

Court Order Dissolved; Moratorium Agreed

BY NANCY TOLBERT

The temporary court order restraining civil rights demonstrators from picketing the Sheraton-Palace Hotel was dissolved yesterday by San Francisco Superior Court Judge Joseph Karesh.

Karesh ruled the demonstrators had not been properly served with the order.

The Sheraton-Palace obtained the restraining order Saturday to prevent demonstrators from "disrupting business," but the pickets continued and 123 were arrested Sunday night for violating the order.

About 60 University students, including ASUC Men's Co-op Representative Joe Hacker, were among those arrested.

The demonstrators and the Sheraton-Palace have reached a "no picket-no court order" agreement which will last until Friday. Talks are scheduled to begin tomorrow.

If terms on hiring practices cannot be reached by Friday, the demonstrators say they will picket and the Sheraton-Palace says it will get another court restraining order.

The restraining order at first prevented loud demonstrations inside the hotel and was later amended to allow only nine pickets outside the hotel.

The students arrested Sunday night and early yesterday morning were arraigned yesterday before San Francisco Superior Court Judge Joseph Kennedy. They did not enter a plea, stating they would fight their arrest on constitutional grounds.

"Limiting the number of pickets is limiting the right of free speech and assembly and the right of peaceful protest," Hacker said. "It violates the First and Fourteenth amendments of the U.S. Constitution."

The demonstrations were called by the Ad Hoc Committee to End Discrimination when negotiations with the Sheraton-Palace broke down. The Committee charges there are only 31 Negroes out of 550 employees.

The demands made by the Committee, similar to those made by the Congress of Racial Equality in its dispute with Lucky Markets, call for recruitment programs that would attract minority groups.

The Sheraton-Palace management has stated that it "does not and will not tolerate discrimination in hiring." "We will not yield to this kind of group pressure," hotel manager Morgan Smith said.

Tonight's Senate Action

A constitutional amendment which would allow student referendum on financial matters will be presented at tonight's ASUC Senate meeting.

As it is now students can change Senate action by presenting a petition and voting in a referendum, on anything except matters affecting the budget.

An attempt last week to change Senate action on the sale of Graphic Arts was declared unconstitutional because the action involved the budget.

The author of the amendment is representative-at-large Jerry Beckman. He cited a Daily Californian editorial which pointed out "very few substantial issues do not involve the budget."

"Students are all contributors to the ASUC treasury and are entitled to the right to express opinions (concerning the budget)," Beckman said.

Rep-at-large Mike Gold will introduce a motion which would have ASUC President Mel Levine present a report concerning minimum standards of dress and conduct in the Student Union.

Gold said, "It is not pleasant to walk into the Heller lounge and see people in various states of undress. People should have shoes on, and couples should avoid necking on the couches." "That's ridiculous!" Levine said upon first hearing of the motion. "People can dress however they please as long as they stay within the law."

In other Senate action Operations Committee will report on the Student Initiative proposal. The proposal suggests that students be allowed to directly initiate ASUC action without having to go through the Senate.

Operations Committee chairman Mike Gold said the committee unanimously voted not to recommend the motion for passage. Gold said if the measure passes people could "stop the representative body from discussing an issue in the hope of putting something over on a generally uninformed electorate."

The meeting will be held at 7 p.m. in 406-408 Student Union.

Unruh Pleads for Calm Dissent; Brown Presents 'State of State'

BY JERRY RANKIN

SACRAMENTO (AP)—A top Democrat's hope that "we can agree to disagree on a calm basis this year" greeted the legislature Monday as it resumed a perplexing election-year session.

The advocate of calmness was Assembly Speaker Jesse M. Unruh, who spoke to the lower house session which heard Gov. Brown's "state-of-the-state" message notable for its paradoxes.

Unruh commented, "I hope we can make our differences ideological differences, and that we remember we have responsibilities to the voters."

The Los Angeles Democrat added, "I will offer all I can to deal with problems before they become major disagreements. Let's try to talk about problems before they grow to the point where they can't be talked about."

The key problems confronting the legislature are education, tidelands oil revenues, taxes, proposed new state agencies and $760 million in proposed 1964 bond issues.

Lawmakers, who returned from a 20-day recess, must adjourn the budget session by March 29, but a special session agenda of more than four items has no time limit.

Brown's first-ever economic message detailed the problems that led him to submit a record $3.66 billion budget for fiscal 1964-65, but added that things are better than ever in the nation's most populous state.

There is more money, more employment, more construction—and more poverty—than ever before, the governor reported in an 80-page booklet.

Even though California's 1963 economic performance "once again broke all record we cannot be satisfied," Brown warned. "In the midst of this general prosperity, we are faced with an ever-sharpening economic paradox."

• More and more Californians are cloaked in poverty even as their fellow citizens' incomes rise. While the average family of four takes in $8,300, at least one million persons in families of four or better must do with less than (Continued on page 5)

Recent Education Issues; Max Rafferty Speaks Here

MAX RAFFERTY
Pauley Ballroom Speech

State Superintendent of Education Max Rafferty will speak at 4 p.m. today in West Pauley Ballroom on "Real Issues in California Education."

Rafferty, with 22 years experience as a teacher and administrator, has strongly attacked the progressive method of teaching and urges a return to the fundamental three R's combined with discipline, competition and a minimum of extra curricular activities.

In the heated controversy over the Dictionary of American Slang, Rafferty advocated its removal while the Board of Education believed it should be left to the discretion of local supervisors.

Rafferty has been concerned with what he calls the "sagging patriotism" of California youth. He has recommended that retired military officers be hired as instructors in the state's new Youth Conservation Program.

Another of his recommendations to stimulate patriotism was to hang portraits of great American presidents on classroom walls.

"You have done your best to produce a race of barely literate savages," is one of many statements attributed to Rafferty which have aroused much opposition and controversy with the governor and the State Board of Education.

"What They Are Doing to Your Children" and "Suffer Little Children" are the titles of Rafferty's latest books on education. In addition, Rafferty has written several widely used text books and contributed articles to professional journals.

Rafferty's speech will be sponsored by the Student Forum and moderated by Theodore Reller, Dean of the School of Education.

Deans Ignore Pelly Parody?

BY K. A. BERLANDT

The Pelican's "South Side Story" by Bob Wieder was ranked "the most significant comment of our time," "damn funny," "not very funny," and "poor." But the most popular reaction was "I haven't read it yet."

Dick Corten, Pelican art director and advisor, and sometime writer, spoke for the article: "It's the most significant comment of our time on the sociological relationship of the fraternities and of the dormitories not only on the Berkeley campus, but throughout the civilized world, excepting Antarctica and parts of Africa."

"South Side Story," the Pelican's parody of Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story," depicts

"gang warfare" between Greeks and Dormies and concludes with a complete takeover by the GDI's (Independents).

"We feel," Corten continued, "that this is illustrative of the entire trend of university and college life today, as demonstrated in both institutions (fraternities and dormitories)."

"In other words," he said, "Beards are in; sweat socks are out."

"I took it as a total joke," said Jim Olsen of Aetacia, "with no real meaning, whatsoever; a total RF."

University Vice President Harry Wellman, ASUC Executive Director Forrest Tregea; Colin

Wing, president of Griffiths Hall; Dean Peter S. Van Hauten; and Dean of Students Katherine Towle all said they had not yet read the article.

Alex Sherriffs, vice-chancellor in charge of student affairs, said the article was "not very funny, sort of a poor imitation of Mad Magazine."

"In the first place the story had very little to offer in the way of humor or good taste," Louis C. Rice, assistant dean of students, said; "and in the second place it offered it very poorly."

But the members of Theta Xi, according to their social chairman Dick Rasmussen, "thought it was funny, damn funny. One older (Continued on page 5)

A Revolution At I-House—In Elevators

International House was the scene of a revolt this weekend—an elevator revolt.

The elevator system is old. Once started on the trip up, the elevator will continue to the eighth floor before coming down. Students entering on the seventh floor must go up unless they push the emergency button which breaks the circuit and lets them go down.

The business office discontinued elevator service to the seventh floor and the trouble began.

Seventh floorites didn't like to walk from the sixth floor, so they plotted a revolt. One student suggested withholding rent payments, another made signs. But the service was turned on before any real trouble could start.

A representative from the I-House business office said that the shut-down was simply a lesson in manners. The seventh floor residents were holding the elevator on the seventh floor, and eighth floor students complained. The business office decided to temporarily cut off elevator service to the seventh floor, the spokesman said.

The seventh floor learned that what goes down must go up—first.

English Course Improves Students' Essays

Fourteen years ago the Academic Senate decided clear, concise and logical writing was so essential to the student that it initiated The Prose Improvement Program.

The program still exists, but very few people are able to take advantage of it. The committee in charge of the program asks any participating department "to choose a single course in which students will write a minimum of three papers of about 800 words on specific topics drawn from the subject matter of the course."

Teaching assistants for the course enroll in English 142D, a class to teach them to develop "clear, logical and effective" writing in students. The committee offers to pay one-half the TA's salary for one semester in order to allow the department to lighten the TA's teaching load.

Only five TAs are currently taking English 142D, two from the school of business administration and three from the sociology department.

Who do so few departments take advantage of the program?

"Many departments don't feel the need for prose writing for undergraduates," according to Josephine Miles, English professor and one of the original initiators of the program. "Also, some of the departments don't have the manpower to release to the program."

"In a limited way as a pilot program it is very important," Miss Miles said. "We've gotten inquiries about it from all parts of the country."

According to Miss Miles, the program attempts to develop in students, through TAs, the ability to write good essays and answers to essay questions. "Essentially, the student should analyze the structure of the question and then plan the structure of the answer to suit the question," she explained.

When most students are asked to compare Greek government to Roman government they list aspects of both but never actually compare the two, she said.

Edward Feder, an administrative services officer, termed the program "excellent" but explained that enrollment has been increasing so rapidly "as evidenced by the present move to redirect students to other campuses," that financial "resources are extremely limited."

Conservationist Will Speak Here

Edward M. Nicholson, director-general of Britain's Nature Conservancy, will deliver the 1964 Albright Lecture at 8:15 p.m. tomorrow, in 2000 Life Sciences Building.

He will speak on "Conservation and the Next Renaissance"

Nicholson was educated at Sedburgh School, Yorkshire, and Hertford College, Oxford. He read history at Oxford and spent much of his time organizing biological expeditions to Greenland and the South American rain forests and working in bird ecology and populations near Oxford.

During the 1930's he was largely responsible for running an independent social and economic research organization which made studies of land use, research policy, population problems, and industrial and social development.

Nicholson has worked with the British government in the field of conservation since World War II. The Nature Conservancy, which he now heads, is similar to the U.S. National Park Service and is concerned with securing and preserving natural wild areas in the British Isles.

The pictures are the work of Barbara Myers, a self-taught photographer and graduate of UCLA. She received her degree in music and currently works in the UCLA Medical Center Library.

"Faces That Are America" was first shown in the UCLA Biomedical Library. The exhibit is dedicated to the memory of the late President John Fitzgerald Kennedy.

Miss Myers uses a Rolleflex pictures in her spare time and has traveled over much of the Southwest on a motor scooter in search of subjects. She has taken pictures of Indians living on the reservations in the Southwest.

Miss Myers uses a Rolliflex and available natural lighting for her work. Her current exhibition is composed primarily of subjects from the Santa Monica-Venice area.

Dream Sect Leader at Lowie

BY ERIC ROOST

The problems of maintaining an old and dying past in a society that does not acknowledge a man nor his heritage are answered or at least recognized by the Dreamers.

The Dreamers, a religious cult of the Pomo Indians, is a synthesis of old Indian religions and white man's Christianity.

"I dreamt my father was walking along the most beautiful path I have ever seen; it was lined with beautiful flowers, he wasn't really walking, but dancing along as if he was floating on air," said Mrs. Essie Parrish, spiritual leader of Dreamers in the Southwest.

Mrs. Parrish recently visited "The Dreamers," a display at the Lowie Museum of Anthropology.

Her dream demonstrated the combination of Christian and Indian background. The idea of a heaven is Christian; the idea of dancing is Indian. Dancing is the primary way of expressing the Indian religion, past and present.

The principal religious figure is the Dreamer, who discovers from within himself that he is a Dreamer.

"I was first aware of my powers at the age of four," Mrs. Parrish reminisced. "I saw the world and what made the world more clearly than other people did. At first I did not realize that other people did not see as clearly as I."

At 14 Mrs. Parrish realized the full scope of her abilities as a healer as well as a prophet. Mrs. Parrish said her first case of healing occurred when she cured her younger sister of trench mouth.

"When they called me to cure her, the spirit hit me. I put my hands on her and she was cured soon after," Mrs. Parrish said.

Since that time she has become the Dreamer for her tribe. She estimates she has cured approximately 1,000 people throughout her life.

"Each person has his own spirit," Mrs. Parrish continued. "Our flesh and bones have to sleep, but our spirit does not. It is in our dreams that our spirit talks to us."

The spirit is different than the Christian Holy Ghost found in Christianity, Mrs. Parrish explained. The two probably exist together. The Holy Ghost talks to us when we are awake; the spirit talks to us when we are asleep, she added.

The Dreamers have brought the modern world into their religion. The main feasts of the Dreamers are on the Fourth of July, Christmas, and after the healing of a sick person.

During World War II Dreamers embroidered holy hankchiefs with designs that were inspired by dreams. The flag has become an important adornment. The cross of Christianity and the diamond of older Pomo religions now are incorporated into the embroidery.

"It's a dream. There's no proof . . . that's unbelievable but I do know because it is in me. But when people hear just with their ears, and see just with their eyes . . . no miracles," Mrs. Parrish concluded.

Representatives of California State Government will be on Campus to discuss with Seniors and Graduate Students employment opportunities in State service, including the fields of:

- Accounting
- Statistical Research
- Correctional Rehabilitation
- Real Estate and Property Management
- Personnel and Fiscal Management
- Vocational Rehabilitation
- Insurance

UCLA Wins, Puts Cal Into Tie With Indians

BY LOWELL HICKEY

Top ranked UCLA completely demolished California's Golden Bears last night 87-57 in the Sports Arena in Los Angeles.

In the meantime Stanford was busy beating Washington State in Palo Alto and today the Bears and the Indians are deadlocked in second place with 8-6 records, ready to break the tie Friday night at Stanford.

Unlike the last Bruin-Cal game, when the Bears gave the undefeated Uclans their toughest game of the year while losing 56-58, the full court press completely baffled the visitors last night.

California lost the ball to the press seven times in the first half to give the Bruins an easy 14 points and help them run up a 39-18 halftime lead.

UCLA hit a tremendous 69.2 per cent (18 for 26) in the first half, while the Bears were ice cold at 20.6 per cent.

Again it was the Big Six champion's guards that did the bulk of the scoring as 6-1 Gail Goodrich hit 11 field goals and 23 points and sat out the final quarter of the last half.

Everybody's All-American Walt Hazzard added 18 points in addition to many assists.

Forward Jack Hirsch, who sat out a good quarter of the game with a leg injury, still managed to tally 17 points.

Cal tried to use the ball control tactics that proved so successful in the second meeting of these two teams and it worked for a short time as the Bruins could only score three points in the first four minutes, but the Bears only had one.

But then the full court press began to take effect and in the next three minutes the Bears were held scoreless while the Bruins scored eight points.

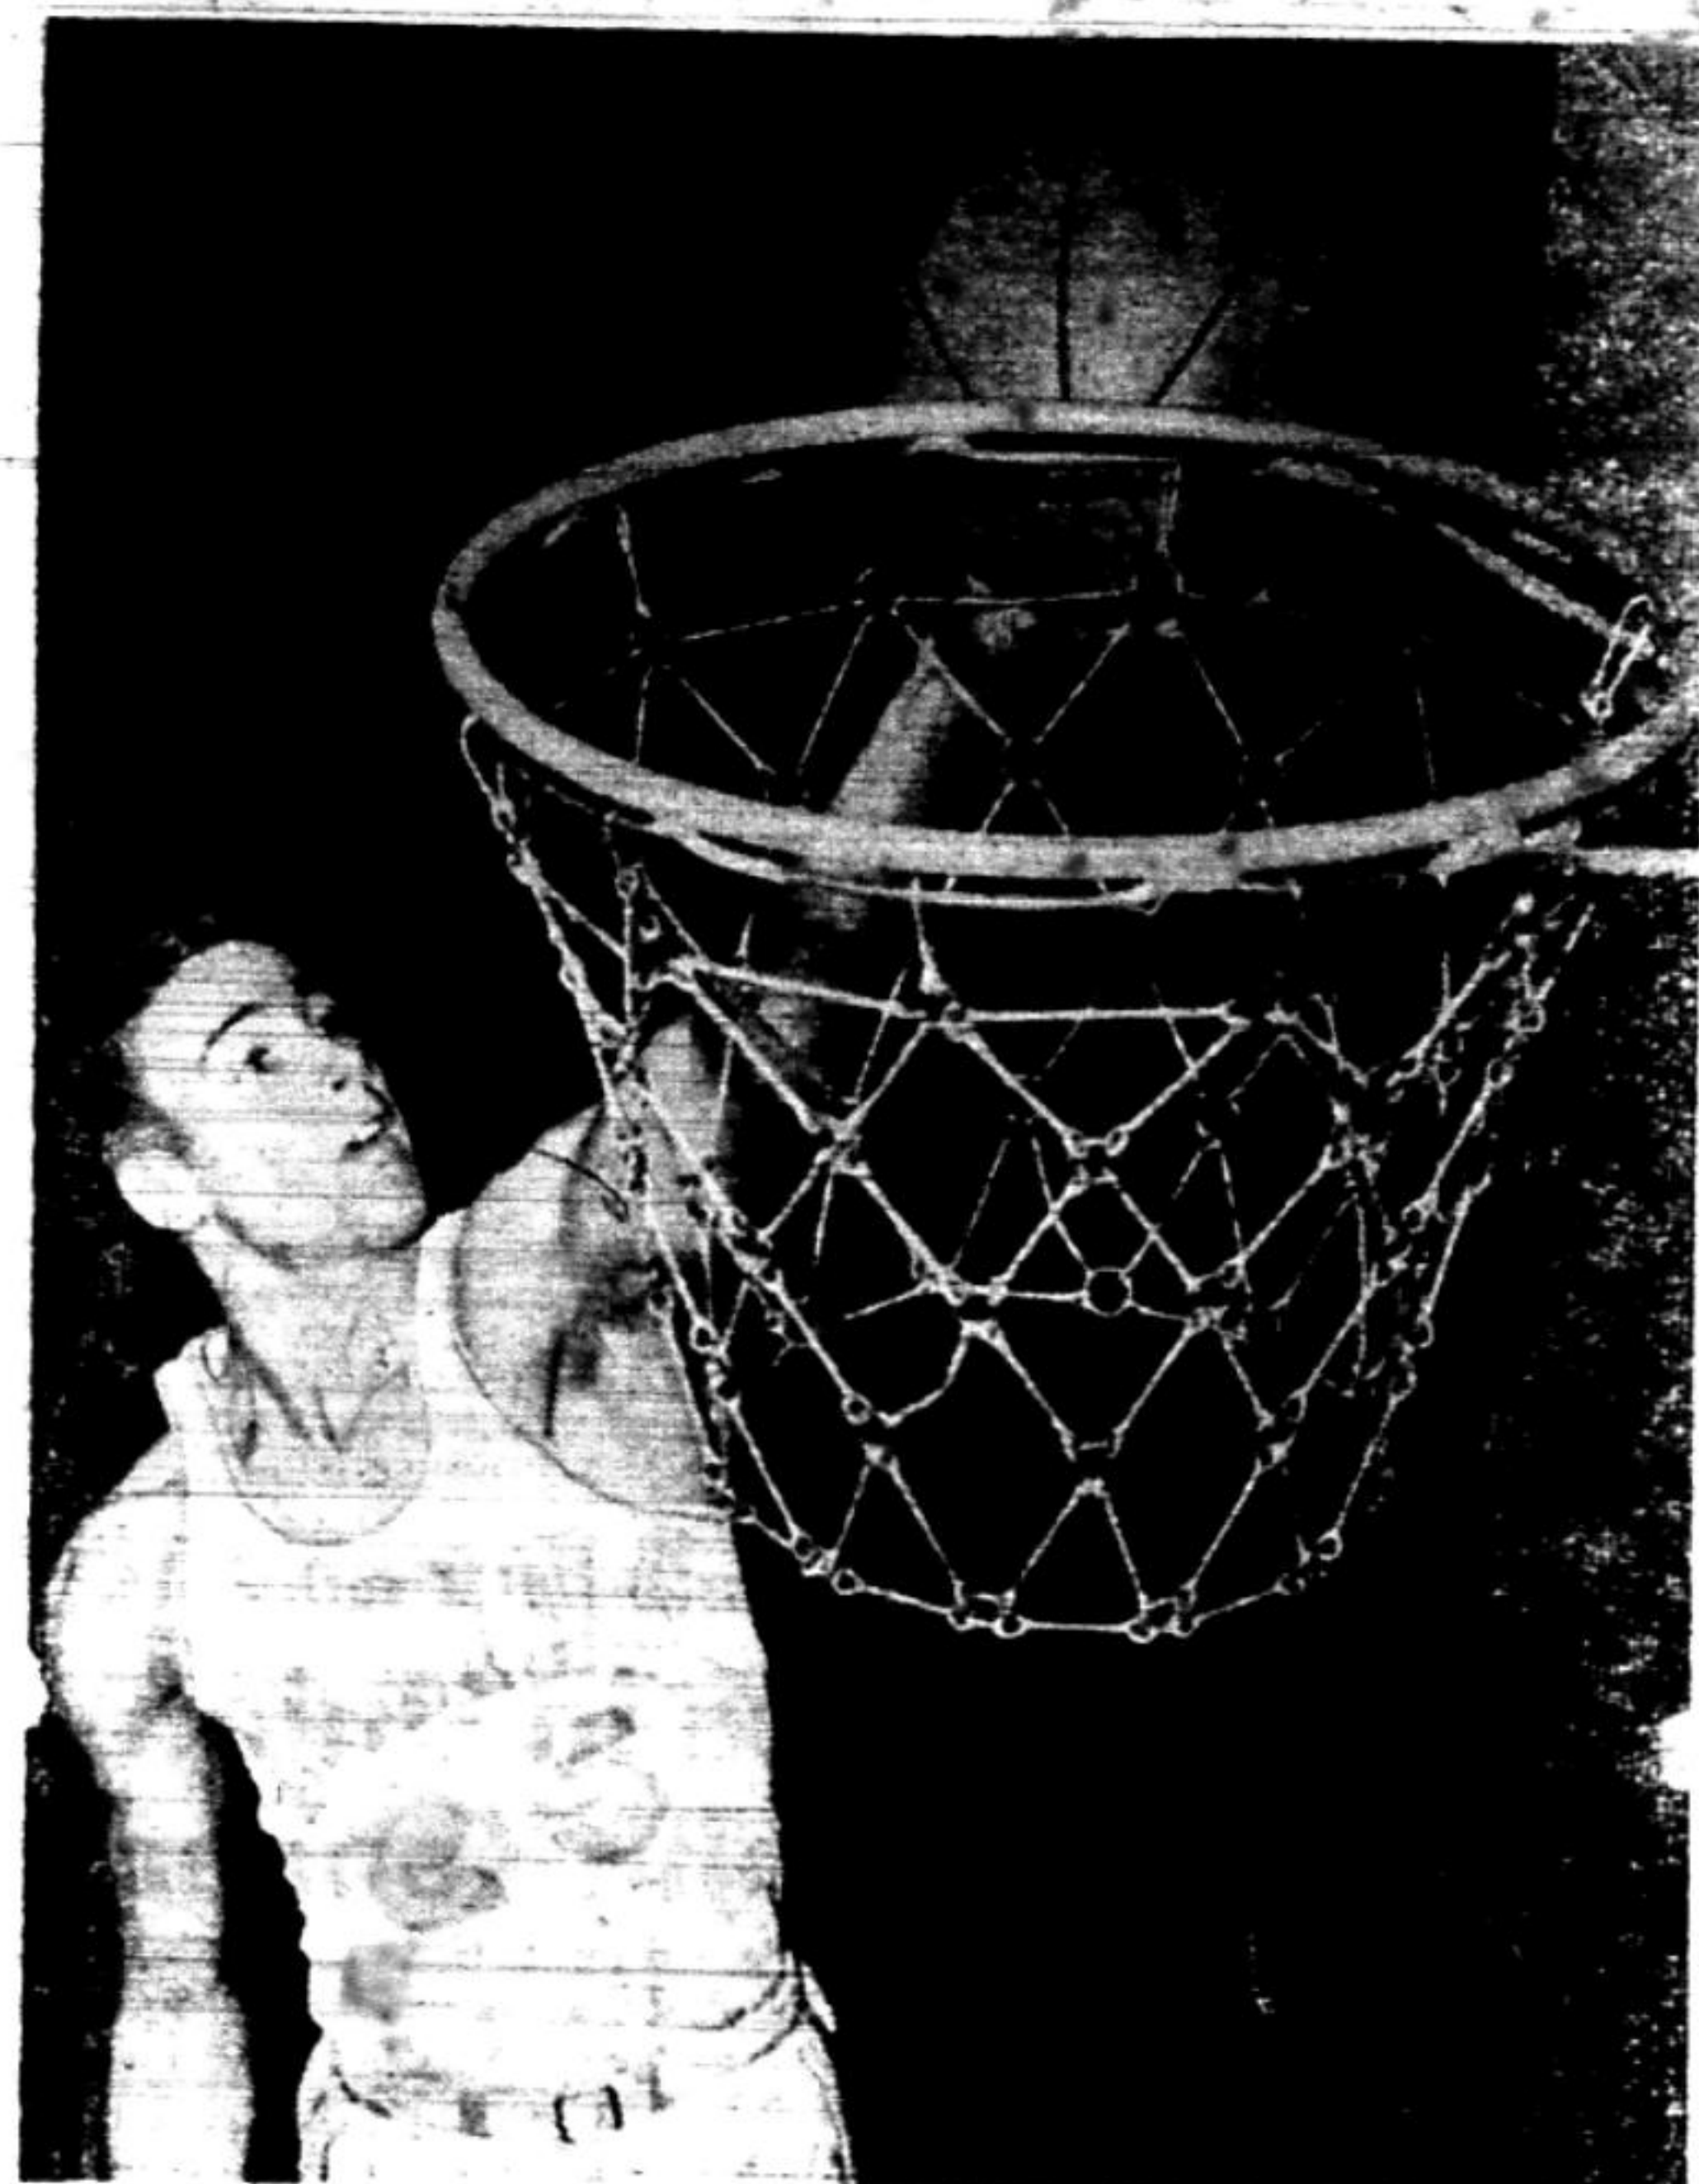

Camden Wall finished as high point man for the Bears with 14 points, while Steve Smith and Dan Wolthers added 10 each. Dan Lufkin tallied nine, all in the last half.

Needed: One Reliever To Stop Cal Fades

Plagued by late-inning collapses, Cal's baseball team goes against San Jose State Wednesday afternoon attempting to find the combination that will halt the last-minute fades. The action will commence at Edwards Field starting at 3:15 p.m.

The Bears have been coming from behind or holding off rallies by the opposition to post a 4-1-2 record thus far in the season, but Saturday's 4-0 triumph over Fresno State was only the second "breeze" the Bears have enjoyed.

It's a touchy problem, for the Bear starters have been brilliant—and strong—most of the time. But they have also run out of energy. Larry Colton pitched seven innings of two-hit ball against USF last week, then the Dons lowered the boom on the Cal hurler in a winning four-run rally.

Rich Nye had a shutout going into the ninth inning of Friday's San Jose thriller. The Spartans rallied and it took a three-run rally by the Bear hitters to pull the game out of the loss column and into a win.

The situation clearly calls for a relief pitcher who can put a stop to all this nonsense. The batters have been banging out all sorts of hits to protect the pitchers, and now Coach George Wolfman's pitching staff needs to help itself.

The most likely prospects for the job of rally-stopper are Joe Wierzbowsky and John Lovett. Lovett relieved in the Bear victory over USF last Tuesday, allowing three hits in four innings. Big Wierzbowsky cut off that USF rally in the game last Thursday. And coming on strong is young Steve Sternberg.

If none of these men can do effective work, Cal may have to depend upon the hitting—which has been strong of late—and this foursome of starters: Ray Evans, Bill Harrison, who pitched a one-hitter Saturday; Colton and Nye.

Point Standings Tighten

Gilman Kills Herrick 51-9 in 'Murals

Gilman Hall highlighted last Wednesday night's intramural action by bulldozing past the American League's only previously undefeated basketball team, Herrick Manor, 51-9.

While stressing the imbalance of the A.L. round robin leagues, the victors moved farther out in the winner's bracket playoffs with their lopsided triumph.

Smyth, Boalt, and Bowles also advanced in the playoffs by disposing easily of their respective foes.

Smyth became the second-bracket leader by topping Campus Lodge, 35-25. Boalt handled Continental, 37-24, in becoming the third-bracket pre-setters, and Bowles capitalized on the absence of their opponents to move automatically into the fourth-bracket lead.

Two unbeaten teams will meet in the coming week, when the ZBT's and Phi Tau's take the

Hart Leaves Cal; Now at Illinois

Jack Hart, assistant coach under Harry Levy, left his post at Cal to work with the University of Illinois as an assistant to Illini head coach Pete Elliot, also a former coach at Cal.

Hart played under Elliot for two years, in 1957 and 1958. After co-captaining the '58 squad, Hart returned the next year as a student coach and remained to help Levy.

The ex-California coach will join Elliot at the peak of a football resurgence. Last year's Illini finished first in the Big Ten, clobbered Washington in the Rose Bowl, and they play Cal in the second game of the Bears' season next year.

Dose Only Big Six Hoop Player On All-Northern California Tea

The Western Collegiate Athletic Conference placed four men on the all-Northern California basketball team, picked yesterday at the Northern California Basketball Writers' luncheon in San Francisco.

Stanford's Tom Dose was the only Big Six representative, as the team was picked by coaches, writers and broadcasters who were mostly from WCAC schools and towns.

Dan Wolthers, who made the second team, was California's only representative on the first two teams. Dan Lufkin and Camden Wall received honorable mention.

Second team:

Player of the year: Ollie Johnson (USF).

Golfers, Cal St. In Tight Tussle

Hairline favorites, California's golfers will face Cal State today at 2 p.m. on the Sequoia Country Club course.

When the two teams met last week, California won 14-13 at Mira Vista, one of the three courses which Bear golfers consider home.

Today's match was scheduled for another "home" course, Orinda, but golf mentor Kooman Boycheff obligingly changed it to Sequoia at Cal State's request to give them a "sporting" chance.

The home course advantage could be worth a lot more than one point to Cal State. But Boycheff states, "You've got to have the shots to take advantage of knowing the course."

Number one man for the Bears will be Bob Grossman. "Rookie" is the best word to describe Grossman, a steady four-hand capper from San Francisco.

Although he is a junior, Grossman had never gone out for golf before this year. But playing fourth man against Chico State last week, he was medalist with a 73.

Sophomore Mike Meyer was elevated to second, a gambling move since Meyer has never played Sequoia before. But he is a consistent golfer and Boycheff remembers that "Meyer shot a nice 75 the first time he ever saw Mira Vista."

Troubled by a bad back, John Einhorn will play third; Rich Sasaki will play fourth; and John Schoenberger and Jerry Rekers will make up the last pair at fifth and sixth.

 The governor declared, "We must re-examine our approach to vocational education. Our efforts are falling frighteningly short of what is needed. Our educational system has produced the ability to launch man into outer space. But it has passed thousands of our citizens by."
 • California, which does the largest share of defense work, will be hit hardest by presumed future reductions in defense spending, such as the $500 million fiscal 1964-65 cut.

 "We need a deliberate federal policy to offset reductions in defense investment with investments to meet the vast unmet social needs of our state and nation," Brown declared.
 He said strong, centralized state efforts to bring in more tourists and increased foreign trade would help offset defense spending losses.
 • California, builder of one out of every five homes in 1963, has "pitifully inadequate housing for hundreds of thousands of our citizens—the aged, the poor, the farm worker."

 brother thought it was a definite cut to the Greek system. Some of the references he felt were a little bit too gross. But most of the younger brothers thought it was excellently done. They've been running around here singing (the Pelican's lyrics) for the last few days."
 Stu Baron, ex-rush chairman of Alpha Epsilon Pi, said, "I thought it chopped the hell out of the dorms, and in a way it sort of chopped down the fraternities but a lot of the criticism was of things which sounded cool. It was a good representation of the sterebeen here.

 "It didn't offend me," Baron went on. "Some sorority girls were a little pushed out of shape by references to their being easy."

Student Government

The role of student government—its powers, its influence, its scope—is on this campus one of the least concerns of the average student. It is the topic of debate only for the handful active in the Associated Students. The ASUC Senate and its fringes spend much of their time wondering how it can best serve the apathetic student who pays his $5.50 every semester and just wishes to be left alone.

ASUC President Mel Levine has announced a proposed three year plan for the ASUC to increase student involvement in the association and hopefully to generate a student community. Among the problems he sees in the ASUC are lack of continuity from year to year and lack of communications between the Senate and its constituents.

But the basic reason students are not interested in student government is that they are not interested in what is being governed. The ASUC structure, for which the Senate is a "board of directors," runs smoothly through years of continuity. Experienced adults operate the complex services, such as the bowling alley, ski lodge, book store and check cashing service. The ASUC would continue to function as efficiently if the Senate did not exist.

The recent Graphic Arts issue exemplified that students have little more than rubber stamp control over the large institutions making up the ASUC. When Executive Director Forrest Tregea decided Graphic Arts was a liability, it was not difficult to persuade the majority of the Senate to agree to its sale.

This is not to say students are superfluous in the ASUC structure. Many activities are student run, such as publications, spirit groups and the multitude of boards and committees. Such activities offer an enriching experience for those participating, as well as benefit the general student body.

Every new group of Senators starts the year with the same desire: to acquaint students with student government, to "sell" the Senate to the students.

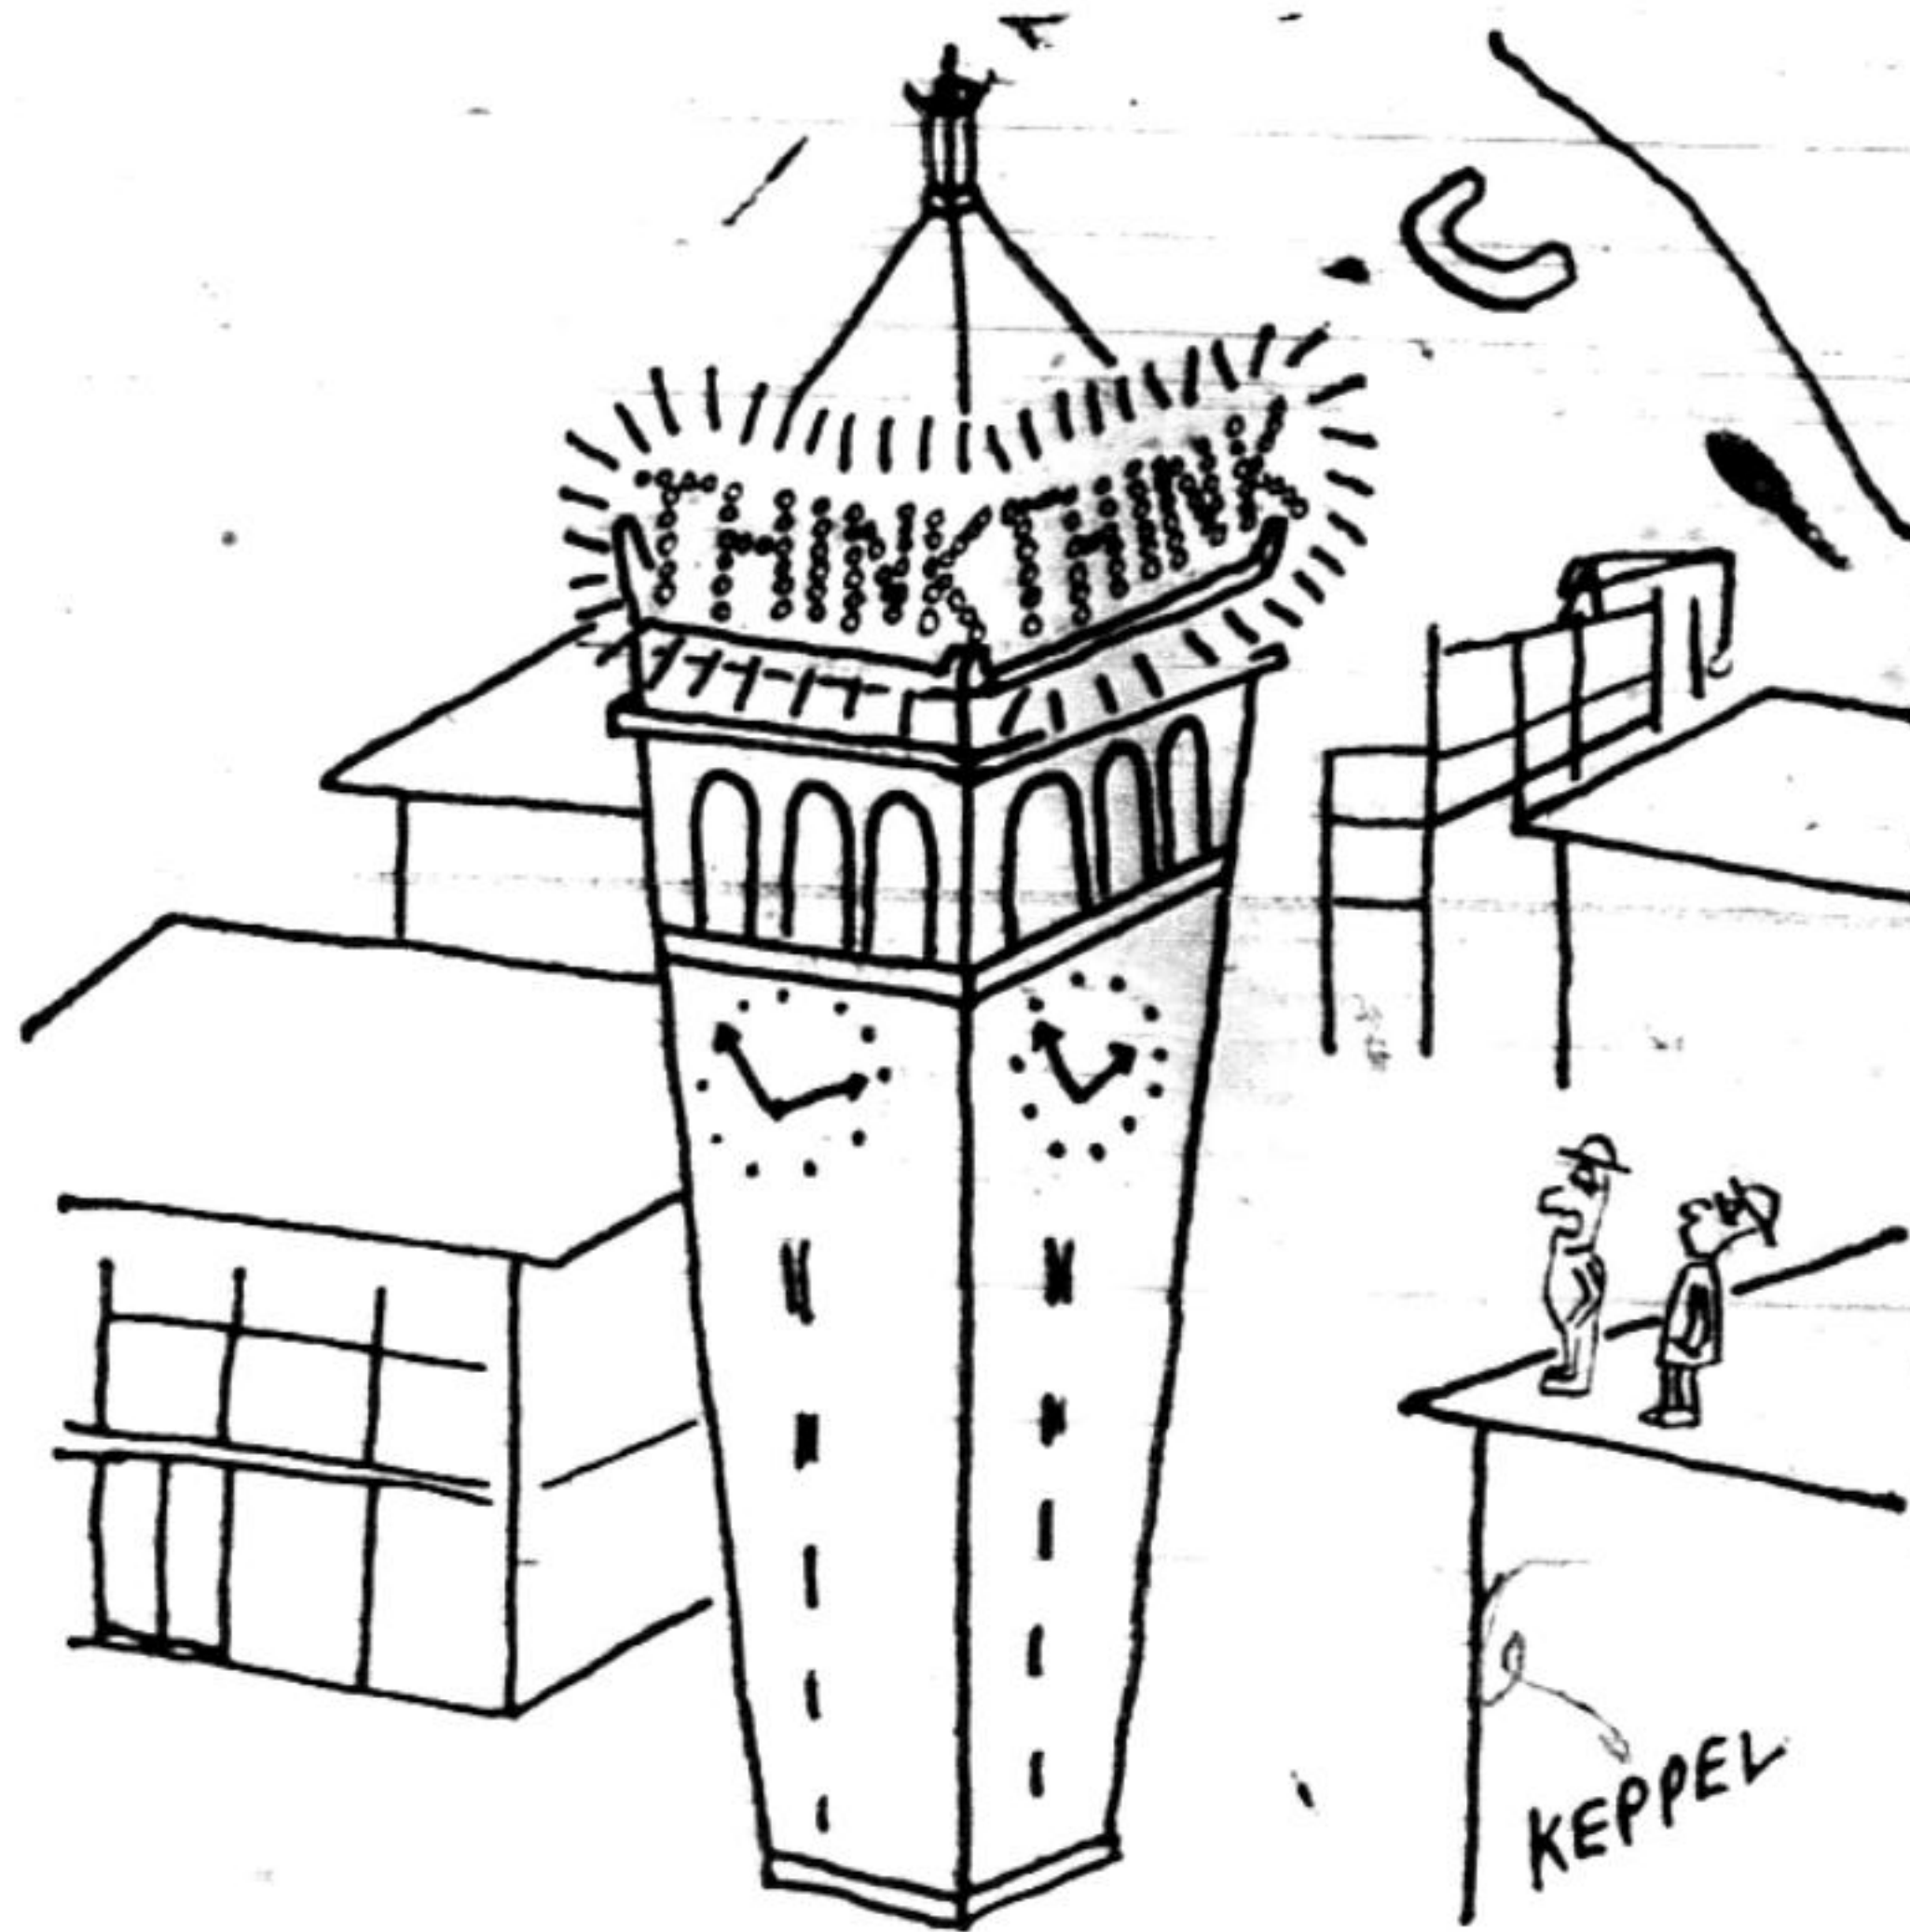

Senate members are too concerned with being ASUC leaders and not student leaders. The Senate's potential power is not as a student government, but as a student lobby. What the Senate can actually govern is not as significant as what it can accomplish by being the students' representative and voice in influencing action in the University.

The Senate has in the past spoken for the students in issues such as the Communist speaker ban, compulsory ROTC and the history and institutions test requirement. At present the ASUC is working on a long range depth study of the University's educational opportunities—the objectives, methods of teaching, grading, and results.

Although the argument is often made that the campus is too diverse to be represented by any small group, the Senate comes closest to being representative of the student body. Area representatives are elected by each form of living group, as well as representatives at large from the whole student body.

But the Senate often does not attract many potential leaders to run for office. These leaders are not interested in speaking before living groups on "what the Functional Services Board or the Auxiliary Enterprises Board means to you."

The proposed three-year plan can be successful if the Senate seeks to find out what students are interested in rather than attempt to stimulate student interest in the Senate.

But will it raise the Grade Point Average?

Puerile Panacea?

DON CRAWFORD

You know, a funny thing happened to me on the way from Dwinelle . . .

Prithee, what was that?

Well, I was walking along in front of Wheeler when tout de suite the wind blew into my face a page from one of our local molders of mass morality, and . . . What?

MOULDERS of mass morality. I thought it was a nice phrase.

Newspaper, maybe you mean? Hooray for you. Yes. Newspaper maybe I mean. Anyway, there was this article headlined: "A Plan for Draft Reject Training."

So what did you do then, Socrates?

I read it, nitwit.

What did it say?

It said, and I do not quote, that the director of selective service wants all the guys who get rejected by the draft boards to be inducted anyway and be given "rehabilitation" treatment and training under military control.

WHAT?

I swear that's what it said.

For God's sake . . . you mean even the guys they don't want aren't safe anymore?

Looks like it. You know what else? They've started a program to channel draft rejectees into employment and training through federal employment offices.

Jesus, looks like they've decided that if the draft board doesn't want you, you've just gotta be a misfit or a freak or something.

Yeah, I remember the first time I told somebody I was 4-F.

What happened?

I was smiling when I told 'em, because you know, I think everybody should do everything he can to be 4-F, and maybe then we wouldn't have an army, and maybe then there wouldn't be any more wars.

Don't be ridiculous. You know we have to be armed and ready to defend ourselves in case that fat Mr. Clean decides to mess with us.

I know, but I've always wondered what would happen if men all over the world just refused to be in armies . . . anyway, I told this guy I was 4-F and glad, and I thought he was gonna KILL me. It was like I had said God was dead, or something.

So how do you expect him to react? He was probably 1-A.

I understand that, but how come people think you're a freak in this country if you don't wanna be a soldier, and maybe die?

Oh, for crying out loud, how should I know?

Well, for crying out loud, you should know. Especially now that they've decided that even if you get out of being drafted, you might end up in uniform anyway.

What the hell does that mean? It means that General Hershey wants to draft rejectees for his "rehabilitation," and that means uniforms, dummy.

They'll never let him do it, it would cost too much money.

Yeah, but the money's going to come from funds set aside for the President's "War on Poverty," and that's a whole 'nother thing, ain't it?

You mean they're really gonna do it?

I don't know, I pray not.

Can we stop them?

I don't know that either, but if we don't . . . Brave New World, here we come!

A New 'Finnigan's Wake' in Dance

BY PAUL HERTELENDY

The grotesque, the bizarre, the temporal and eternal cast lively shadows in an incarnation of James Joyce's fog-shrouded "Finnigan's Wake." Jean Erdman's off-Broadway dance troupe brought this enigmatic book to vivid life Sunday evening in Wheeler Auditorium preliminary to a four-day stand at the Contemporary Dancers' Association in San Francisco.

Taking related and unrelated scenes out of Joyce's oft unintelligible descriptive account of the dreams and nightmares of an aging Dublin publican, Miss Erdman choreographed the episodes in simple symbolic settings, supplemented by an appropriately sprightly, unpretentious, and weakly jazzlike score by Composer Teiji Ito.

This dance-drama-musical version, entitled "The Coach with Six Insides," not only captures both the mood and language of the Irish poet, but also renders his work considerably more understandable through the visual realization of scenes only murkily hinted at in the original.

If there was a co-star to Miss Erdman's highly entertaining troupe, it was Joyce's diamond-studded lingual liberation from the trite phrase and the cliché.

The Lord's prayerful "Her rill be run in Heaven, as it is uneven," the confessor's salacious "Let us pry," the school girl's "We will conjugate together with love when I get my decree," and the washerwoman's "Wring out the clothes, wring in the dew" burst forth in repeated glints of coherence.

If the enthusiastic audience remained baffled, it could take heart in Joyce's own admonishment that understanding "Wake" takes as long as writing it, which in itself came to 17 years.

LETTERS TO THE ICE BOX

Hypocrisy

To the Ice Box:

The spate of articles, editorials and letters appearing in these pages in condemnation of CORE's action regarding the Lucky Stores are a revealing commentary on the blatant hypocrisy of the white liberal in America. These pieces appearing in the Daily Californian usually begin with pious recital of the liberal echos of equality—"I am in complete agreement with CORE's goals" . . . followed with a phrase running something like the following: "but I cannot condone the means used." . . . The insidious nature of this white liberal dogma lies in the fact that it removes any real possibility of achieving the equality it purports to favor.

The white liberals had better step down from their platform of pious indignation and realize that force is a necessary tool of those disadvantaged segments of any society who wish to produce significant social change.

It is in the light of the concept of force as a vital element in the production of social change that the Lucky Store shop-ins must be seen. The logic is simple—fair employment will not be achieved by convincing Lucky's of its moral legitimacy, but rather, by convincing them that to continue unfair hiring practices will be more damaging economically than the adoption of a new, and more equitable, approach.

The common view expressed in the pages of the Daily Cal, that the purpose of the civil rights struggle should be to bring the issue of discrimination to the attention of the public, rather than to cause "inconvenience," borders on the absurd. It is this insensitivity to civil rights that make shop-in tactics necessary. The crossing of picket lines by whites, both liberal and conservative, has made more drastic direct action tactics, such as shop-ins and sit-ins, necessary. White liberals should be cognizant of the fact that if they continue to thwart efforts to bring economic pressure to bear upon employers such as Lucky's more drastic measures, such as terrorism and bombing may be the result. History abounds with examples of intransigence by privileged groups leading to the adoption of tactics such as these as a last resort.

White Americans must realize that they must accede to the demands of the Afro-American or pay the price. If hypocritical and irrelevant rationalizations involving the supposed sanctity of private property or the niceties of persuasion as opposed to force continue to be the white American response to demands for equality then havoc far surpassing the inconveniences encountered by patrons of Lucky's will inevitably result.

Carpets

To the Ice Box:

I have heard a rumor to the effect that somebody (the ASUC Senate?) has included in the plans for the new Student Office Building, an oak-paneled, carpeted Senate Chamber. I would like to have this rumor confirmed or denied by a Senator. If it is confirmed, I would also like to know how this "somebody" justifies spending my money on this useless luxury.

Intern Programs for Teachers Will Start Here This Summer

The new elementary teaching requirements for California came into effect last January, and this summer will see the start of the University's special internship teaching program.

California now requires a major and a minor in academic subjects which are taught in public school, as well as breadth requirement and teacher education. A B.A. will satisfy the academic major, but care should be taken to complete a minor and to take the specific breath requirements required for graduate teacher education, such as Music 110 and Math 5.

The internship teaching program is an opportunity to teach culturally deprived children. The participant will do his graduate education work in two summers and on the Saturdays of the intervening year. The rest of the time he will be a paid full-time teacher in this area. Applications can be picked up at the Department of Education and must be turned in before March 15. A 2.5 average in undergraduate work is required.

Brutus Leads Ugly Contest As Fund Raising Continues

As of noon yesterday, approximately $1400 was collected in the Ugly Man Contest with Brutus Epsilon III, a St. Bernard, in the lead.

The Bowles Hall sponsored Turtle Race with bets at 10 cents was the subject of a small argument involving moral issues. A passing student questioned Marty Sobelman of Bowles Hall as follows:

Student: Is this fair to the turtles? How do you think they feel about the races?

Sobelman: Never having been a turtle, I wouldn't know.

Student: Do you think it's right?

Sobelman: As they say in chemistry and physics; for my purposes, it's right. (His purpose being to raise money for Cal Camp.)

Student: You're just a tool, aren't you?

Sobelman: OK, I'm a tool.

Today is Television Day. From noon until 3 p.m. Cameras from three Bay Area television stations will be on campus taking newsreels of the Cal Camp-Ugly Man activities from noon-3 p.m.

Kappa Delta sorority is sponsoring three films to raise funds for their candidate Lynn Sims. Filmstrips of the "Indianapolis Race-1963," and a "Preview of the 1964 New York World's Fair," will be shown at noon today in 2003 Life Sciences Building and at noon tomorrow in 155 Dwinelle Hall. They will also be shown at 7:30 p.m. today in 11 Wheeler Hall. Admission is 25 cents.

The major film, "Ski Total," will be shown from 8-9 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday in 11 Wheeler Hall. Admission for this film is $1. The general public is invited to attend the evening shows.

Friday is the last day of the Ugly Man Contest sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega, Men's Service Fraternity.

Steve Johnson, president of Alpha Phi Omega, said that the goal has been set above $7500, last year's total. The results of the contest will be announced Saturday night at the Beauty and Beast Ball. A Miss Beauty will be chosen from five finalists at noon Wednesday in Pauley Ballroom.
