ANESTHESIOLOGY
NEW YORK, NY

December 2018
The Department of Anesthesiology at The Robert Larner, M.D. College of Medicine at The University of Vermont/University of Vermont Medical Center, in affiliation with the University of Vermont Medical Group, is seeking a Board certified or Board eligible Generalist Attending Anesthesiologist with an interest in supporting our teaching, research, clinical and administrative missions. This is a full-time clinical scholar pathway faculty position at the Assistant or Associate Professor level based at the University of Vermont Medical Center. Occasional work can be expected at our affiliate hospitals, CVMC and CVPH. Preferred candidates will have fellowship training in neuroanesthesiology, special consideration for regional and obstetrics will also be made.

University of Vermont Medical Center is a busy academic hospital with a Level-1 trauma center and is the only location for tertiary referrals for the catchment area of Vermont and northern upstate New York for all types of surgery. The department is an academic practice consisting of 44 full and part-time anesthesiologists, 23 nurse anesthetist/anesthesia assistants, a residency program, and a pain fellowship. Responsibilities include clinical care for all subspecialties of anesthesia including pediatrics, neurosurgery, and obstetrics.

Located in Burlington, The University of Vermont Larner College of Medicine and the University of Vermont Medical Center serve as Vermont’s only academic medical center, and provides tertiary care to patients from Vermont and northern NY. Burlington is a vibrant community located on the shores of Lake Champlain, between the Adirondack and Green Mountains. With year-round recreational opportunities, safe communities and excellent schools, this progressive community has been frequently cited as one of the most livable cities in the U.S. Additional information about the University of Vermont Medical Center and the Department of Anesthesiology can be obtained at: http://www.med.uvm.edu/anesthesiology.

The University is especially interested in candidates who can contribute to the diversity and excellence of the academic community through their research, teaching, and/or service. Applicants are requested to include in their cover letter information about how they will further this goal.

The University of Vermont is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer. All qualified applicants will receive consideration for employment without regard to race, color, religion, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity, national origin, disability, protected veteran status, or any other category legally protected by federal or state law. The University encourages applications from all individuals who will contribute to the diversity and excellence of the institution.

Qualified applicants should submit an application online at http://www.uvmjobs.com. For additional information, please contact Lydia Grondin, M.D., Director of Anesthesiology Faculty Recruitment, at Lydia.grondin@uvmhealth.org. All applications must be submitted online.

Tasting New York City on a Budget
Explore great, inexpensive eats in the city that never sleeps.

New York City is one of the most populous cities in the world, known as the cultural, financial and media capital, as well as an economic superpower. Thanks to New York City’s round-the-clock transportation, there is always something to see, somewhere to go and something to do in the city that never sleeps. You can also find great eats at any time and on any budget!

New York City is known in particular for its world-class restaurants such as Nobu, Smith & Wollensky and Red Rooster as well as their celebrity chefs. However, these eateries can take a chunk out of your wallet and your schedule. Here is a list of some of New York’s lesser known eateries that you may not find on a top-ten list but are still quality eats.

Dell’Anima
A fabulous Italian restaurant located in the West Village, Dell’Anima changes its menu daily to make the most of seasonal produce. Not to mention, the pasta is made fresh daily, making it even more delicious. For all the wine lovers, there is an extensive wine list that can also be enjoyed at the wine bar next door, owned by the same proprietor as Dell’Anima. This reasonably priced Manhattan eatery is definitely worth a visit.

Pietro Nolita
This lower Manhattan Italian restaurant is an Instagram lover’s dream with its distinct bubblegum pink interiors. The food is excellent and on the healthier side, with lighter pasta classics and traditional entrees with a modern twist. Pietro Nolita doesn’t take reservations so bear that in mind if you are planning to visit. A firm favorite with the fashion crowd, this restaurant offers a great value for your buck.

Chinese Tuxedo
This Chinatown restaurant is set in a former opera house and is elegantly designed with black leather banquettes, lush green foliage and chic marble tables. This is definitely a place to head to if you are in the mood for sharing some yummy Chinese food in one of New York’s most famous dining districts. The staff are friendly and the menu is kind on your wallet.

Gray’s Papaya
No trip to NYC is complete without a visit to one of its most iconic cheap eats. This 24-hour hot dog chain restaurant is famous for their high quality inexpensive hot dogs and non-alcoholic fruit drinks. Gray’s Papaya is a New York staple, and has been featured in movies and television shows from For Love of Money to Sex and the City and was featured in Anthony Bourdain’s No Reservations. Go for a late-night stroll around the city and find your way to Gray’s Papaya for two hot dogs with the works and a papaya drink.

Retirement planning is an essential but much under-appreciated part of life for any profession. For physicians, planning for retirement presents its own particular challenges, including the high rates of burnout and the high debt levels upon entering the profession.

The 2016 Survey of America’s Physicians: Practice Patterns and Perspectives conducted for The Physicians Foundation by Merritt Hawkins reported that 46.8% of physicians plan to accelerate their retirement plans in order to retire early. This is an increase in the number of physicians who reported that they planned to do so compared to the previous survey in 2014. At the same time, a greater number of physicians are continuing to practice beyond the traditional retirement age of 65.

This uncertainty about projected retirement age can make planning for retirement difficult. For a physician just out of medical school, thinking about possible burnout or future retirement isn’t at the top of the agenda; there are many competing demands for their salary following years of accruing student debt. However, successful planning that allows for much-needed flexibility requires physicians to start saving for their retirement as early as possible.

The Importance of Savings

Medscape’s 2017 Physician Compensation Report found that the average income for all physicians in the report has risen steadily since 2011. It states average income rose to $294,000 in 2017. With compensation packages of this kind, retirement planning should be straightforward.

However, the reality isn’t so simple. According to the AMA Insure, the average student loan debt a medical student graduated with in 2012 was $166,750. The Association of American Medical Colleges (AAMC) has found that 79% of medical school graduates carry $100,000 or more of education debt.

There are many competing demands on a physician’s salary, including malpractice insurance, buying a home and the cost of raising a family. Added to this, a physician typically doesn’t start achieving higher rates of income until well into mid-career. For those coming late to the profession, the limited time available for paying into a plan creates even more of a challenge.

Given the way pension saving works, a lack of investment into pension schemes and the loss of the potential compound interest during these early years of a career can create a serious hole in pension funding.

Options for Employed and Self employed

Increasing numbers of physicians are turning to employment rather than self-employment, as the options for pension planning and employer contributions are more readily available.

The Medscape Physician Compensation Report 2016 found that 66% of employed physicians had a retirement plan with employer match, compared to just 39% of self-employed physicians. Those benefitting from retirement plans without employer match was found to be 27% for employed physicians and 25% for self-employed physicians. The findings, while encouraging for the majority of employed physicians, highlight
Self-Employed Pension Planning

The pension plans available differ for employed and self-employed physicians as well as for physicians working in government facilities and for-profit healthcare facilities.

Self-employed physicians will first need to make the decision about whether they should choose a tax-deferred retirement plan or a tax-qualified pension plan. Plans such as a 401(k) are tax-deferred plans which enable self-employed physicians to defer up to $18,000 on a pre-tax basis. This rises to an allowance of $24,000 over the age of 50. After the age of 59½ qualified distributions are taxed as ordinary income.

The most common form of tax-qualified pension plans for self-employed physicians are defined benefit plans, such as the cash balance plan. These provide the option of a lifetime annuity, but via an individual account for each covered employee, complete with a specified lump sum. They offer a higher maximum contribution rate than a 401(k) plan; in 2017, a maximum contribution was $149,203 versus a 401(k)’s maximum contribution of $60,000. Contribution limits vary by age, but this type of plan need not necessarily be an alternative to a 401(k) plan; it is possible to own both plans for additional future security.

Employed Pension Planning

If employed by a facility or an organization, the physician will need to choose whether to use the pension savings plan offered by the employer or to seek an alternative. If the employer is offering to make contributions, this choice is an easy one; the physician will want to take advantage of this significant benefit and use the employer’s plan. This is likely to be:
- a 401(k) plan, a defined benefit plan that for-profit facilities offer;
- a 403(k) or 457(b) tax-deferred retirement plan offered by non-profit (government or non-governmental) organizations; or
- an Individual Retirement Account (IRA).

Each type of plan has its own characteristics, so it is important to seek expert independent advice to determine which option on the table is right for your retirement goals and whether the retirement plan your employer offers should be supplemented by additional arrangements in order to achieve those goals.

For those physicians choosing to pay into an employer’s plan, this doesn’t – and shouldn’t – preclude the possibility of making additional arrangements beyond the employer’s scheme; for example, making further savings contributions to tax-efficient investments in taxable accounts, or making further contributions into a private defined benefit plan.

It is important to seek expert and independent investment advice. However, by far the most important decision that a physician can make when planning their retirement savings is to start preparations as early as possible.

The Ohio State University is an Equal Opportunity Employer.
With the trend towards short-term employment on the rise, physicians have more choices to earn additional income. The old standards of working longer hours or growing one’s practice are giving way to the stronger desire for work-life balance. Physician burn-out has also created a desire for physicians to recharge their batteries with varied and intellectually challenging assignments. According to Medscape, engaging in additional work that differs from day-to-day activities has been reported to help fend off burn-out and increase overall professional satisfaction. Earning additional income is not always the primary reason to pursue part-time employment, but it is always helpful to make extra money without impacting your day job. To follow are 6 part-time opportunities available to an entrepreneurial physician.

Use Your Writing Skills
There is almost no limit to how much a physician can make as a successful writer. Physician authors of text books can earn up to a 15% royalty, depending on the number of sales. Technical writing can pay as much as $100 per hour. With the right job, talented physicians working solely as technical medical writers can earn as much, if not more than, physicians in clinical practice. Writing can also create opportunities in teaching, consulting and speaking, earning physicians with proven writing skills upwards of $500 per hour. Additionally, for those who are more passionate about writing, self-publishing a book can create a passive income stream, keeping more of the proceeds in their pocket. For inspiration, Tess Gerritsen, MD (author of the Rizzoli & Isles novels and subsequent TV show) is a successful fiction writer, earning seven figures annually.

Become a Supervisor for a Practice
There are many independent practices and retail clinics headed up by nurse practitioners or physician assistants that legally require a supervising doctor on staff. The work includes reviewing charts, attending meetings with the practitioner and being available to answer questions as they arise. Calls or emails can range from 10-15 per month according to Fitzgerald Health Education Associates, a test review course provider in North Andover, Massachusetts. Physicians can earn $10,000 to $15,000 per year as a supervisor, and the work can be done in their free time.

Provide Online Consultations
The virtual consultation has become a popular income stream for physicians. Companies like American Well and TelaDoc lease their software to doctors who are doing consultations from the comfort of their home to current and new patients. If state laws permit, online consultation is an easy way to earn extra income because there is no overhead of travel or office space and no need to perform procedures. Also, availability to patients across the country as opposed to just your state or local area, make the potential for growth unlimited. Physicians can even write short term prescriptions as needed and fax or send them directly to the patient’s local pharmacy. The average price of a 15-minute virtual consultation can range from about $15 to $50.

Become a Medical Expert
Work as a medical expert can range from reviewing cases to appearing in court as a witness for an attorney. Working behind the scenes reviewing cases can pay $100-$300 an hour and doesn’t require a court appearance, where the possibility of grueling cross-examinations can be unnerving. This can involve evaluating whether a claim has merit or writing reports that are used to adjust or settle cases. Appearing in court as an expert witness requires a strong constitution and an established area of expertise. Steve Babitsky of SEAK Inc., an expert witness training company in Falmouth Massachusetts, advises physicians interested in pursuing this path to create a website and develop a niche. Another route would be to work directly for a service that supplies expert witnesses, like SEAK or TASA Group.

Bear in mind that expert witness work is part-time work in the strictest sense to maintain the physician’s legitimacy as an expert. As a result, most lawyers prefer employing a medical expert with legal work limited to 3%-5% of their overall income. Earnings can average $2,000 to $5,000 per case.

Work for a Nursing Home
Physicians caring for nursing home patients usually work part-time to remain focused on quality of care. Dealing with elderly and infirm patients requires deep compassion and infinite patience, which can be difficult for a doctor in a full-time position with several facilities to visit. Reuben Tovar, MD, a medical director for 2 nursing home facilities in Austin TX, advises physicians to consider serving as a medical director for these facilities. The job of medical director for a nursing home averages $70,000-$80,000 per year and requires at least 20 hours of work per month, according to Simply Hired. This does not include an additional 10 hours per month seeing patients in the facility, which can be done in one day. Medical directors must be empathetic, reliable and specialize in older patients.

The ability to easily interface with staff and family members is also a prerequisite for a good medical director. Physicians who want to pursue the medical director-route can attend classes approved by the American Medical Directors Association (AMDA) to obtain certification.

Make House Calls
The idea sounds old-fashioned and conjures the image of the bespectacled town physician, black bag in hand, calling on his or her local bedridden patients. However, working for a company or as a freelancer can be a great job for a physician who is not interested in running a brick-and-mortar private practice, or for a new resident or a semi-retired physician winding down his or her private practice. More insurers are nudging physicians toward home visits to reduce hospital admissions. Physicians can earn up to $70 per visit through companies like Doctors Making Housecalls or Inn House Doctor, and almost twice as much freelancing. Making house calls is ideal for physicians with means to get around quickly and easily and with patients nearby.

Once you decide to become a member of the gig economy, you’ll need to visit sites like Freelance MD to investigate what is available in your area. Lastly, keep an open mind - you may determine you’ve found your true calling and decide to turn your new gig into full-time career.
