FSM Defendants Fight Bail

A group of defendants, calling themselves "Operation Fight-Back," filed a petition yesterday with the California Supreme Court to halt sentencing in the FSM trial until bail is lowered.

The petition, according to defendant Jack Weinberg, asks the judge to carry over the bail posted before the trial, or release the defendants on their own recognizance or require a nominal bail, namely $25.

The defendants feel, Weinberg said, bail pending appeal is being used as punishment.

Burdick Dies of Heart Attack

Eugene Burdick, associate professor of political science at the University, author and political analyst, died July 26 in San Diego. He was 47.

Burdick was probably best known as the co-author of "The Ugly American" and "Fail Safe." He had been a consultant to the President of the United States and to the Peace Corps, and Academic Consultant to University President Clark Kerr.

President Kerr said "He was one of the truly blithe spirits of the University—joyous, curious, friendly, creative, helpful. He was a most interesting character in a day when characters are rare in academic life."

Burdick was a graduate of Stanford University and a Rhodes Scholar. He came to the University as an instructor in political science in 1950.

He is survived by his wife, the former Carol Warren, and three children.

Municipal Judge Rupert Crittenden has set appeal bail at $550 for most of the Sproul Hall demonstrators convicted of both trespassing and resisting arrest.

For those who put up cash the money is returned, but many must rely on a bail bond company which charges a non-refundable ten percent premium.

"The FSM defense fund is broke, in fact it's quite heavily in debt," Weinberg said. "It would cost $35,000 to $40,000 to post the premiums."

Weinberg felt the "extremely high baile for this type of thing" was designed to deplete the defense fund to make appeal difficult.

The first defendant, David Goines, was sent to jail Thursday, having posted no bail. However, Crittenden later instituted a ten day period for sentenced defendants to file notices of appeal, at which time they then must post bail or be sent to jail.

The petition seeks to prevent defendants going to jail, pending appeal, because they cannot afford to lose $55 or $110 on a premium, Weinberg said.

He added since sentencing would probably be over by Thursday there was hardly time for the petition to stop it.

Another solution of the high bail was offered by a group of University faculty members. They have offered to take custody of those defendants released on their own recognizance.

One hundred and ten faculty members presented the judge with a signed statement yesterday. Crittenden said he would consider it.

Two weeks ago many of the same 110 faculty members sent Judge Crittenden letters asking for the custody of a specific student, but the judge would not accept this as a substitute for the appeal bail.

New Chancellor Visits Campus

The appointment of Dr. Roger W. Heyns as the new chancellor of the University was greeted with enthusiasm last week by ASUC President Jerry Goldstein.

Goldstein talked with Heyns when the new chancellor was on his first official visit to the campus last week.

The announcement of Heyns' appointment was made a week ago by University President Clark Kerr. Heyns leaves his present position as Vice-President of the University of Michigan on October 1.

"This man is without question truly a liberal," Jerry Goldstein, ASUC president, said in an interview following his meeting with Roger W. Heyns, new chancellor of the University.

Commenting on the new Chancellor's statement that the role of student government at the University should be different, Goldstein said, Heyns is echoing what the students have been saying for years.

Goldstein said that the philosophy of allowing the students a say in the University had long been established, but they had never been listened to. "We now have the potential to make this philosophy viable," Goldstein added.

The ASUC President said Heyns and he had not discussed specifics, but that he had just written a detailed letter to the new chancellor describing various University problems. Goldstein said he had found Heyns "most willing" to meet with him.

"This may sound trite," Goldstein said, "but Heyns impressed me as a person who would be accessible to the students not only as a chancellor but as a friend."

Goldstein also spoke of his high regard for Martin Meyerson, who has been the Acting Chancellor since the beginning of the year.

He expressed his thanks for the "excellent job" that Meyerson had done in the last six months.

The "new atmosphere of cooperation between the students and administration is due largely to Meyerson's efforts," he added.

According to the Michigan Daily, Heyns was able as vice

Meanwhile Constance Is Chancellor

By KONSTANTIN BERLANDT

Vice Chancellor Lincoln Constance, professor of botany and director of the University herbarium will be acting chancellor until the Regents meet in two weeks.

"In my capacity as Vice Chancellor I have been asked, shall we say, to babysit until August 13," he said in an interview last week.

His goal for the 13 days is "to keep the paper flowing."

Constance will be talking with students, writing communications, trying to keep things rolling and handling other institutions trying to get professors away from the University.

"Things are more relaxed during the summer," he said.

Constance describes himself as a "pretty good listener" and a sort of "relief pitcher" as Acting Chancellor.

He does not plan to initiate any policies nor "proceed with

Meyerson Steps Down

On his last day as Acting Chancellor, Martin Meyerson looked back over the past seven months with a certain measure of pride and a slight degree of sadness.

He spoke of the "remarkable faculty" he had gotten to know, of "wonderful students," and of his hope that their "deep political and social concern would continue."

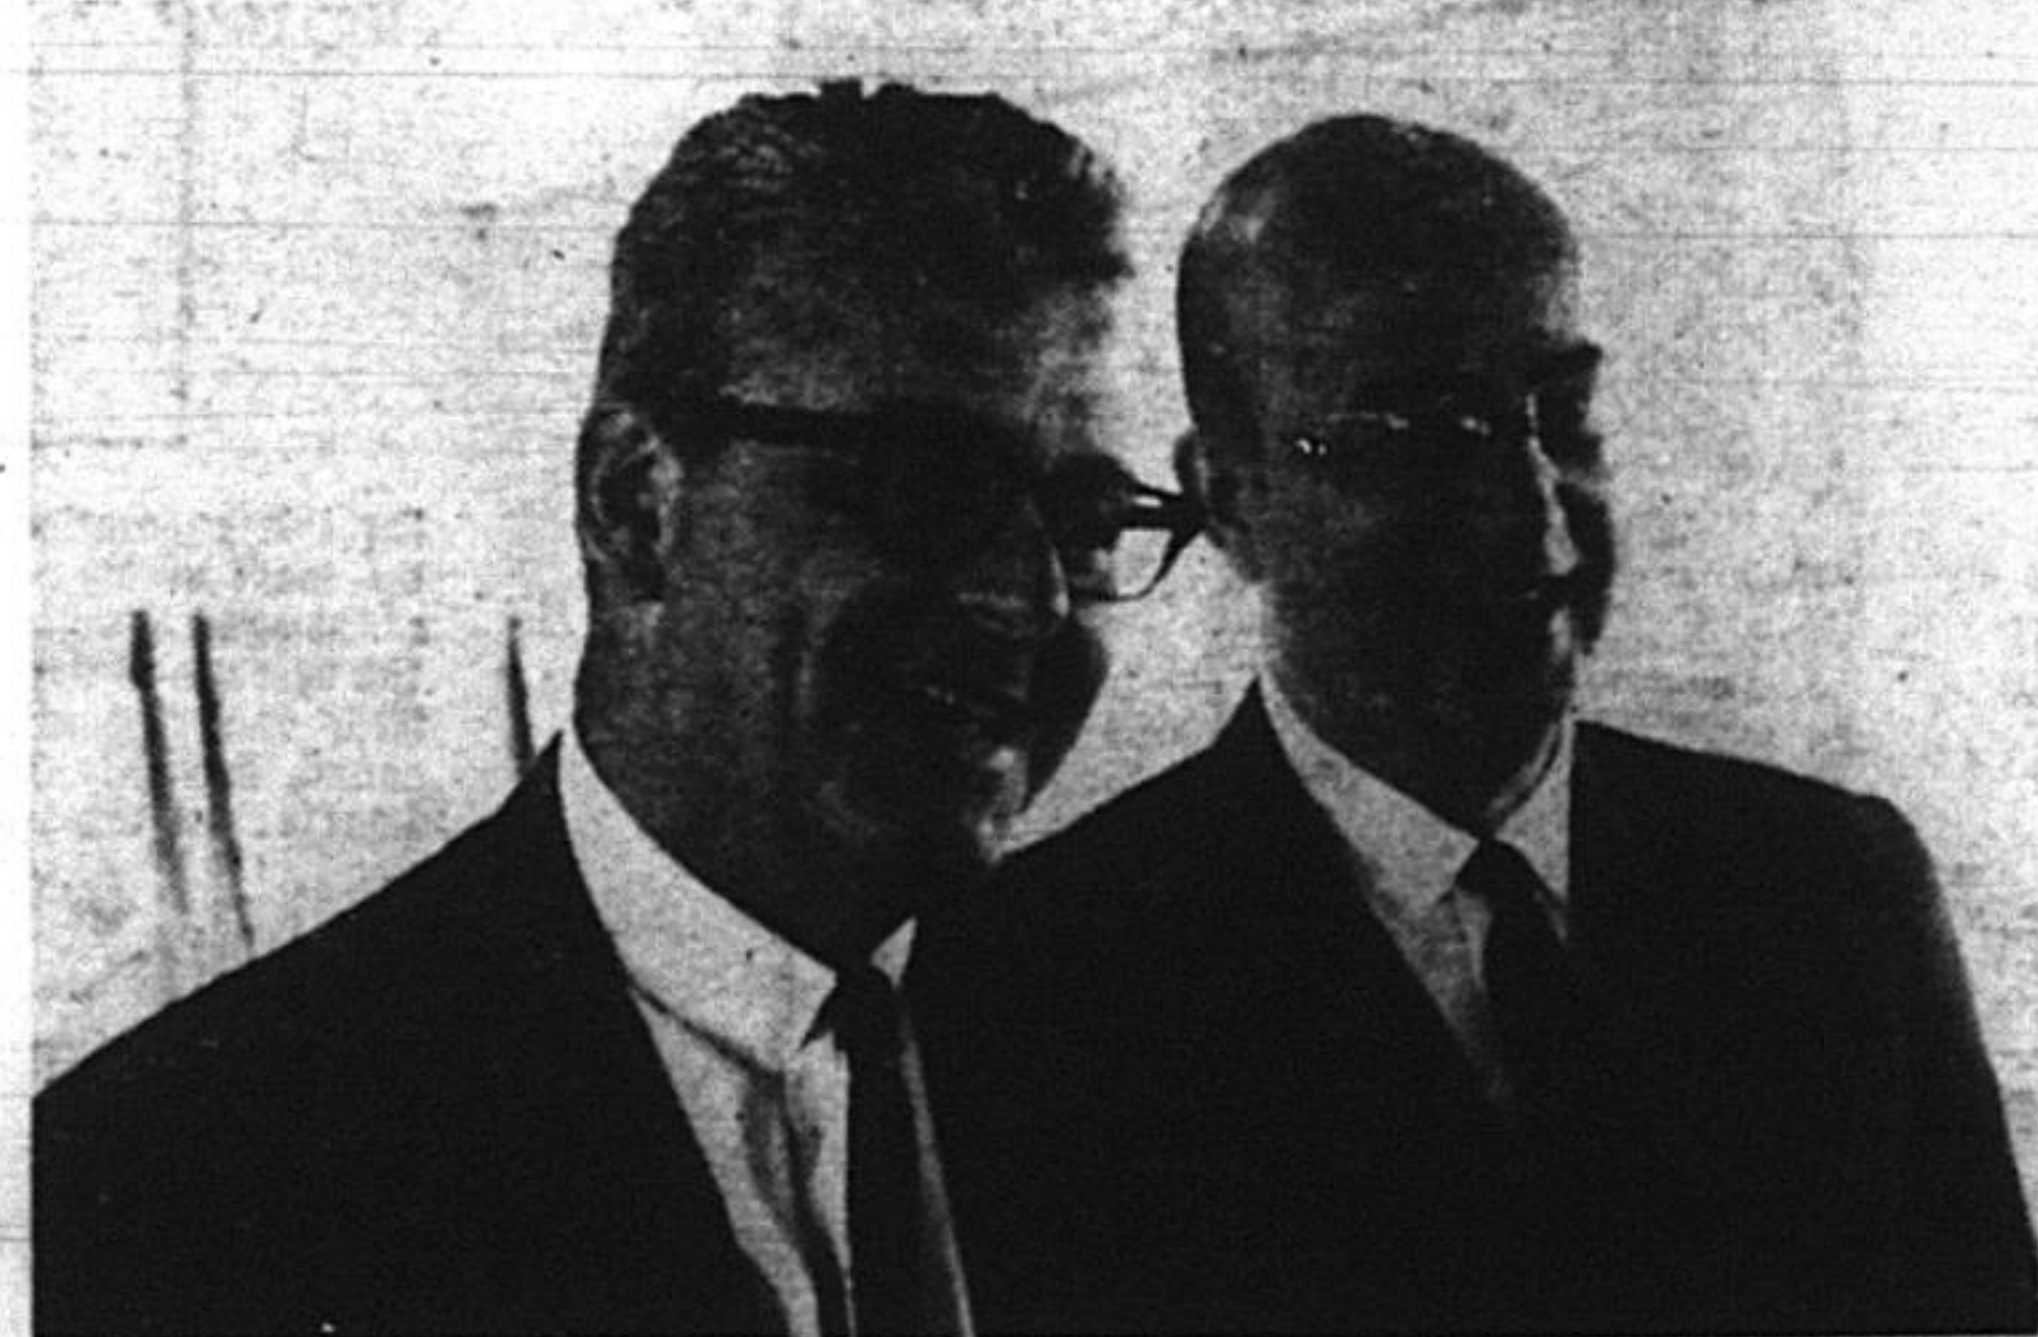

In a letter which he sent to the members of the faculty on Friday, Meyerson said when he was drafted for his assignment he realized he was "expendable." He spoke of his administration and himself as "lightning rods for much criticism."

"Our university was and is worth whatever personal sacrifices accrue to us," he added.

Meyerson said he had no idea what arrangements the Regents would make to handle the period from their meeting on August 13 until Heyns takes over his duties on October 1st.

He had urged Heyns to take on his duties as soon as possible, he added. "I am delighted enough headway had been made to make the appointment of a new chancellor possible." He spoke of Heyns as "free of the burden of history of the last seven months."

Meyerson predicted there would be many challenges when he returned to his post as Dean of the School of Environmental Design. He said "I am very attached to my college but as Acting Chancellor my more general interest in education has been strengthened."

Men Not Monkeys

By TED KOZLOWSKI
(Editors Note: This is the last in a series of exclusive Daily Californian articles on the recently concluded space-diet experiment. The guinea pigs were University students.)

"I'm a human being, not an experimental monkey!" cries the young astronaut, tragically possessed as a transmitting medium by a warlike alien race. The penthouse explodes in cheers as the TV drones on.

Over the course of six weeks, the Morgan Hall metabolizing team have at times felt such a declaration was necessary, what with the barrage of physical, psychological, and other tests given us nearly every day.

But last Tuesday evening when the steaks and the $600 checks were brought out, we rapidly lost ego-identification with guinea pigs. The men on the liquid diet sat down to determine if they could still chew, and the dehydrated-menu people wanted to

Students Discuss Educational Reform

Students interested in educational reform have been meeting weekly this summer to discuss needed reforms and what they can do to effect such reform.

Spurred on by Leigh Mueller, next year's chairman of the ASUC's Student Educational Faculty Relations Board, the group of students have begun their discussions with a look at "What's wrong with Cal?"

Mueller told the Daily Californian he has gathered together students who are interested in educational reform from Slate, the Graduate Coordinating Council, the Free Student Union, the American Federation of Teachers, and other groups, for the discussions.

"Students have never really had an opportunity to think of their education as something they have something to say about," Mueller said. SEFRB hopes to help them lose this idea.

Pessimistically, however, Mueller admitted the old idea may be true to a great extent. Interested students at this University have few roads open to demand reforms.

According to Mueller, most faculty members believe the students should bring their ideas to individual faculty members, but should not be allowed in educational policy committee meetings. This limits the students' usefulness, since they are unable to follow up ideas, he said.

Currently, however, Mueller and his group have been limiting their action to an investigation of the problems in education here. How to act on their ideas will come later.

The group of students meets at 7:30 p.m. Thursdays in the Stephen's Room of the Student Union.

Mueller has two basic ideas on how his committee can get the most out of interested students. At group meetings, every student is given a few minutes to filibuster—this gets the quiet ones to speak and the more vocal to be quiet and listen.

Secondly, students are asked to write down what is wrong here—this makes them think.

Thirdly, in operating the committee, students are given free reign to work on whatever subject interests them.

Interested in the quarter system? Tell Mueller and he'll dump a pile of reading in your lap and tell you to report back when you have something to say.

Under the "What's wrong at Cal" list, the group has come up with various gripes. Among them are the advising system and large classes.

In discussing University breadth requirements, the students concluded some such requirements, requirements, particularly for courses which teach the communication skills, is necessary. Speech courses, emphasizing communication rather than literature, are valuable as breadth requirements, they agreed.

On the other hand, language requirements seemed useless to most of the group since no fluency in a language is acquired in three semesters, according to Mueller.

The group also concluded that the list of courses which satisfied the science breath requirement is too limited.

Navy Needs Females

College-aged volunteers are needed for the Tuesday night recreation hostess program at the U.S. Naval Hospital at Oak Knoll in Oakland.

The Berkeley Chapter of the American Red Cross provides transportation via a Red Cross Station wagon leaving the campus area at 6:25 and returning to Berkeley around 9:30 p.m.

Hostesses serve as recreation aides at dances and parties in the lounge with the ambulatory patients. Red Cross officials at the hospital indicate that the success of this program is dependent upon the hostesses. With patients returning from the Viet Nam conflict, volunteers are urgently needed in service capacities to assist Red Cross Staff.

For further information and interviews call the Berkeley Chapter, American Red Cross, 2116 Allston Way, TH 5-1430 weekdays, 8:30-4:30.

During the regular school sessions the University YWCA recruits volunteer recreation hostesses and aides for the Oak Knoll Naval Hospital for evening programs on Tuesday and Thursday nights. This is a part of the University YW's Community Service program.

Registration Continues Until Next Monday

Next Monday is the last date to register or file a study list for the second summer session, the Registrar's office has announced. The Registrar's Office will be open on Monday from 8:30 to noon and 1:00 to 4:30 p.m.

When filing a study list, a student must present his admission card for the current session. Students must also present the correct class card for the courses in which they are enrolled. The completed study list must also be approved by the appropriate advisor if an advisor is necessary.

The Registrar's Office warns that under no circumstances can an incomplete registration or study list be accepted.

Cal Wins Another One

Cal's Golden Ruggers continued to shine in Australia as they won the second game of their tour 22-18 when they defeated a strong Australian Capital Territory team before 3,000 fans.

The Bear victory was an exciting event and exemplified Cal's never-say-die spirit that highlights many of the University's athletic programs. Cal was down 13-11 at the half and 18-16 with five minutes to go before the Blue and Gold ones rallied to cop the victory.

But all has not been so bright as Cal suffered their first loss of the season when they were edged by Sydney University 5-3 on July 21.

This marked the Bear's first loss in 28 matches as Cal was prevented from playing their traditional open game by heavy rain which turned the ground into a mud patch.

Podium-Particle Hosts Preps

PARTICLE-BERKELEY, a math and science society, and PODIUM-BERKELEY, a social sciences and humanities society, will be host this weekend to over one hundred high school and college undergraduate students.

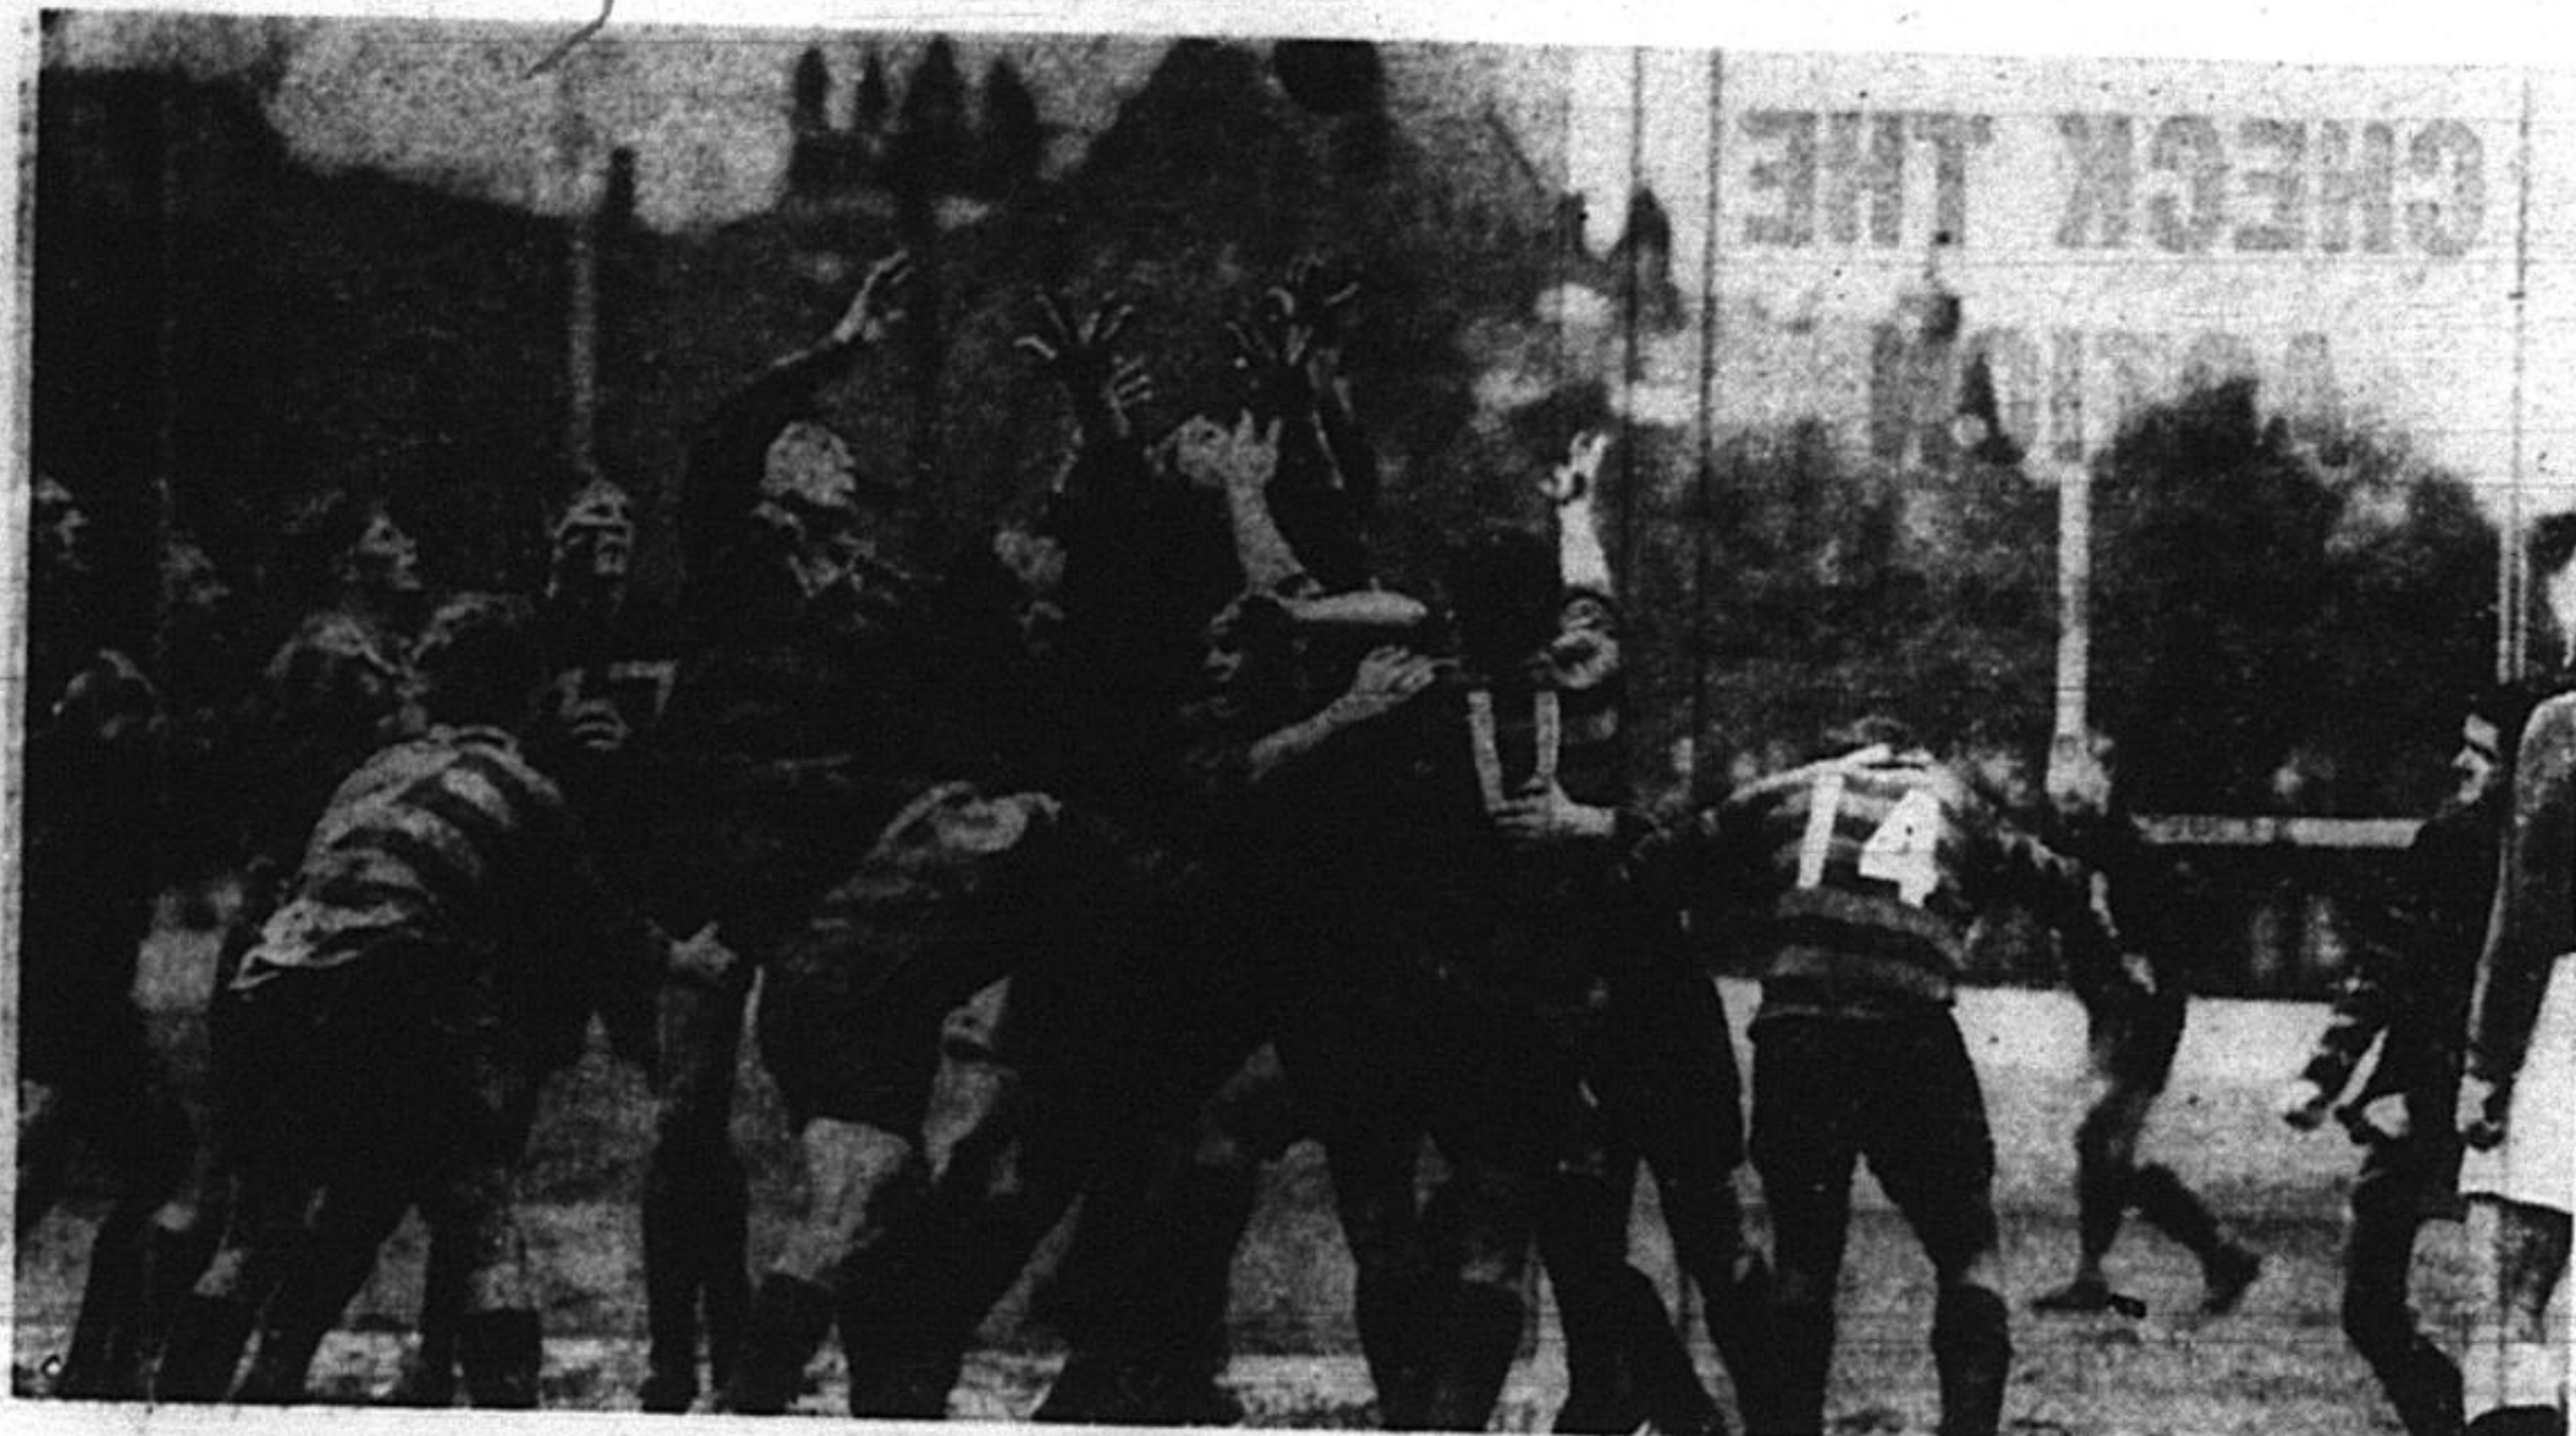

They have been invited here from various parts of the state, and in some cases out of state, to present their own original research and discuss the research of their contemporaries working in various branches of mathematics, physical sciences, natural sciences, and social sciences.

Student on campus for the summer sessions as well as students of the University during regular semesters may register this week to attend the symposium, whether they have research to present or simply wish to hear the lectures and participate in the discussions.

Registration is $3.00. Application are available at the Student Union Information Desk.

Steak Replaces Beef Cubes

articulate to themselves exactly why they didn't like styrofoamic beef cubes.

Over the course of the six weeks, which for me have already merged into a featureless whole, we began to yearn for real food the way others do for childhood. Happily, for us the past proved to be recapturable. Indeed, by the day after our release, I was so stuffed with heartburn I didn't want a thing but Roloids.

An awesome amount of study, creative work, etc., can be done in a month and a half when there are no distractions but TV and card playing. However, I can't think of a longer list of achievements than three newspaper articles, ten letters, and a knowledge of how truly wretched science fiction writing can be.

Others, of course, accomplished more, including wood sculpturing, self-taught Hindi courses, and learning the chords to the Joan Baez Song Book. We were confined long enough to run a tooth-paste test, smoked enough cigarettes to rate them too, but neither industry contacted us about hiring out on the side.

The only official purpose was to discover what compact diets would do for us and to us. Perhaps the results will be good enough so that the project directors can go to NASA in Washington to compete with a similar experiment being held elsewhere. As to which side will have 21% fewer vomitings, I don't know. Here there was only one recorded, and that fellow was watching "Peyton Place" at the time.

Vindictive Action Detrimental to State

"The spits and vindictiveness on the part of the regents and legislature in cutting the number of teaching assistants at the University affects not only those directly involved, but the university and the entire State of California.

has been one of the main reasons for discontent on this campus, has been aggravated, Obrien charged. Even last year there were sections with over 100 students in them. This number will now have to be increased.

This statement was made by the President of Local 1570 of the American Federation of Teachers, Brian Obrien, in an interview with the Daily Cal this week. This group has 500 dues paying members on this campus.

Obrien said he planned to meet with the Dean of the Graduate Division, Sanford Elberg, as soon as the latter returns from Europe.

By cutting the number of TAs from about 1200 to about 950, the problem of impersonality, which

"At the moment everything is up in the air"; the TAs most in jeopardy are those who have no agreement for the coming year, he said. If any TAs who have already been assured of their positions for the coming year are let go, then the local will react very strongly, Obrien said.

Theatre Tryouts

The department of dramatic art will hold tryouts for the University theater production of Henrik Ibsen's "Ghosts" in the Anna Head School Auditorium, Building A, 2538 Channing Way, from 3 to 5 p.m. and 5 to 7 p.m. today. Audition scripts will be available at tryouts.

"We may demand that they limit enrollment to insure proper teacher pupil relationship", Obrien said.

Production dates for the play, to be directed by Professor Robert Goldsby, are September 7 through 11.

(The University has already issued a statement saying that every effort is being made to meet commitments already given to students for waiver of out-of-state tuition and for teaching assistant ships in 1965-66.)

TA's Fight Back

Cutting the number of TAs means the faculty will have to do more teaching and will have less time for individual study and research. This will affect the quality of the faculty who are willing to come to the University as well as the quality of the students, he claimed.

The burden on the remaining TAs is tremendous. O'Brien referred to Preliminary Report of the Select Committee on Education of the Berkeley Division of the Academic Senate in which they spoke of "the bargain basement exploitation of graduate students".

O'Brien said reducing the number of Teaching Assistants along with the reduction of the number of tuition waivers indicates a concentrated effort to exclude from the University of California those in the lower income brackets.

O'Brien claimed that the tuition waivers affect most adversely the foreign students on this campus.

He said he is going to have a conference with the leaders of all the foreign students to discuss the situation.

Medical Engineer

A new undergraduate program linking engineering with medicine and the life sciences will be one of the first engineering programs in the country to qualify students for direct admission to medical schools.

The biomedical engineering program seeks to train students to apply the analytical methods of engineering, mathematics, chemistry, and physics to problems in medicine.

Physicians with such a background will be particularly well qualified to undertake advanced medical research in such areas as the development of artificial limbs and organs, and the design of new medical instruments and equipment. They will play an important role in the increasing use of mathematical analysis to attack problems of medical diagnosis and treatment.

Interim Follows Interim

The honeymoon with Meyerson is over. A new chancellor from Michigan will take over October 1. In the meantime we have "relief pitcher" Vice Chancellor Lincoln Constance—at least until August 13 when the Regents will select another interim chancellor to hold out until October.

The effect will probably be reasonable tranquility until October.

Of course, not having a permanent chancellor until October could have a reverse effect—it could speed action up so that when Roger Heyns comes he could be in a defensive rather than offensive position. (Recall the situation last October: 3000 people flooding the plaza—500 of them blockading a police car.)

But Heyns will probably not meet such a situation when he arrives October 1, a major reason being that there is very little to fight with or against that's permanent.

Dean of Students Arleigh Williams is currently drafting a new set of interim rules for September. He is holding informal consultation meetings with students, but nothing is to be binding.

The Free Student Union is lobbying for a six man committee to devise rules for the campus.

The committee would have one administrator, two faculty members and three students: a graduate student from the GCC (Graduate Coordinating Committee), an FSU representative and a representative from the political groups (and possibly an additional ASUC representative).

The committee would act as arbitrator after the rules went into effect.

Constance told them he couldn't make any commitment for fear of restricting Heyns. Williams, according to an FSU spokesman, said he didn't have the authority.

Any fight for such a committee would have to be postponed until October. In the meantime it would be rather pointless to have any major campaign against interim regulations.

However, it is a pity we have to wait another two months before we can formally start working on permanent rules for the campus.

Why must returning and new students in September find the University still in an "interim" state?

YOU SAY YOU WILL . . . National Band of New Zealand trombonist Colin Rodgers exchanges the traditional Maori greeting of nose rubbing with Meilene Chan of the New Zealand Maori dancers. Their groups will present an ASUC-sponsored concert August 11 in the Greek Theatre.

A Boy-Scout Knife On Wheels

By JOHN O'BRIEN
"The Yellow Rolls Royce" is a moving object lesson to the upwardly mobile, or anyone planning to purchase one of the higher priced brands. It is cleverly disguised as a trilogy of love stories, each centered about the same automobile. The film demonstrates the dangers lurking in the back seat of this all-purpose car, actually a kind of boy scout knife on wheels.

In round one, Jeanne Moreau uses her birthday present Rolls to cuckold her rich husband, played by Rex Harrison. In the only scene worth watching, the shame-faced wife and her heartbroken husband discuss their shattered marriage as they are chauffeured to their palatial country house. Good acting and a precise script merge successfully here and only here.

In round two, Shirley MacLaine plays another dumb but sincere gum chewer from Brooklyn while George C. Scott imitates a Chicago gangster. Allen Delon recites the lines of a sensitive gigolo.

Art Carney gets to drive the car, and acts as straight man for just about everyone. Sputtering but still running, the film lunges into round three. Here the Rolls turns up in the hands of patrician Ingrid Bergman who helps revolutionary-patriot Omar Sharif establish the Yugoslavian underground. And the Rolls? It's busy transporting the whiskered militia over the technicolor Yugoslav mountains. Terrence Rattigan, who wrote the script, has used a dangerously artificial device for tying together three unrelated dramas.

He can't decide whether to use the ton and a half machine as a conversation piece to break the ice and get on with the romantic interplay, or as a kind of lover's best friend, a necessary ingredient to any successful affair, like deodorant and mouthwash. The scriptwriter is probably less to blame for all the confusion than is the producer. The film is clearly a vehicle for stars in every sense of the word. It reminds one of the tall tales used by used car salesmen when trying to unload a particularly bothersome lemon.

Mime Troupe Show Funny But Disturbing

The S.F. Mime Troupe's new production, "A Minstrel Show" is not a run-of-the-mill plea for civil rights. The show lampoons everyone and everything with malicious glee. Both Negro and white stereotypes are laid bare in an extremely humorous and often disturbing way.

Six blackface actors dance on stage, singing and playing tamborines to begin this modern parody-revival of a theatre form popular in the nineteenth century. The form is old, the content is not. Within the framework of last one-liners and singing there is a shrewd and provocative insight into today's civil rights struggle.

The skits and songs in the show leave no egos unscathed—white liberal, ethnocentric Negroes, and Stephen Foster all feel the barb. There are skits about Negro History Week ("The President gave us a whole weel!"), the theory of evolution ("If we were all descendants of monkeys, where'd we get organ grinders?"), and an interracial love affair.

In the middle of the show a screen is lowered on stage and, to the singing accompaniment of the minstrels, a fantastic and brilliant movie by Robert Nelson is shown. The movie literally shatters one of the most degrading of American Negro stereotypes, the watermelon.

The songs by Foster, such as "Old Black Joe," which give a nineteenth century romanticist view of Negro slaves, are sung in a rather unusual manner.

Other songs have been written for the production as sort of variations on a theme by Foster by the show's writers, Saul Landeau and R. G. Davis.

Herman George has done a wonderful job with the costuming. The minstrels appear in tight blue silk suits and fantastic fright-wigs which fit the spirit of the show perfectly. The cast, made up of three Negroes and four whites, is all in blackface, except for the master of ceremonies, the straight man, Robert Slattery.

The show, also called "Jim Crow a Go-Go," owes much of its success to the Mime Troupe members' versatility as actors. The show goes from humor to serious well that it is difficult to know where to draw the line. It is an unusual experience.

You Don't Have to Try Hard

By MARSHALL A. LEDGER
How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying, currently at the Curran Theatre in San Francisco, is not about how to produce a musical successfully without really having a first-class musical. But it might be.

The true success is the caricatured business company, well performed by a fine acting company and mature technical aid.

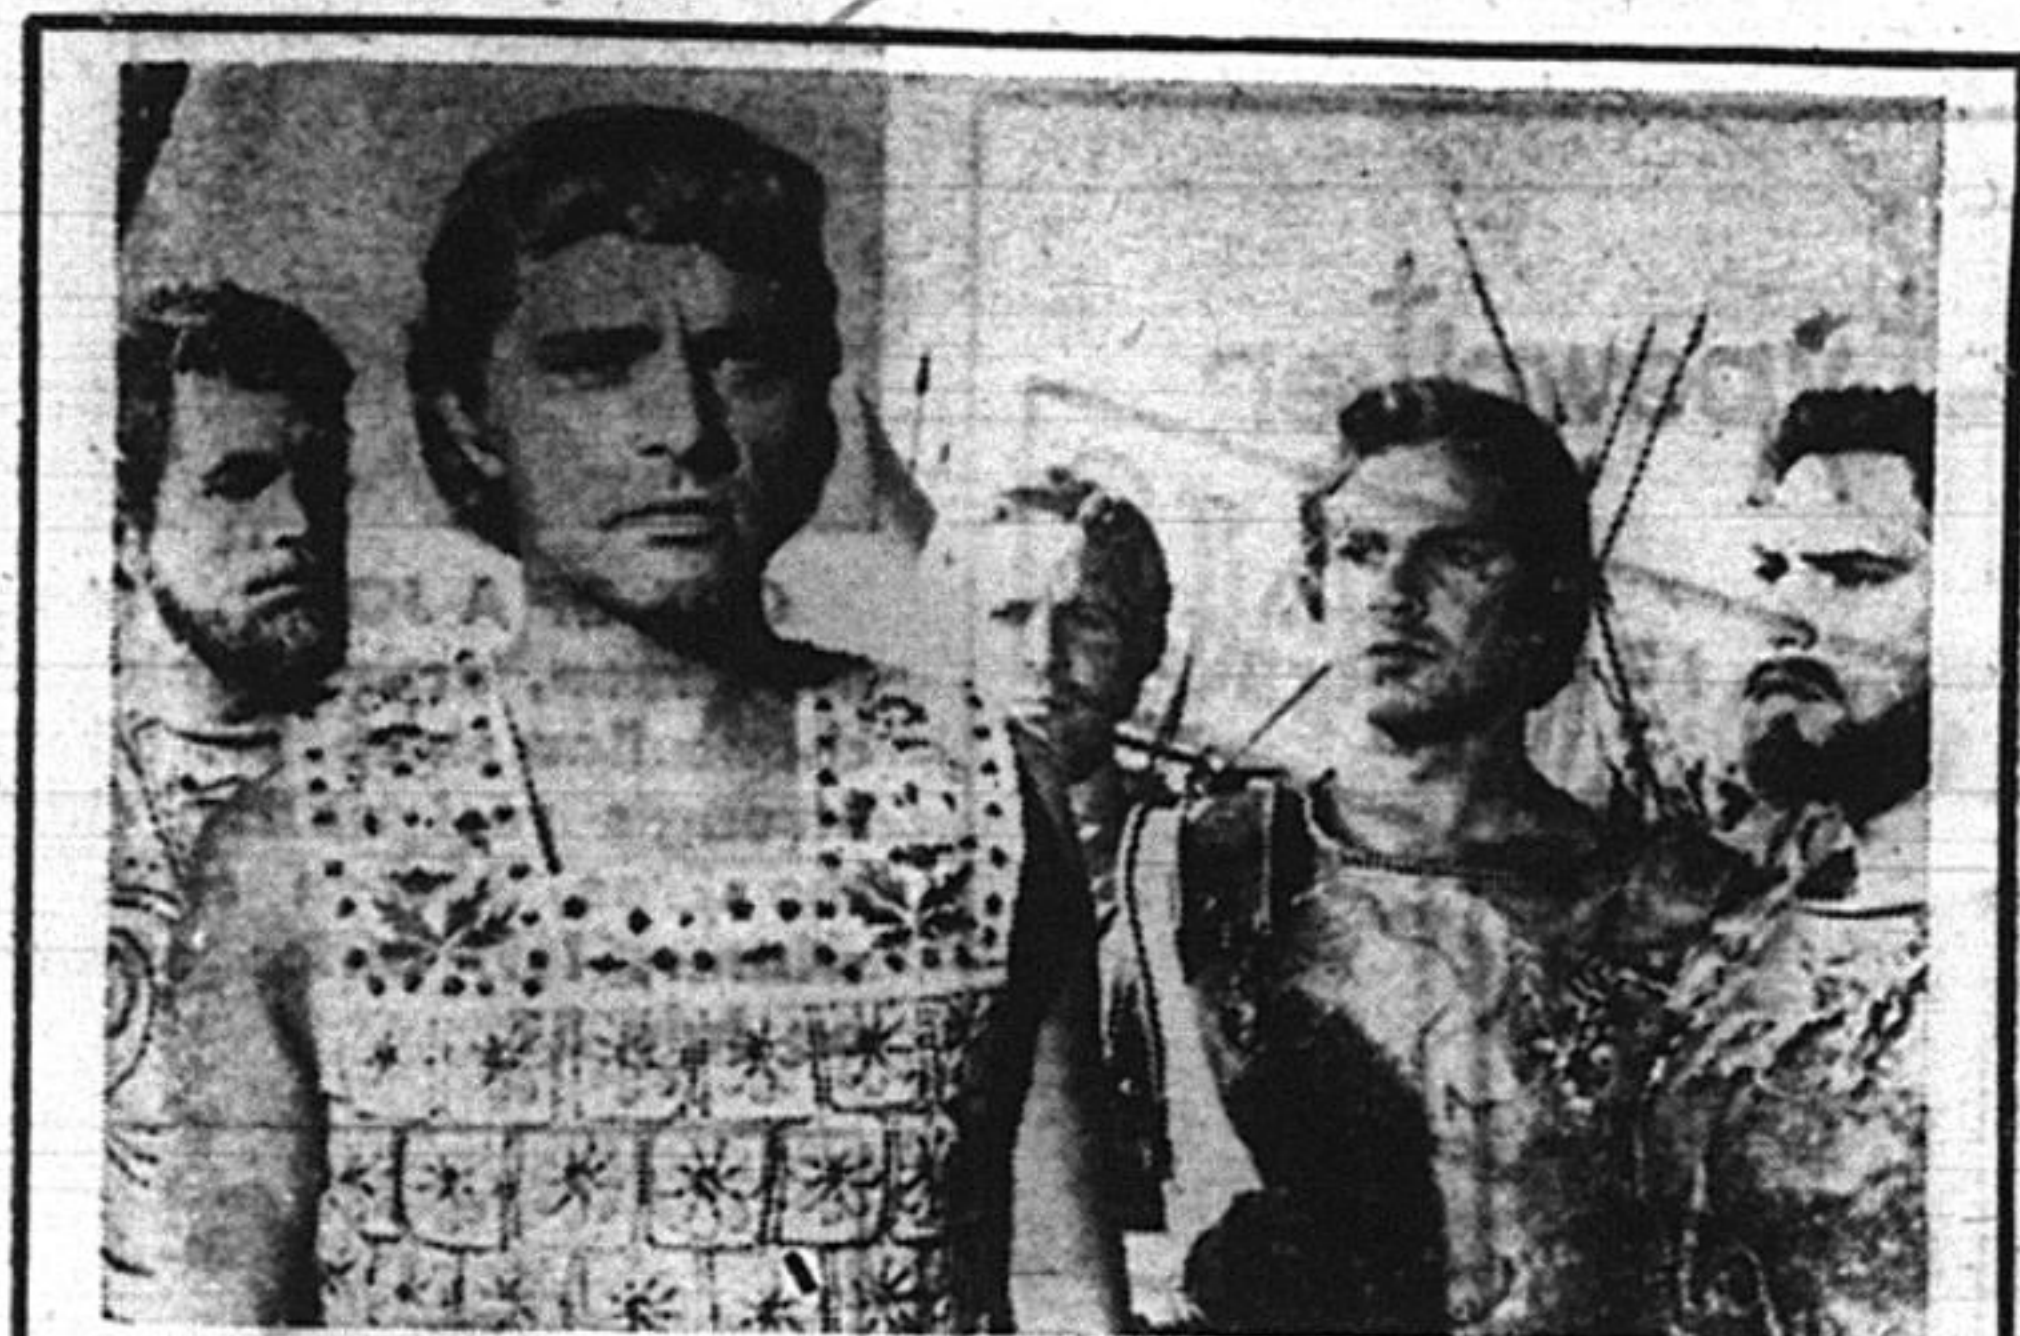

The stereotype we have come to expect of corporation life comes alive in the president and his employees, among whom are a backbiting nephew, legions of secretaries, and a window-washer-to-executive climber.

The latter is reading the book which is the play's title. Played by Ronnie Welsh, he smiles himself upward with Machiavellian innocence. But the part is bland, and it is the boss, Biggley (Jeff De Benning), whose gestures and facial insinuations are as cleverly interesting as his lines.

If audience applause is indicative of musical quality, only three numbers, "Coffee Break," "The Company Way," and "Brotherhood of Man," elicit a response more spontaneous than perfunctory. The intensely imaginative choreography manages to handle a huge office staff with precision and clarity.

Ultimately this production offers lively satire, Ronnie Welsh's ingratiating face, Maureen Arthur's bosom, and colorful stage settings. You can enjoy yourself without really trying.

"You mean there's not a single Tingoburger left in the whole Roman Empire? Are you kiddin' me?"

Two Virtuosos Play Brahms

This connoisseurs' album marks an historic occasion in recorded chamber music. Jascha Heifetz and the late William Kapell, in their only collaboration on records, pool resources to give a truly memorable performance of the Brahms work Clara Schumann simply called "magnificent." Orchestrally, Heifetz offers Ravel's Tzigane and Sinding's Suite, Op. 10, conducted with verve and veracity by Alfred Wallenstein.

Oakland Symphony Orchestra Will Join UC

The Oakland Symphony Orchestra will join the University of California next spring for a series of concerts of previously unperformed American contemporary music.

Lawrence Moe, chairman of the Department of Music at the U.C. Berkeley campus, has announced that The Rockefeller Foundation selected the University and the Oakland orchestra for a $17,514 grant to finance the project.

Conducted by Gerhard Samuel, the orchestra is scheduled for concerts April 28 and 29, 1966 at Berkeley; April 30 at Davis campus; and May 1 at Stanford University.

Music students from some 23 Bay Area institutions will be invited to the rehearsals. They will also meet with the composers whose works will be selected.

"These concerts have been planned to stimulate the performance and appreciation of contemporary American music," Professor Moe said. "The grant will make possible about nine rehearsals—which is more than normal—so that difficult works can be adequately performed."

Samuel will be in charge of selecting the scores, which he said he expects to do in the fall. Each of the four concerts will have the same program.

This is the second year the Rockefeller Foundation has sponsored such university-orchestra pairings to encourage contemporary music. This year there are seven others throughout the country, and last year there was a total of six.

The concerts have been arranged by Professor Moe; Donald Coney, chairman of the U.C. Committee for Arts and Lectures; Samuel; members of the Oakland Symphony Orchestra Association; and members of The Rockefeller Foundation staff.

Bowes New Admissions Chief

Edward W. Bowes, associated with the University for the past 25 years as a teacher, researcher, and administrator, has become the University's new director of admissions.

Announcement of his appointment was made by President Clark Kerr and Dr. Frank L. Kidner, dean of educational relations.

During the past year Bowes has been coordinator of statistical studies for the University in the office of the University Dean of Educational Relations. In his new post, he will develop and carry out University-wide admissions and redirection policies. He succeeds Howard B. Shontz, recently appointed assistant Chancellor for student services and registrar at the Santa Cruz campus.

ASUC Dance Next Thursday

At 7 p.m. Thursday, Pauley Ballroom will again be the scene of the ASUC "Just Dance" social dance classes.

Beginning and advanced students will be able to learn to swim, calyso, and bolero. They will also be shown the fox-trot, waltz, twist, cha-cha and tango.

Student Draft

Full time University students will have continued deferment from the draft, according to the local Selective Service Board.

Although President Johnson announced last week that draft calls will be increased to almost double what they are now, this will have little or no effect on University students, but will involve men not in college, according to a Draft Board spokesman.

Students are advised to come early to avoid delays in signing up.

Classes will be held every Monday and Thursday night during the second summer session.

Students Welcome

Students are welcome to the YWCA for coffee breaks, study in quiet, and relaxation. Coffee and tea are available in the cafeteria.

Students may use the patios, lounges and sundecks for lunching, study and relaxing.

Two library rooms equipped with comfortable chairs, magazines and study tables are all available.

The YWCA building at 2600 Bancroft Way (across from the Women's Gym) is open to the campus public 9 a.m. through 5 p.m. Monday through Friday only.
