
TURN OUT THE LIGHT: Introducing Alex Winters

“So hold me in your arms and tell me it’ll be alright. Just tell me what I want to hear cause I don’t want to fight. I could lay right next to you and be alone all night. So I say what’s the point and turn out the light.”

Alex Winters is the perfect combination of rocker chick meets girl next door. She is an accomplished Pop/Rock/Indie, Singer & Songwriter - based in Georgetown, Texas. Her songs come from “fly on the wall” like observation, behind the doors of everyday life. The lyrics hit home, because they’re largely made up of that primary human emotion: desire.

Alex reached out to me via e-mail and after having read her Twitter bio, I felt compelled to listen to her music. I thought to myself, ‘she is truly all about music, if her banner photo is any indication’. Additionally, she is a GoGirls Music girl - and well, that’s alright with me. Alex Winters will bring the passion to the party.

Her single Turn Out The Light, is a song that feels like Spring. It's sensual and relatable. Like the first moment the chill of Winter is released from your skin, as the rays of the sun coat your body.

In closing, the listener is in for a treat. Her music is a pleasant escape – an alternative-pop; with a rock core, softened by sweet, sultry vocals. I think we'll all be, tipping our hats at Alex in the future.

Alex Winters is currently working on an album and playing shows throughout the state of Texas. You can visit her page on Soundcloud and follow her on Twitter.

Photo Credit: Rudy Ximenez – RSX Studios

SHARE THIS:

Twitter 8

Facebook 33

Google

Digg

StumbleUpon

- Kenny Styles

Wow Sis, you've really put in a lot of work since last I visited. Keep keeping on!!!

