Comparative Cultures Groups To Oppose Academic Reorganization

by david wilson

Last Wednesday a meeting was held by the Comparative Cultures Undergraduate Association. It concerned the plan, proposed by the administration, to dissolve the organization which has been submitted by Vice Chancellor of Academic Affairs, Hazard Adams. The plan, in part, proposes that the Program in Comparative Culture be merged with the Humanities Department. The meeting, which was held on the rainy afternoon, was called to "discuss methods by which we as students can unite in preventing this detrimental merger." The meeting was held at the students' request of a students' statement upon the proposed merger. (See Local). The faculty of Comparative Culture has bitterly opposed the merger. On February 2 the faculty of Comparative Culture declared the following resolution: "We, the faculty of Comparative Culture, will not merge with the school of Humanities under any condition, and we urge the university to recognize that the student groups cannot remain an autonomous student body under the existing direct relationship to the office of the Vice Chancellor of Academic Affairs on this campus, with..."

Effects of Prop. 2 Passage on U.C.

The taxpayers' investment of$156 million for expansion of health sciences facilities in the University of California through voter approval of Proposition 2, will realize major return in the next 20 years.

The experience has shown that approximately 91 percent of the new physicians graduates from the University of California medical schools go into practice. 7 percent become teachers and administrators, and about 2 percent take up other medical research. Although this last percentage is small, its impact on health care is particularly great. The estimate is based on a recent study in biomedical research which concluded that the total number of lives which have been saved and salvaged, of the work and findings of medical research programs, which seek to alleviate the health problems and income which would have been lost is calculated to be$12 billion.

The ability to treat patients who have tuberculosis chemically rather than by long hospitalization, has saved approximately$5 billion since 1954. At the same time there has been a net gain of approximately$5 billion since 1974. The net gain has been a net gain of approximately$8 billion since 1974.

At the same time there has been a net gain of approximately$5 billion since 1974. In the year 1970, 2 percent of the total national budget allocated to medical research was spent on the Health Research Council. The Health Research Council is the only council which is completely devoted to medical research.

Nixon Closes Programs to "Cut" Budget

by jerrie schipske

The abolishment of the Office of Economic Opportunity and its programs by the Nixon Administration has been a subject of much debate and controversy. The Office of Economic Opportunity was created by the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964, which created OEO, specifically stated in Section 601, that OEO may be transferred, but not dissolved and then only after Congressional approval.

As for the fate of local Community Action Agencies, which are directed at helping the low-income citizen a voice in local decision-making, President Nixon stated: "If the constituencies of individual communities desire to continue providing extra support for local Community Action Agencies, general revenue and sharing funds, the funds will be provided a new round of the local government. The Nixon administration marks also an end to the "War on Poverty." And as we note that the Defense expenditures will be more than 30% of the proposed budget, one wonders then that, if ever, America will come home again.

Graduate Students To Leave ASUCI?

The Humanities Graduate Literary Association, on behalf of all undergraduate students, has asked ASUCI for permission to separate and form their own Student's Association for grad students.

Their main complaints are that ASUCI does not represent the graduate students at Irvine and that graduate students do not have the time to get involved in the bureaucracy of student government.

Instead, they ask that they be given the$8 per quarter that ASUCI takes from graduate students, so that the learned personnel are available at an institution where research proposals are considered. Passage of Proposition 2 will provide more space and trained personnel and so will attract even more of these grant funds to California.

Many types of cancer, heart disease, arthritis, mental retardation, mental illness, genetic disorders, and other debilitating and devastating diseases and conditions are still in need of improved treatment techniques, cures and methods of prevention. Research in all of these areas affecting our health is ongoing in the University of California, where many breakthroughs and important findings have been achieved in medical research and treatment, and in basic scientific knowledge such as nuclear medicine. UC researchers have pioneered..."

At Ease with One’s Self

On Thursday, February 1, the UCI Women’s Center presented Women’s Day in the form of an open program of entertainment, rap groups, and free food. As I took my place in the front row of the Gateway Plaza for this event, I helped feeling that a good portion of those in attendance were anticipating a good laugh at “Radical feminists doing their thing.” However, as the program progressed, it was clear that these empty stares and smirks to honest attention and even indications of some emotional behavior among those in the “safety” of the nearby buildings were vulnerable to the very gut-level vibrations from the rock group Sisterhood and song-writer Maxine Feldman.

Sisterhood not only displayed that women can perform above and beyond the usual “beaver” sequence of activities, but also provided the listeners with some really fine sounds to listen to. The beginning of her very entertaining performance, Maxine Feldman commented, “We have deep voices too,” which seemed to be taken in stride by the collected audience until her out-front admission of being gay (“Is she, or isn’t she?”). She, in fact, that the audience knew where Maxine was coming from. And it was a refreshing change to have her be accepted and appreciated, as opposed to being asked to leave. Things are looking up!

As the performers, a good size group of interested women attended the general rap in trailer 60, where the intended purpose, outreach, and growth of the UCI Women’s Center were discussed. And projected from these discussions were such services as pregnancy-abortion referral, Self-Help, Radical Lesbian Women’s Center consultancy, gay-straight dialogues, legal aide, and feminist art.

Women, to say that you are a women to center is there to help you is unnecessary, as only you can know what your needs are and can act on this knowledge to talk to someone. The office is being staffed daily from 9-4 and the day is yours.

As one response to the center was that it was needed long ago, it can only be hoped that this same need be recognized as a continuing necessity for the support of our environment. And perhaps with the eventual formation and growth of such a group, our need for the late-recently expressed philosophies of our fine California Lt. Governor, that the best form of birth control is an aspirin held securely between finger and thumb.

The new Women’s Center, as part of the Community Projects Office, is here for all women to justify its existence one must see, so the center can help her and how she in turn, can help the center.

Neat things to do on Saturday mornings

Corona, California — Linc Raashe’s Pheasant Hunting Club in Corona, is home to one of the finest hunting available. Situated on 1,000 acres leased from the Orange County Water District, the Raashe Club has transformed previous fishing ponds into fine pheasant hunting land. This year’s late opening has not curtailed the Club’s popularity, according to Raashe. “On Raashe, ‘On average, we release over a hundred pheasants per day, and almost every hunter takes birds home to the Freezer.”

The Corona Community Sportsmen and friends composing a recent hunting party at the Club bagged 36 birds, including the eye-catching American Pheasant.

This type of successful hunt is common at the Raashe facility.

The cover is good and provides a challenge for both the hunter and the bird. The Raashe Club is on a water fowl flyway and produces Canadian Geese and waterfowl in great numbers. In addition, there is a family of otters in the area.

The Club is operated on land owned by the Orange County Water District. The Orange County Water District’s policy is to develop its publicly owned lands for multipurpose recreational use as an enhancement to the environment. The OCWD share does not change. The Club’s Pheasant Ops. and Enhancement Fund used to develop other OCWD land along the Santa Ana River. The District also operates Anaheim Lake (a put-and-take trout fishing operation) and Aqua-Tec (Southern California’s first driving range over water, complete with floating golf balls). Paved and under constructions are hiking and bicycle paths, equestrian trails, parks, a small fishing pond for children only, and a swimming lake.

How Your Government Takes Care of its People

Legislation to prohibit the U.S. Navy from shelling and bombing the island of Culebra — the home of 750 American citizens, all of whom are and have been residents of the U.S. Senate with Senator Alan Cranston (D-Calif.)

"The Defense Department made a firm promise that the naval sea and air bombardment of Culebra during the past few weeks, were the last of our national life for years to come. This must not be allowed to happen. We must instead, seek to resolve our differences in a spirit of mutual understanding and respect." Furthermore, Cardinal Krol, Archbishop of Philadelphia, and president of the conference, has called on the President of the United States to immediately cease all government assistance to the Culebra community.

Culebra is a 3 by 8 mile island in the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, 22 miles east of the Puerto Rican mainland. An uninhabited island, it was settled by the Spanish and during the Spanish-American War, only town was made a part of the Atlantic Fleet Base. The Claro Foundation, Pres. Theodore Roosevelt, and Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge, and later that fight. Defense Secretary Melvin Laird promised that the bombardment would stop by July 1, 1973. But in March, when the Pentagon releases a study that concluded that "alternatives are available which could accommodate the Naval Gunfire Support training now done at Culebra.

As late as November 4, 1972, Secretary Laird sent a telegram to then Puerto Rican Govern- or Luis Munoz Marin, stating that shelling by the date, Cranston said, "Yet on December 27, Secretary Laird sent a letter to President Nixon saying that the bombardment would continue until at least 1985 and would actually accelerate. The Department claims that a letter classified study revealed that other target areas are not as important. The Department's claims are an additional testimony to the training activity. The bill, if passed, would stop naval bombardment of the island by July 1, 1973. But as of now, the people of Culebra can be reassured that those shells dropping around their homes are actually protecting them.

At Ease with One’s Self

The theme of this evening’s rally on amnesty spoken by President Nixon is here to haunt us. Since peace, at least a semblance of the faces and voices of those who have been on the run for the past few weeks.

Thusly, The National Council of Catholic Bishops, in announcing a resolution declaring that “all possible consideration must be given to those young men who, because of conscientious belief, refused to participate in the war,” added, “This war will leave a residue of bitterness which could poison our national life for years to come. This must not be allowed to happen. We must instead, seek to resolve our differences in a spirit of mutual understanding and respect.”

Senators Al Gore-Danforth, a non-Vietnam war supporter, and those filibusterers, Mr. and Mrs. John Hickenlooper, also a non-Vietnam war supporter, have been in the Senate for three days, to see if there is any possibility to stop the war. It is a fact, however, that the Senate has not been able to pass a bill to stop the war.

The area of the Senate is the words of the Catholic bishops, who “would poison our national life for years to come,” unless our leadership is capable of inspiring national unity and reconciliation. And the treatment of the war must be a cruel test.

The Senate debate will be the last chance for cementing and fixing discord and of many different groups will give the hardline chorus. If the President continues to lend his voice to the punitive cry, a long, cruel and clamorous battle is assured.
Some imported vintages are considered "special," with labels that indicate the grape varieties used in the wine. These wines are typically more expensive than their domestic counterparts, and they are often sold in limited quantities. The quality of these wines can vary widely, and it is important to do your research before purchasing them. Some of the most popular imported wines come from countries such as France, Italy, and Spain, and they are available in a variety of styles, including red, white, and rosé. These wines are often enjoyed with a variety of foods, and they can be a great addition to any meal.

Welcome to the world of showbiz! That plastic, tinSEL world where everything is really down to it, and the music is just fine. That’s the world of Hollywood Jim Mallek, who has a show every Friday from noon to 3 p.m.

Besides blues, soul and jazz, Hollywood Jim can fill your mind and ears with show tunes, hard rock, and his own quasi-stellar jive between records. Jim knows a lot about that Old Time World, and you’ll probably learn a lot about several things if you listen.

Hollywood evidently enjoys what Jim does, and endeavors to make his three hours swing with class that Tuborg Beer couldn’t match. No matter what your musical tastes, Jim is bound to strike a responsive chord somewhere in your psyche. He dearly loves to get calls (“Let’s have some ladies call in now. As much as I like me, there comes a time when a feminine voice does a great deal for your head.”), so, if you’re not in class or in hospital on Fridays at 12, call the Hollywood Jim line at 788 or KUCI.

Rock, you say? The Radio Rich Halston show will take care of you. Richard’s show extends from nine to twelve p.m. on Thursday nights. Besides being a smooth person over the mike, Rich is very obliging over the request line. He lies to get calls from ladies, too. His people are the Beach Boys, Michael Nesmith, and mostly et. Rich is also responsible for most of the recorded announcements that are heard over KUCI, including those for the Cancer Society, MECUA, Patogh and other things. You’ll find more good music with him than with anyone else on Thursdays.

But, in case you people think that KUCI is nothing but a citadel for the oversexed American boy, let us tell you men where to call up to hear a feminine voice. Mary Lyon does her show from 7 to 9 p.m., and a very fine show it is, too. Just before that, Ms. Jamie Hahn has a one-hour show from 6 to 7 p.m. the station’s only all-female show, and a few notes from Jamie’s own throat! (Ever hear a disc jockey sing? Tune in.) Renee Nolma joins Max Patterman for a critical look at rock and roll on Wednesdays, midnight to 3. And the very sweet Michelle Beutel plays records between comments every Friday morning, 10 a.m. Women’s Libbers take note.

John McLaughlin thinks getting ripped is a no-no but that doesn’t deter him from performing at the folk world. His music is perfect for times like these, a highly recommended album is BIRDS OF FIRE when a late-night pick me up is needed. The Mahavishnu Orchestra this time around is a hyperventilating mixture of free-form jazz and pili-driving rock, the combination being so furious at times that it is hard to concentrate on the music being played because it sounds as if there are ten. Two examples are McLaughlin’s extraordinary exhibitions “Miles Beyond,” a non-original, and “Celestial Travelers.” The later is an Emerson, Lake and Palmer rip-off which John rips apart his guitar, “Miles Beyond” is heavy on the outside, but on the marshmallow inside he shows compassion, pushing the instrument to capacity like a lady gossipping at unendurable speed over a back fence. During a short break somewhere around the middle of the song he begins to fall lead over piano puidles by Jan Hamer. The whole shebang could be a song by itself but instead fades back into the much too stout beginning.

The album contains a much more direct approach to getting its music across and is not as vague in its presentation as on the Orchestra’s prior album, THE INNER MOUNTING LAME. Each song differs from the next in such naked evidence that they all seem to have trouble fitting into each other. But if you survive the radical changes-over the rest is just pure honey to swallow.

The other two rockers are “Hope,” a series of building and falling rhythms like what palace guards must create while pacing to and fro, and “One Word” which is one thing that doesn’t seep out. He leaves that picture when he leaves and starts taking up juggling in his spare time. As it to nip the giant in the bud, so to speak, Billy Cobham keeps pushing his rhythms going at once on drums in the second section of the song, which if you didn’t come would wind up pounding yourself into oblivion.

“Resolution” is done slow and building, like the erection of a wall that couldn’t be shattered by a sledgehammer. Two excellent exercises are “Sapphire Bullets Of Pure Love,” a twenty second musical laser beam and “Open Country” which is just that, doing which Richard Goodman plants roots and midway through the tune they’ve become full grown flowers.

Criminal test results on a volunteer offer some relevations on images that come to mind during the playing. That’s a whole lot of place on the album. Our volunteer said he pictured Joe Greco tap dancing with a ball point pen (brand named unmentionable) attached to his foot when he listened to it. He garbled on incomprehensibly for the next few minutes so we had to gut him.

“Sanctuary” was the only song on the album that really didn’t reach the last volunteer tell aspesh that part of the album. Other than that, the whole album is pleasant to listen to, with impeccable use of and an equally beautiful cover by Ashok (Chris Paizon).

KUCI also presents a great stock of country music, and is one of the few UC radio stations to do so. Colin Bell, a faculty member from the Graduate School of Administration, also has one of the most extensive collections of dixieland jazz and bluegrass records anywhere. Catch his show Tuesdays, from 4 to 7 p.m. In addition, Bob J. does a bluegrass show from 6 to 8 on Fridays. Bob is a member of the Blue Ridge Mountain Boys, a bluegrass group that has performed locally and across the nation. Hot damn and shesnit shrimp.

History of Patogah
by fred obraker

This summer, Patogah, a Native American summer camp that operates from eight to midnight every Friday and Saturday, has no cover charge, and features live entertainment. This is of course, Patogah (a Persian word meaning gathering place) was founded by ASCUI and Doce Music, a group of students and faculty, and will be held in the School of Music's Los Angeles area for two hours every day at noon. All participants must be over 21 and sign-up in advance in the Student Activity Office. Participants are limited to 55. The party is free and crackers and tequila are served. A group of 150 students, faculty and staff of UCI have participated in these parties.

Last Friday and Saturday night, a group called ZENKIDIK performed. Beckham is a student at UCI and his performance was sound. It was a solo effort, mostly dedicated to himself by playing the guitar and banjo, singing such songs as "Make A Man," "One Tin Soldier," and "The 12th Of Never." The second half of the bill, ZENKIDIK, was primitive. As the sun set slowly, the flashlight beam from Schmidt said, it was an unusual performance.

Most of that atmosphere at Patogah was put together by the hard work of a group of members of last year's concert committee. Patogah was once a point the coffee was called "Mrs. Olson's Camp House." After the famed television commercial lady of the same name, various meetings were made and the actress was to be flown out and the camp opened. It was a flop, but through the place finally opened.

Patogah caters all the after-movie crowd, plus many people from off-campus. Despite reports that there are not enough groups at Patogah report that business is thriving.

Dr. Ramsey and Mike Turnbull started their "Patogah Olympics," which will be closed Friday night (they will be closed Friday).

"The penalty for failure to prosecute a vigorous program of research will be paid by those yet unborn.

Don't wait to prosecute such research... if we fail to prosecute the promising..."

We should not be alone in such disease prevention... no new approaches to mental disorder... we have not the means to bring the ravages of our own mistakes to bear... even early adequate recog- nition... in which our changing environment may threaten humanity.

New Mesa Court Coffee House

There's a new place to go on the Irvine campus. It's the Mesa Court Coffee House. The Coffee House opened Feb. 11, and as a special promotion, is free 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, Monday through Sunday, night and for the remainder of the academic year. The people at the coffee house will present several events in a variety of live entertainment during the first week with one of the large cougar, live performances will be held in the club each night the cougar is free.

The Coffee House committee picked the name of anyone interested in performing at the Coffee House. If you sing, play instrument, or are entertaining in any other way, you can contact Paul O'Donnell 6879. Also, more bodies are needed to help run the program. If you are interested, please contact Paul or come to the Coffee House committee meetings Mondays at 7:30 in the small. case.

COMP. CULT. MGER OPPOSED

"We, the Undergraduate Association of Comparative Culture, do not support and will not consider the proposed merger of Comparative Culture with the School of Humanities. Being fully cognizant of the problems of the students of Comparative Culture and the University, in our attempts to reconcile certain traditional educational goals with a future of shrinking resources, we nonetheless are certain that merger of Comparative and Humanities is neither better nor as detrimental as the effects of the Program in Comparative Culture.

Our reasons are as follows:

1. Loss of total autonomy by Comparative Culture would effectively place in the hands of the University administration control over the Program. The traditional disciplines of Humanities have been and will continue to be downgraded and marginalized in the minority programs. It is foolish to expect the administrative structure of Humanities to be sensitive to the Program in Comparative Culture, which has specialized needs. The Program in Comparative Culture is the only academic unit on the campus using inter-disciplinary methods in the area of science, culture, and comparative study of the humanities.

To submerge Comparative Culture into the traditional structure of the College of Humanities, you will have the effect of diluting this tightly organized and viable academic unit into a system of limited pedagogical values. (2) Comparative Culture is the only unit on this campus that is initiating academic study of the human condition in its own right. Comparative Culture's autonomy would quickly stop this type of academic investigation. (3) The proposed merger of Humanities and Comparative Culture is to the advantage of the students of Comparative Culture share with their faculty.

The Undergraduate Association of Comparative Culture in its position to the Senate that it opposes the proposed merger of Humanities and Comparative Culture. We, the Undergraduate Association of Comparative Culture, have discussed this matter with the Administration and have reached the decision that the proposed merger is not in the best interest of the students of Comparative Culture and represents the position of the Undergraduate Association.

EXPERIMENT IN COUNSELING

Lorraine O'Donnell of Newport Beach, placement adviser at UC Irvine, is the recipient of the $3,000 Vera Christie has endowed fund of the Western College Placement Association for an experimental project in counseling on career.

The project, aimed at expanding student knowledge of career research for the utilization of business and industry recruiters as career counselors, and student and faculty members. The recruiters, who normally cutoff by filling job openings, will be asked to participate in career seminars and to offer individual counseling to students in major and in general of specific career fields.

"As far as the job hunt, the volunteer in developing the student knowledge in this important area," Mrs. O'Donnell has the opportunity. Butmen Battle Alumni

Coach Gary Adams and his UCI basketball team opened the 1973 basketball season Saturday at 12:30 p.m. when they hosted the UCI Alumni. Then on Tuesday at 2:30 p.m. against the Anteaters with a home contest against always rugged Cal State Fullerton.

The Anteaters will have sixteen lettermen back from last year's squad that posted an impressive 23-13 loss record and a third straight appearance in the Far West League.

The returning lettermen are Bob Balch, Tom Donougher, Gary Wheelock (10-4), Jerry Maras (2-4), Tom Dodd (7-6), Steve Fox (2-5), Jon Stupy (30), Don Hansen (250), Rod Spence (240), Clark Schenz (355), Dave Lyons (315), Rich Molina (310), John Baker, Jack Cleveland. Carl Peterelli and Cimino.

Overall, the Anteaters play a rugged 48 game schedule. So far, big basketball attractions include games with USC (defending National Champions), Arizona State (No. 2 in the nation), UCLA, San Diego State, Long Beach State, UC Berkeley, Loyola and an exhibition game with California State University at Fullerton.

At least the first Anteater game of the season is a game with UCI alumni. The team will be hoping to build on last year's standing and continue their improvement.

According to Adams, the biggest question mark on defense is finding a second baseman. On offense, it will be replacing Dan Coronado and his 330 batting average. Adams pointed out that the California best backfield UCI has ever fielded. If our players can get healthy it will be the best pitching staff we have ever had. We have a good combination of veterans and youth, and that is the key ingredients for a big year.

A 17-year old youngster was touring the UCI campus. People turned around and asked if he was an unusual sight, but no, he was a visitor to Irvine campus. The young man was 6'3", and played basketball as a freshman for the men's basketball team at Irvine.

With the new season under way, the young man noticed a young woman walking across the lawn, he caught up with her with a few giant strides. When he reached the woman, he explained what he was doing on campus, and then asked if the brother would recommend Irvine to a black basketball player. Without hesitating, the brother replied "Yes!"

Almost every black student on campus shares the brother's feeling. Irvine has never been an unusual sight at the school and in the community around the country were interested in -- including Irvine. He was visiting the campus as a guest of Coach Tim Tift. The young man noticed a woman walking across the lawn, he caught up with her with a few giant strides. When he reached the woman, he explained what he was doing on campus, and then asked if the brother would recommend Irvine to a black basketball player. Without hesitating, the brother replied "Yes!"

In a recent interview with Irvine's Chronicle, the brother explained that Irvine is a school that is looking for young black students and in the future, the campus will be the place for them.

Coach Tim Tift finds the black students' attitudes about basketball a major reason why Irvine has had only six black basketball players in seven years.

I interviewed some students on campus, both black and white, to find out the reasons for the anomaly on UC and UCI basketball. Pam Frazier, a black student, says, "I would not recommend a brother to come to Irvine to play basketball. The type of system Tift runs. His brothers. In Irvine he doesn't really give them a chance.

His brother has a record with Pam that brothers aren't given an equal chance at Irvine. In and add, "That's the goal, not allowed to shoot. Every basketball player, black and white, wants to score points.

Another black student says, "Playing basketball at Irvine, almost means a brother's chance at making it. A record interested in a cat who only scored five and six points as a game at a small college like Irvine.

The same student has given the situation a lot of thought, and added, "I wouldn't recommend anyone to come to Irvine, especially a black person. Irvine is not the place for you.

Phil Mathews has found himself in a peculiar position. He played for Coach Frazier, a two years, and now as an assistant coach, his job is mainly to recruit black players. "When I recruit black players, I sit down and talk about their experiences in the past and class commented," he added.

Many black students believe that Coach Tift is not sufficiently trying to court black students, and he is in the school class commented. "It's just not possible," Tiff told us. "We help him recruit black players at his school," said the relay player, "because he wants to play good disciplined basketball and want to get a good education, come to Irvine. But if you want to play, and run a race, you have to be able to run." And Irvine is not the place for you.

Among the players, John Paton, a 6'6" forward for the class "Black Athlete in Society," as an example of his willingness to talk to black students about his basketball program. He is the type of student who makes his students feel welcome in his class. He has a neat, tidy and clean appearance. He is a hardworking student who is a good basketball player, just like the Boosters Club helps money. He think that Tiff can spend hours with the Boosters, he can spend a little time with us.

I think a black student in Irvine will have a good chance to play, and his optimism will not be wasted, as the player said. In fact, he said, "I recommend to black student to come to Irvine. He and and "The best of luck, I can tell you."..."
Don Tells What It’s Like To Be An ANTEATER

by don newton

Editor’s note: Many people have asked me this week, what is Don Newton? So the New U Sports staff has asked him and asked him to tell us in his own words, what it was like being an Anteater. Before coming to UCI, Don was twice chosen to the All-Coast Conference during his senior year of high school. He was also once honored as the Los Angeles Daily News “Player of the Year.” Newton played one-year of varsity basketball at Pepperdine University before coming to Irvine.

I don’t consider to be my basketball career over ever since knowing that it should really just be the beginning. It makes me weak and a little dizzy when I think of the years, the many years that I’ve worked so hard to be the best. I’ve worked so long and so very hard. I remember the time when I use to break into Jordan Flight’s old bird infested gym on Sunday just so I wouldn’t miss a day of playing. I’d play hour after hour, day after day, week after week, training. On weekends I’d hurry home from school (Warkham and Millikan) so that I could play with the high school players that were to come before their classes ended. Usually the classes were over by 4:00 or 5:00. My sister and I would come and bring me a thermos of milk and I’d sit on the steps of the gym, eating and dreaming. By this time I was always closed and occupied so I’d shoot alone in the dark light that was coming from the stars and the moon.

I do up into stars and see a brilliant future for me in basketball. The age of 10, I was better than most. In fact, I’m still outstanding. In those days, I thought a man was judged by his ability and nothing else.

But I’ve grown up now, and I know that one’s doesn’t compare basketball, or anything for that matter. I’ve sacrificed my mind and body, but now these people want my soul. But it’s still a long road coming to Irvine.

Upon entering Irvine for the first time, I viewed my situation as lucky. I saw it as being a second chance, a chance to do all the marvelous things that I know my body wanted to do. I used my first chance at Pepperdine where I won the hearts of fans, the players, the assistant coaches. More than that, I looked for the coach so I packed and left. But I put all of that behind me. For now I was in a new environment, an environment clean and clear. The coaches here told me that I’d be accepted and respected for just being MYSELF. They said I was “a super guy.”

Boy! I was impressed! He praised my ability to articulate my thoughts, and I also praised as an influential leader on and off the court. Even though I was in the shadow of great players there I was quoted by the New U saying “Newton is the key to our success this season.”

For some reason this extraordinary praise seemed unreal. Even now I never reached the ears of anyone outside of Irvine.

Well, as the season neared, subtle contradictions began to reveal themselves. Little by little the monotone in his dialect gave me more and more. Soon nothing he said made sense. So frightened was I by his inability to communicate with me that he became “deaf.” Some total absolute silence instated itself. This was the kind of silence that produces anxiety so thick it suffocates rationalization that ordinarily allows a person to form and maintain a reasonable opinion. This kind of silence was a very frightening and very sobering experience.

Now playing for UCI was a bore, as less than living in a convalescent home. My talents were just being wasted in an unusually antiquated offense that featured the “slow break.” I was not doing anything that required skill or talent. The most skillful or exciting thing I could do was to steal a pass and make an unopposed layin. At this stage I couldn’t feel any shooting rhythm, my deceptive dribbling ability, and even my jumping ability slowly leaked away from me. If I had played for UCI any longer, I’d be a typical Anteater, SORRY, that’s not for me. I chose not to be anything typical. For I’m just too gifted, and besides I have too much respect for the game to allow myself to be imprisoned this way. This wasn’t basketball— chess maybe, but not basketball.

I made a decision. The decision was made in the midst of grief so stifling that my sanity was actually at stake. After putting all these horrible things on my mind and my confidence, he went further to say that I should think of my future, of the world I would be facing. But I didn’t have a feeling, God will want to know why.

ANTEATERS Win at Chapman

Harlan Peet’s torrid scoring and the clutch shooting and rebounding of Richard Clark and Rich Mraule helped the UCI men’s basketball team break their losing streak and register a hard-fought 82-72 victory over Chapman College Tuesday night in Orange. The win, the third in the road this season for the Anteaters, pushed their season record to 14-10 with four games remaining.

The Anteaters, who played without the services of starters, Jerry Murs harassed heelf and Scott Magnuson (sprained new) were able to take the lead and hold it despite the presence of Chapman squad — who haven’t beaten UCI in three years. Peet, playing his best ballgame of the year, drilled 10 of 27 from the floor, and was three of nine from the line to score 26 points, the top offensive barrage of the year for an Anteater. Clark, playing the role of the center and starting in the place of Magnuson, also responded with his top game of the year as he hauled down 14 rebounds and scored ten points, eight in the second half. The Anteaters continued a pick and roll offense inserted into the Irvine lineup, as he hit for eight points, all during UCI’s second half comeback.

Dave Baker, UCI’s leading scorer with a 16 point per game average, was harassed all night but still responded with twenty points, in addition to being saddled with four personal fouls and went out about eight minutes of the second half.

The Anteaters will now have a one week respite before tackling the nation’s 16th ranked small college team, UC Riverside, next Tuesday in Riverside.

A win over Riverside could put Irvine right back into the thick of playoff consideration. Riverside is currently in second place in the CCAA and sports a 15 and 4 loss record.

All-Cal Handball at UCI Tomorrow

Defending champ and host UC Irvine will battle in a strong UC Berkeley team for team titles of the Annual All-Cal Handball Tournament this weekend when the Anteaters host the Sixth Annual All-Cal Handball Tournament.
