

Subject Line: Why Neil Strauss Is Wrong

Hey,

Neil Strauss is wrong.

Dead Wrong.

I know I'm trampling on "sacred ground" here, but I think you will agree with me when you hear why I say this. (Incidentally, I'm still a big fan of Neil, but nobody is perfect and he is simply wrong).

Here's the scoop:

Neil is all about "pick up" lines and routines. He is all about openers and fancy gimmicks like top hats and magic tricks.

That's not my Style. No pun intended ;)

I believe that you need to learn a more natural approach. I believe that all those routines and tactics make you think too much.

They make you overanalyze. They make you stress. They make you anxious.

And anxious is NOT confident. Anxious is not DGAF.

How are you supposed to be relaxed and laid back when you have to memorize a million different things?

See what I mean?

Again, nothing personal against Neil.

But someone's got to stand and tell it like it is.

And in my Sexual Inception product I spend a lot of time exposing all the myths that are keeping you from getting laid.

P.S. There is another reason I disagree with Neil about the game. But, it's kind of a controversial reason, and I would rather not explain it publicly (I'm already going to get enough "back lash" from this email!)

I explain it in detail in my Sexual Inception product at:
