Personal Statement

I am thrilled to run for the President-Elect position for ACHE of Southern California. As a member of ACHE for over 20 years, and board member across multiple chapters; I bring a balanced perspective of ACHE activities and strategies from across the nation. Locally, I have been involved with ACHE of Southern California since 2020 when I moved to CA. Healthcare leadership is facing unprecedented challenges - financially and politically. As a senior healthcare leader and chief operating officer for the only public safety net hospital in San Bernardino County; I see these challenges firsthand. To meet these challenges, leaders will need to work and think differently to care for our patients and community - relying on advocacy, strategic collaboration, and disciplined operations. Through ACHE of SoCal's Board, I hope to bring the perspective of a safety net hospital operations executive and healthcare strategist to the executive committee.

Personal Statement

I am running for the President-Elect position of the ACHE Southern California Chapter because I am deeply passionate about healthcare leadership and believe that effective leadership and collaboration is crucial for advancing the healthcare industry. Throughout my career, I have gained extensive experience in healthcare administration both as a practitioner and academic where I served in several healthcare organizations and educational institutions collaborating nationally and globally as a thought leader, consultant and educator on health care strategy, leadership development, community investment, and public health policy. I possess strong organizational and communication skills and have a proven track record of successfully leading teams and managing complex projects, which would be invaluable in driving the initiatives and goals of the ACHE chapter. I am dedicated to fostering a supportive and inclusive environment where all members can thrive and contribute their unique perspectives.

Personal Statement

I am currently the Vice Chair of Academic Affairs and an active member of ACHE. I would like to be Chair, Academic Affairs, as I would like to provide support to increase ACHE of SoCal's visibility and engagement to institutions of higher education and their students.

I am currently working as Professor and Chair of Health Care Administration Department at California State University Long Beach. I have been working at CSULB for more 13 years after completing my doctorate degree in Public Administration from USC Sol Price School of Public Policy. Prior working there, I was a physician and medical director at community clinic in Indonesia for about 8 years.

Tricia Gray, MBA, MHA, FACHE, CPHQ

Associate Administrator

Desert Regional Medical Center

Personal Statement

I wish to run for the position of Chair, At Large/Executive Engagement because I want to be a part of the change I desire to see in healthcare. I want to drive efforts that reimagine how healthcare is delivered. As a black woman who grew up in a rural community in Southern Louisiana, health literacy was lacking in our communities. More than that, there was not a lot of consideration for how healthcare could better integrate in the community. But I believe healthcare starts outside the hospital; it starts in the community. I can contribute a strong sense of passion for healthcare. And, not just for our existing model, but a vision for how we can grow and advance as an industry. I am open minded and seek to engage other creative minds in the journey to reinvent care delivery, both in the care settings and in the community. As a candidate, I will utilize a systems thinking approach to establish a learning organization that seeks to challenge status quo and enlist the ideas of others.

The most significant issue facing the healthcare industry is access to affordable, quality care. I believe we can change how we care for our communities by being more visible and accessible healthcare leaders. We have to serve as advocates for the change we want to see. We have to continue to grow and empower our talent pool as they serve as healthcare ambassadors in their own communities.

Personal Statement

I am eager to contribute in meaningful ways, particularly in academics and executive engagement at large. By running for the position, I will have the opportunity to showcase my abilities and share them in an organization, whose prime mission is to shape and support future healthcare leaders. Additionally, I want to build stronger relationships with healthcare leaders who have similar interests and professional goals.

I have a wide range of professional backgrounds in healthcare leadership, academia, and community service (both locally and internationally). I have educated more than 700 nursing and health science students. I have established key relationships between low-income communities and academia to support more than 200 nursing students each year and allow them to learn the importance of public health. I have led more than five international medical missions. I have worked in surgery and now manage the clinical operation of a 900-bed hospital. This is a unique qualification and experience that I feel that many members of this organization will benefit from. I started in surgery, completed my DNP with a focus on population and health, and leadership, and now managing the clinical operation of a tertiary/trauma hospital (Med/Surg/Tele, ER, PACU, ICUs, ACUs, and others). I have a pulse of all areas in healthcare, including academia and public service. This makes me a well-rounded healthcare leader. I have a strong perspective of healthcare, where it is headed, and potentially what steps could be taken to improve it.

In my role as the current Chair of Communications for ACHE of Southern California, I seek the opportunity to re-run, enabling me to further push the limits of our internal and external brand growth, all while keeping a commitment to maintaining the continuity and alignment necessary for our chapter's branding objectives. I am passionate about effective communication and its role in advancing our chapter in Southern California. I believe that clear and strategic communication is crucial for our chapter's success in terms of membership advancement and growth.

This year, some of our successes include: 1) Revamping our quarterly newsletter after a hiatus, 2) strategic marketing plans built based on our social media data analysis, 3) development of a full sponsorship packet that has had a hand in amassing the most funds our chapter has ever raised for an annual conference, and many more. With my proven track record in developing comprehensive communication strategies, crafting compelling messages, and utilizing various channels and platforms, if re-elected, I will work alongside and build a robust communications committee that will enhance the organization's brand visibility, stakeholder engagement, and overall communication effectiveness. I bring collaborative leadership skills, and a high EQ (emotional intelligence), enabling me to work with diverse stakeholders and guide a dynamic communications team.

I am excited to run for the office of Chair of the Early Careerist Council for ACHE of Southern California. As the current Chair of the Student Council, I seek a seamless transition to the board to continue supporting student events while assisting those who have transitioned to the early careerist network. Doing so will support the incoming Chair of the Student Council, ensure continuity for graduating students, and further strengthen my bond with our participating Higher Education Network (HEN) schools. Throughout this year, I have worked tirelessly to promote events and keep students engaged, and I aim to continue making a meaningful impact on the younger members of our organization. Drawing confidence from a keen understanding of healthcare industry trends, a soon-to-be-completed MHA degree, and my experience managing small to large projects at the department and enterprise level,

I am excited to continue supporting the board while working closely with our early careerists.

My unique perspective lies in my dedication to championing diversity, equity, and inclusion professionally and personally. This commitment will significantly contribute to the organization's growth by attracting individuals who feel that ACHE SoCal has a place for them and that their voices are heard. I am enthusiastic about exploring avenues to enhance our programs and ensure our members find value in being an integral part of our community! Discussing the most significant issues and potential strategies in the healthcare industry is crucial to identifying and implementing effective solutions. The most significant issue facing the healthcare industry today is access to care. We can work together as an organization to address this issue by creating educational resources, hosting events, providing resources, and partnering with other organizations to discuss the challenges healthcare organizations, leaders, and individuals face with healthcare access. This aligns with ACHE's vision to advance health by leading through the lens of equity.

Personal Statement

ACHE of Southern California has paved a way for my professional and personal growth. From being the Vice-Chair of ACHE SoCal's Student Council in 2022 to transitioning to the Vice Chair of Early Careerist Council in 2023, I have been exposed to the necessary resources that I need as an early careerist. Because of this, I would love to give back and support early careerists as they dive into their healthcare journey.

As Chair, I would foster an environment where early careerists feel welcomed and provide opportunities where they can learn and grow - whether it be through networking events to meet fellow early careerists or educational events that will contribute to their professional and personal development. I am a firm believer that we all learn through our experiences and this is something that I would like to share with our early careerists.

I believe a significant issue facing the healthcare industry at the moment is the shortage of healthcare workers. A number of factors contribute to the underlying issue of provider and nurse shortages, an aging population and burnout to name a few. It is important that healthcare organizations take the necessary steps from the beginning to ensure that they recruit and retain a talented workforce from the beginning.

As the current Chair of Executive Outreach, my desire for this office is to continue to leverage my Inland Empire (IE) relations and my over 20 years of experience in health care leadership and performance improvement, with emphasis in quality, patient safety and operational efficiency, to support the health care leaders in our chapter to address the challenges of social determinants of health and disparity in care. My proven track record in this role reflects that through strong collaboration we can drive improvements in the delivery of quality whole-person care. My experience in cultivating strong partnerships with clinicians, hospitals, ancillary providers, and over hundreds of community partners in both hospital operations and in the health plan environment provides another unique contribution and perspective on how collaboratively we can reach our desired common goals in optimal care and vibrant health. As the VP of Hospital and Ancillary Relations, I liaison with leaders in the IE, therefore this role is a complimentary extension of my work.

That is why I wish to run for the Chair position of the Los Angeles Programs Council.

If elected, I can contribute my expertise in healthcare delivery systems, public health, and community outreach to the role and organization. I can help develop innovative solutions, improve healthcare access, and address the health disparities facing the community.

The most significant issues facing the healthcare industry include rising costs, limited access to quality care, and health disparities affecting minority and low-income communities. To address these issues, I would focus on strategies such as investing in preventative care, expanding access to affordable healthcare, and increasing public health initiatives. As a minority veteran and healthcare worker, I can bring a unique perspective to the board. I understand the challenges and barriers that minority communities face in accessing healthcare and can help ensure that policies and decisions are inclusive and equitable.

Personal Statement

I would like to be the Los Angeles Programs Council chair because I firmly believe that success in the healthcare industry requires us to break down silos that exist, within our organizations and outside of our organizations. Networking, learning from one another and supporting the community is vital to improving health care in SoCal.

I was once asked "If you were a kitchen utensil, which would you be?" And my response rings true today, "I would be a spoon as I am known for bringing groups together to build community." In addition to that skill, I also have an appetite for fun and impeccable execution skills that when combined make great networking events.

The most significant issue facing healthcare today is the resistance to transitioning to new technologies and processes that meet the modern needs of our communities and staff. Again, I believe that building strong connections for healthcare leaders in a community can help spark innovation, support and change.

I would bring a unique perspective to the board as I am in a pediatric facility. Additionally, I am relatively new to the LA area and have extensive experience in local ACHE chapters across the country.

Personal Statement

I've been a part of the ACHE community for 26 years. This past year, serving as Chair and Co-Chair of the Sponsorship Committee, I've been re-invigorated and inspired by the great work ACHESC is doing. I want to be a part of the drive to improve and renew the energy around the leaders of the future. A significant issue facing the healthcare industry is accessibility and affordability. ACHESC is in a unique position to lead this transformation by engaging seasoned and novice leaders together to promote innovation, technology, research, and policy. While I am now working for the largest performance improvement company in the US, I bring a unique range of skills and experiences from academic to non-profit to investor-owned experience holding executive positions including CEO, COO, and CNO in various sizes of organizations as well as working in diverse communities. These experiences have informed my foundation. That foundation is ... possibility!
