men and women.

Standard Oil is trying to help young people discover more about themselves... and the world they live in.

Irvin’s tennis team will play host to both California Western University and the Air Force Academy in separate dual meet competition Saturday. The match with Cal Western begins at 10 a.m., followed at 2:30 by the dual meet with Air Force.
