

FROM: Your Future Success

SUBJECT: I want you to have me

Hey, this is your future success here.

I know that sounds a bit weird, but I just got sent some really unique info from a guy named Ian Stanley that I wanted to share with you...I think it'll help you and I meet sooner than you think...

...here it is...

There's ultimately two things that dictate your level of success.

When I say "success" it doesn't have to be monetary or career related. YOUR definition of success is all that matters.

The first thing is delayed gratification.

How long are you willing to wait to get what you want? Are you willing to be bad until you're good? Are you willing to be good until you become a master? Are you ok with failure?

The second is your ability to intervene with yourself before you self-sabotage.

This issue is a lot more complex. The depth at which this can affect you is far beyond what you can even imagine.

Self-sabotage can be blatant...like it was in my past.

It's partying hard the night before a big tennis match. It's missing a deadline because you're afraid of success. Or worst of all...it's cheating on someone you love because you're afraid of finally having everything you want.

When you're "less aware" the self-sabotage is easier to see from the outside.

As you raise your awareness the self-sabotage becomes insidious. It's clever. It's cunning.

It's starting an argument with your girlfriend because you just had the most profitable month of your life. It's deciding to try a new type of pizza the night before you have to film important videos...even though you have extreme food allergies and know it'll probably make you feel like shit the next day. (This is how advanced my ego has gotten. It seeks out foods that disrupt my Crohn's disease when things are going "too well.")

See, we have a threshold on how good we think we're allowed to feel.

As we reach that threshold (sometimes referred to as an upper limit) we find ways to bring ourselves back down to baseline. Even though we want to feel good all the time.

Ultimately it comes down one thing...

We don't get what we deserve in life. We get what we believe we deserve.

That's why the "four core issues matrix" that I learned from Brent is the only thing I've found to create lasting change.

Right now there is a gap between where you are...and where you want to be.

In that gap can only be four things. These are the four core issues. It could be all four. It could be three of four. Or it could be just one.

Typically it's the "linchpin issue." That's your W.*

Once you understand that word and how it's affecting your life, you can finally break through your blocks and clear them permanently.

I know it's a bold claim. I wouldn't believe it for a second if I hadn't personally had it happen to me.

So if any of that sounds interesting to you, then I want to invite you to come spend three days in Austin, TX with Brent and I for our LionHeart Workshop. I want you to know what you don't know.

The first one was AMAZING. Way beyond what I ever imagined. The results people got from it were unreal.

Here's the thing...I don't want to give you more information or tactics. I don't want to bring you into a room so you can "add value" to those around you. I want you to show up and work on yourself. And I want you to leave with a real way to work with yourself.

This isn't a "pump you up and dump you out" motivational seminar. This isn't about getting fired up so you can go home and not follow through...only to leave you back in your old life as a guiltier version of yourself.

If there's only one thing I can promise you...it's that this experience will be different from anything you've done before.

If you're ready to commit to three full days of intense work then hit reply to this email and let me know. We'll set up a time to talk on the phone.

Or if you want to take the leap right now then check out the story on the page below and reserve your spot right away. It's a long, vulnerable story but I think you'll really like it.
