

Will Probe Draft Protestors

Katzenbach Blasts SDS

A national investigation of groups involved in a campaign against the draft has been started by the Justice Department, Attorney General Nicholas Katzenbach revealed Sunday.

Speaking in Chicago, Katzenbach charged "some communists" were involved in the "beat the draft movement."

"We very well may have some prosecutions" he added.

One of the groups to be investigated is the Students for a Democratic Society (SDS), which has a campus chapter here.

At a noon rally yesterday, SDS member Barry Welsberg said U.S. Attorney Edward Hannahan had said in Chicago it was too early to tell if the anti-draft program was a violation of the laws against treason.

He said there were rumors at the SDS headquarters in Chicago that Clark Kissinger, former SDS national secretary, and Paul Booth, present SDS national secretary, will both be indicted by the government on charges of sedition.

The national SDS headquarters has denied authorship of a leaflet entitled "Brief Notes on the Ways and Means of Beating and Defeating the Draft."

The leaflet note 14 methods of staying out of the Army, including "being 'gay,'" "being an epileptic," "acquiring a jail record," and "being a bed-wetter."

President Lyndon Johnson, recuperating at Bethesda Naval Hospital, expressed concern that weekend demonstrations in a score of American cities might cause Peking and Hanoi to miscalculate American unity and determination.

White House press secretary Bill D. Meyers told newsmen at Bethesda hospital the President endorsed a Justice Department investigation of whether communists are involved in the parades and picketing.

Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, national Selective Service director, described young men who burn their draft cards as "misguided adolescents."

"I think they should be spank ed," he told a news conference during a visit to Quonset Point Naval Air Station in Rhode Island. "Maybe they should be inducted."

At the Capitol, Senator Thomas H. Kuchel, assistant Republican leader from California, declared that protesters who burn draft cards and fake illnesses to escape military service are "sowing the seeds of treason."

Slate Senator Dustin Miller Resigns Post

Representative-at-Large Dustin Miller of Slate will resign his seat on the ASUC Senate tonight.

The reason he gave for the resignation was the time the job required, "and besides, I'm just tired." Close friends on the Senate, while regretting his resignation, believe it may ultimately be a good thing for Miller since it will leave him more time for academic pursuits.

Among the business the Senate will consider tonight will be the ASUC discount store proposal.

ASUC President Jerry Goldstein said he was not sure the motion would ultimately pass, although he personally would support a discount store.

Goldstein said "the discount store is one of the most far-reaching pieces of legislation, internally, the Senate has had in a long time." But he also said he felt some study of where the money lost through the discount would come from should be made before the motion is passed.

Also to be discussed is the formation of a Senate committee on campus rules and a student referendum on the question of loyalty oaths for the information of the Regents.

The Senate will also consider a motion entitled "Faculty Fellowship." John Roberts, rep-at-

VDC Announces Second March

By DAVID NEWMAN

Amidst the aftermath of last week's marches, the Vietnam Day Committee announced tentative plans for another march to protest United States involvement in Vietnam.

Although no specific plans were announced, the date set for the new demonstration was Nov. 13. Meanwhile, Berkeley Mayor Wallace Johnson yesterday urged tougher controls on demonstration marches in Berkeley streets, and called on the University to help.

Johnson said, "Berkeley never again must have to cope with the uncertainty, the danger to life and property, the public inconvenience and the staggering cost of police protection involved in such episodes."

He said the time had come for close and sustained cooperation between the city and the University in the control of mass demonstrations.

Johnson said he will ask the Berkeley City Council today to clarify the city parade ordinance to "strengthen its applicability to demonstration parades."

Plans for the Nov. 13 march were discussed at a meeting of the VDC Steering Committee Sunday night, but "nothing crystallized," according to a VDC spokesman.

The spokesman said the general consensus of opinion was "as far as national and international demonstrations were concerned, it (the International Days of Protest) was extremely successful."

He called it the "largest demonstration against a war ever."

He was less enthusiastic about the East Bay protest march, calling it "successful as far as the large number of people who participated."

"It was unfortunate," he continued, "that the whole right to protest — of redress of grievances — was brought so much into focus by the Oakland police."

He said few plans had been made concerning the next march at the Steering Committee meeting because "we were all still pretty tired from the past few days."

He indicated more definitive plans would probably come out of the VDC mass membership meeting at 5 p.m. today on the Sproul Hall steps.

That meeting will be recessed and then continued at 7 p.m., in either 145 Dwinelle Hall or 204 Engineering Building, but the exact location had not yet been fixed.

The site of the second half of the meeting will be announced at the first meeting.

VDC Claims Police 'Helped Violence'

By MIKE MAGGI

Speakers from VDC, FSU, and SDS yesterday charged the Oakland police with instigating violence, and called some Washingtonians "traitors."

At a noon rally on the Sproul Hall steps Michael Rogin, assistant professor of political science, charged Oakland police with allowing a "situation to exist for violence."

He also charged the Oakland police "defended violence" with their blockade "allowing" the Hell's Angels to pass through police lines to attack the marchers.

The rally was sponsored by the Vietnam Day Committee, (VDC), The Free Student Union, (FSU), and The Students for a Democratic Society, (SDS).

Steve Weisman added, "This is not the first time police have used riot makers."

Weisman charged, "On Nov. 13 I think there is even greater chance Chief Edward Toothman will try to engage us in a riot."

Rogin charged Toothman wanted a riot so his position in the local "power structure" would increase.

Rogin also charged the press with neglect of their duty for not raising the issue of "free speech" when the marchers were denied a parade permit.

Weisman called on faculty members who signed the open letter "to come down off their high horses and join us in the streets."

The open letter printed recently in the Daily Californian, was signed by some 300 faculty members.

Weisman continued, "(We must) throw our bodies on the line; this problem (the Vietnam War) cannot be solved by discussion in the ivory tower."

According to a VDC leaflet distributed at the rally, "Friday U.S. Senator Stennis (D-Miss.) on the Senate floor called on the Administration to immediately move to jerk this movement up by the roots and grind it to bits before it has a chance to spread further."

"This means us," Bettina Aptheker of the VDC said.

Miss Aptheker charged that the

Down in Front!

Opera Goes American

By NANCY TURPIN

It sounded more like a burlesque show than an opera. But it was an opera: Lohengrin, by Wagner, performed Sunday afternoon in the Greek Theatre.

As the first act was beginning and the Brabantian regent, Telramund was accusing the opera's heroine, Elsa, of murdering her brother, the audience was respectfully attentive.

From the slick metal folding chairs below, past the curved rows of stone seats, the audience was becoming involved in Wagner's music.

Then came the Terrace: that democratic slope at the top of the theatre, where the tickets are cheap and the livin' is easy.

"DOWN IN FRONT!" came the old burlesque house cry. But this time it was directed at the continual clot of late comers who lounged behind the last row of stone seats and blocked the view of terracers.

"Down in front!" Silence. Wait for a reaction. No one moves. Some play deaf. Then a little girl with long red hair and aqua capri pants kneels out of the way. Tokenism will not do; The view's still blocked!

"Down in front!" The people on the terrace were getting restless now. Many couldn't see the opera's action, and the shouting was quickly obliterating the music. "Move," a man in bermuda shorts and no-shirt commanded. "Move."

Black suited ushers were getting frantic, as segments of the terrace crowd grew menacing. One usher in horn-rimmed glasses looked gulpingly from terracers to view-blockers and back again.

As the ushers swept one group of offenders to the side, a new trickle would drift in and the shouting would begin again. "Sit down. We can't see!" Finally a

Junior College Vote Set Today

A $47 million junior college bond issue will go on the ballot today for voters of Berkeley, Oakland and four other East Bay cities.

The money from the bond would be used to develop three or four new junior college campuses in Oakland and perhaps Berkeley.

The new junior colleges would replace the current Merritt and Laney Colleges of the Peralta Junior College District.

Cesar Chavez, General Director of the National Farm Workers Association, will speak at a rally at noon today.

He will discuss the general strike of farm workers which has been going on in the San Joaquin Valley for six weeks.

Rule-Drafting Lyons: ASUC Senate 'Sandbox'

By CAROL LIEBMAN

A "University-wide meeting" to determine the form of a committee to deal with student rules and regulations was recommended Sunday by the ASUC Senate Committee on the Rules.

The committee's report said, "It seems rather logical to hold a University-wide meeting where the various alternatives could be voted upon, after being described to those present."

The committee received three proposals for a rules committee:

- The Searle Proposal for a committee consisting of five students, four faculty members, and one administrator.

- The Cornet Proposal for a committee consisting of five students, five faculty members, and one advisory administrator.

- The Stein Proposal which would set up a committee open to all interested. The report of the Senate committee said it would be roughly comparable to the Athenian form of democracy.

The primary concern of the committee, the report said, "centered upon the issue of legitimacy."

It said the student body did not feel a proposal handed to it on "a silver platter" was a "legitimate approach" to student conduct rules.

"The ASUC Senate is a 'sandbox'. It's a group of high-school-barking politicians. And I'm second dog," according to ASUC First Vice President Tim Lyons.

"But the Senate is only a part of the ASUC. The Senate has to decide ASUC policies.

"Its being a sandbox doesn't detract from the ASUC," he said.

"I'm not expecting any small changes in the structure of the ASUC from the Constitutional Convention," Lyons continued.

"The outcome of the convention depends on the type of people elected to it," he said. Lyons said he plans to run for a seat on the convention committee.

"We can only hope that the Regents say 'yes' to the new constitution. Several of them have told me that much depends on how responsibly the convention is run.

"By 'responsibly' they mean the procedure should go through strictly legal channels," Lyons continued.

"The ASUC should be as autonomous as possible.

"But it must be remembered that at present the Regents have indirect control of the ASUC through the compulsory dues included in the incidental fee," he said.

Lyons added most of the students really do want a stronger student government as well as the enfranchisement of the graduate students.

"The ASUC really offers a lot to the student:

"Without it, there would be no special services, no club support, and few cultural activities," he said.

One of Lyons's most important duties is serving as chairman of the ASUC Financial Committee. This week the committee will consider the proposed co-op ASUC Store.

"The co-op store is great, per se. But it has its problems.

"The lowest meaningful discount is 10 per cent. This means a loss of $150,000 from ASUC revenues, half the total budget," Lyons said.

"We must find new revenues and right now there are very few possible sources," he suggested.

Lyons said these possibilities include cuts in salaries of some ASUC officials, a boost in the incidental fee, or matching funds with the University.

Lyons said he was opposed to the current co-op proposal before Fi-Com but, "the students should be the ones to make the final decision.

"With all the elections coming up, the proposal could be placed on the ballot. A matter of two or three weeks' delay is not crucial, since the store couldn't go co-op until the next fiscal year," he said.

Lyons, a senior from Davis, is majoring in international economics. After graduation he plans to enter law school.

Wildavsky Defends US War Policy

While the VDC was protesting United States involvement over the weekend, Aaron Wildavsky of the political science department was defending the same in a Family Day Speech Saturday.

"America's moral position is unassailable," Wildavsky declared.

Mrs. Elizabeth Chilton, chairman of Family Day and assistant dean of students, said there was absolutely no connection between Wildavsky's speech and the action of the Vietnam Day Committee. She added all the speeches were decided upon during the summer.

Wildavsky's text said, "the Communists would kill more people, break more spirits, destroy more liberties, invade more leisure time, and take more wealth. Instead of a dictatorship which oppresses some of the people some of the time, the people of Vietnam would get a regime which represses all of the people all of the time. Turning a people over to a totalitarian regime is hardly a moral act."

"We are told that the United States stands condemned because its government has withheld vital information from its own people," the assistant professor of political science said.

"The opponents of American policy in Vietnam thereby accuse themselves of urging citizens not merely to oppose but to have contempt for their government; to run, jump, leap, and (sometimes) tear up draft cards on the basis of information which they can not have because it has allegedly suppressed. This is indeed a new form of cynicism."

"The final charge of immorality hurled at the American Government is undoubtedly true—our soldiers and arms do kill people; there is violent death in Vietnam."

"The same could be said of our war with Nazi Germany or any war for that matter. The sin of causing death remains a sin; it can only be mitigated by the justice of the causes together with a statement of why alternatives were worse," he said.

Wildavsky stated that United States withdrawal from Vietnam would probably result in more death and destruction.

Banks Refuse Accounts To Campus Sex Freedom Forum

By BILL MASTERSON

The Campus Sexual Freedom Forum (SFF) has now been denied a bank account by every bank in Berkeley, including Wells Fargo as previously reported.

Larry Baldwin, Forum president, was not surprised at the reaction to the SFF plea.

"I've been in the sexual freedom game a long time. We had little old ladies kick down our table on two separate occasions this summer," he said.

The manager of the Berkeley National Bank told Baldwin, "It's too controversial for any bank in Berkeley to handle."

Clinton Tremain, manager of the Telegraph Avenue Bank of America, said, "The name may be offensive to some of the customers."

"It isn't a matter of liberal-conservative. I have the Vietnam Day Committee account right here."

J. F. Reis Jr. of the Telegraph and Russell branch of Crocker-Citizens Bank said he could not think of a reason why the bank might not accept the account.

Then Reis said, "Sexual? Oh, I though you said 'sectional'."

Reis said if the Forum's name were changed there probably would be no problem.

Baldwin replied the Forum considered this and decided, "If there is going to be sexual freedom, people are going to have to learn to accept a title like this."

Reis said, "You have to follow the middle of the road . . . the press might pick it up and they naturally sensationalize it."

The Forum is not affiliated with the Sexual Freedom League which staged a nude "wade-in" in San Francisco this summer.

Baldwin said his organization does not believe in the means the League uses to get its message to the public.

Some Forum members, including himself, belonged to the League, he said, but the Forum is "basically" conservative in nature — it believes in using education instead of sit-ins."

large, will propose it to supplement "On Prominent Persons," which will be returning from the Finance Committee.

The "Persons" motion proposes that interesting persons, not normally connected with any university, be hired by the ASUC to be available to students and student groups to talk, lecture, debate, and discuss items of mutual interest.

When the plan was discussed at Fi-Com, a member of the Committee pointed out that there are already many important men on campus who would be of interest to students but who are not readily available to them.

Robert's motion proposes these people be "hired" or "enlisted" by the ASUC to make them more accessible to students through a program similar to that proposed for non-university affiliated persons.

New Observatory For UC By 1966

Construction of a small astronomical observatory is under way this month in a secluded valley site ten miles east of Berkeley.

When completed early in 1966, the University's new Leuschner Observatory will open a valuable range of research experience for graduate students enrolled on campus.

Instruments at the facility will include a versatile new 30-inch reflector telescope and a remodeled 20-inch telescope that has been in use at Berkeley for 10 years.

Grants from the National Science Foundation are aiding the construction of the observatory and the purchase of the new telescope.

Site of the observatory is the University's Russell property north of Lafayette in Contra Costa County—a portion of the Russell Evergreen Tree Farm donated to the University in 1963 as a bequest of the late Alexander S. Russell.

Athelstan's Almanac - Or 'A Dzay With Dzura'

ED. NOTE: This is the first of a two-part series on a day with Stan Dzura in Cowell Memorial Hospital.

The kindly, gray-haired nurse peeked her head around the corner and glanced into the room.
By LESLIE LAFAYETTE

"Hello, Double-Ugly," she greeted Stan.

Stan laughed. "That's Nurse Lurch," he told me. "You rang?" he said, doing a keen imitation of the huge butler on the Addams Family TV Show.

And so it goes in the daily routine of Rex Athelstan Dzura, Cal's almost-All-American who was injured in an automobile accident in Australia and is confined at Cowell Hospital with a bone infection.

Stan seemed to be in terrific spirits. The nurse outside told me, "He's a real character — we just love him." Stan's story was a little different:

"At first I wasn't too nice to the nurses. Over in Australia I'd get mad when they wouldn't tell me my temperature so I'd throw things at them. When they threatened to bring the orderlies I'd grab a chain from above the bed and wrap it around my knuckles. 'You bring as many as you want, honey,' I'd say. I've settled down now, though. Guess I've accepted my fate."

He laughed at the rumors concerning his illness.

"Actually," he grinned, "I'm pregnant. If I keep eating I'll look like it!" He patted his rotund stomach. "I eat double portions of everything . . . I'm back up to 230 now. At one time though, I was down to 185 . . . boy, did I look awful."

He tried to explain his infection in simple terms, but got wound up in long words and doctor-like expositions.

"The staphylococcus was resistant to penicillin," he said. "In fact, the damn bug was thriving on it. So they tried several other antibiotics and finally found some that kill the infection—oh, I'm going to major in Pre-Med," he interrupted himself, "the hell with playing football."

On the subject of football, however, Stan became serious.

"Sure, it's a disappointment to know that I may never play again. But I look at it this way—there's always something else. You can't feel sorry for yourself forever. I never did too much thinking about the future before. But now I think about it a lot."

Stan's room is filled with gifts, cards, a TV, a radio, and his own phone. But the best thing that's happened to him so far is the end of isolation. He is now allowed to have visitors.

"Before, people who came in here had to dress up like Ben Casey's assistant," he remarked. "It's nice to see real people again."

I asked him about one of his "typical days."

"Well, I watch TV until 6:30 a.m.," he laughed. "Breakfast is at 7:00 . . . and then the blood-lady comes in and takes samples. After that I faint."

"Then they start the whole rigmarole with washing and changing the bed and cleaning up. Around 10:30 the physical therapist comes in and starts working on me with that thing." He indicated a vicious-looking electrical machine in the corner. "I swear she's going to kill me one of these days."

Dan Berry Named NorCal Back of Week

Quarterback Dan Berry was chosen Northern California Back of the Week at the Writer's Luncheon yesterday and Bear fans are hopeful he can repeat the performance this Saturday as the Bears go after win number four in a row.

Berry, who didn't start last Saturday and who probably won't start against UCLA this Saturday, will have to be in his top form if the Bears are to take their second league contest.

"We are going to be right up to our neck this weekend," Coach Ray Willsey told the writers, "because UCLA is making great strides toward becoming a fine football team."

They have lost to powerful Michigan State, 13-3; beaten Penn State and Syracuse, and tied Missouri last week. The Bruins feature a varied attack built around sophomore quarterback Gary Beban, who has played very well thus far, and a stout defense which held Missouri's vaunted running game to no touchdowns last week. Both Tiger TD's were on long kick returns.

The Bears, though, are also improving rapidly and the game should be a real dog fight. The Washington victory very well could be the turning point of the season for Cal as the Bears were able to come back after being down early in the first quarter.

"We were very pleased with the win from a technical standpoint for two reasons," commented Willsey. "First we didn't panic after we were behind 12-3. Our offensive line hit better than it has all week, especially Dick Williams, and our backs were hitting the line with a lot of authority."

"Secondly, we stopped Washington near the end of the game when they might have been able to take advantage of our late mistake."

Cal and UCLA are very similar in many ways. They were both picked for a spot near the cellar in the AAWU race, but both have shown to be much better than preseason predictions. Moreover, they each feature an offense built around the special abilities of the quarterback.

Beban has gained 648 yards total offense for the Bruins and has proved himself to be a fine signal caller, while the Bears can boast two QB's who between them have 573 yards total offense.

Though Berry was the back of the week Jim Hunt no doubt will start. This may seem a bit of a contradiction, but Ray Willsey explained his philosophy, "The start of a ball game is the hardest part for the quarterback; therefore we like Hunt to start because he has played that position longer."

"He can probe the defense and by this we can eliminate some of our plays. Then Berry, who is more of a natural athlete, can come in and do his stuff."

Injury-wise, the Bears could be in real trouble as linebacker Greg Palamoutain is in Cowell Hospital with a severe Charlie horse and his status is doubtful.

Great Moments

'59 Cagers Caged West and Oscar

By VIC BEDOIAN

California's Golden Bears did not receive much fanfare when they arrived in Louisville for the NCAA tournament in 1959, despite the fact that they had bowled over 14 straight opponents. All the publicity was given to the Bearcats of Cincinnati and the West Virginia Mountaineers.

THEIRS was to be the big game, for in it would be pitted two of the nation's most publicized stars, Oscar Robertson of Cincinnati and Jerry West of the Mountaineer squad. One problem developed—they didn't get to play it.

The underdog Bears went ahead at the tipoff on a driving lay-up by Al Buch and within six minutes the Bears led 14-6. But Cincinnati, led by Big O's four field goals, took the lead, 33-29, at the half. California was cold in that first half hitting only 14 of 43 attempts but at the same time the rugged defense allowed the Bearcats only 28 shots.

The Californians still were off the mark as the second half began and Cincy stretched its lead to 36-29. Then Cal began to toughen up as tip-ins by Bill McClintock and Darryl Imhoff and a driving jumper by Buch put the Bears ahead 37-36. With nine minutes gone Robertson hit his first and last field goal of the second half to tie it up again at 38-38. The teams battled back and forth in the next few minutes, first one going in front and then the other.

With the pressure highest, the Golden Bears took the lead on a hook by Imhoff and went on to an inspiring 64-58 victory.

Next came West Virginia with its fabulous All-American Jerry West.

The Mountaineers started out as if they would be the team to subdue California as they shot to a 23-13 lead. With 8:17 left in the first half Coach Pete Newell sent in his reserves. Now came the payoff to that early season strategy of the Kansas State game, for the second stringers were ready. Great scoring work by Jack Grout, Bernie Simpson and center Dick Doughty gave the Bears a 39-33 advantage at halftime.

Cal continued its rampage in the second half, but the West-led Mountaineers were not to be had easily. They continued to hang tough. Then—all-at-once—the Bears began to fall apart under the full court press of the West Virginians. For the first time the usually cool and poised Californians lost their composure.

They began to lose the ball on steals and on walking penalties, they threw it away and with 3:07 remaining the Mountaineers were within three points.

With less than a minute left, Simpson attempted to inbound the ball and it was stolen. West shot—but it was blocked by Imhoff—too late, for the official ruled it goal-tending and Cal's lead was down to one point at 69-68. The Bears worked the ball around and finally Imhoff shoved it in for 71-68. With seven seconds left West Virginia scored but it was too late. California controlled the ball and the rags-to-riches story was complete. California had won the NCAA championship.

Six National League 'Mural Teams Scramble For 1st Spot

By JAY BERNSTEIN

The already tight National League intramural race got a little bit tighter this past week and the top six teams now have only 30 points separating them. SAE took a slight 5 point advantage over AEPi, and TKE drew to within 10 points of the leader. SAM follows with the Phi Deltas and ZBT close on their heels.

The American League shows a surprising Putnam Hall only 40 points behind the front-running Commuters. Bowles, Boalt #1, and Norton round out the top five. American League powerhouse Boalt #1 continued to dominate junior circuit football as they trounced a strong KXS football team by a 32-0 count. Other American League results had NROTC falling again; this time it was to a good Bowles club by a 20-10 margin. Ridge edged Euclid 16-8, Cloyne defeated Oxford 12-6, Boalt #2 trounced International House 40-0, and Ehrman beat Priestley 20-0. Other results: Commuters 26, Barrington 6; Norton 22, Griffiths 12; Deutsch 18, Putnam 8; Smyth 16, ROMP 8; and LeConte 22, MBA 14. TKE nipped ADPhi 8-6, the lone National League contest.

Southern California Ranked 4th After Clutch Win Over Stanford

Southern California's 14-0 victory over Stanford Saturday gave the Trojans the fourth spot in the Associated Press's weekly football poll of sportswriters and sportscasters, in addition to the pole position in the race to the Rose Bowl.

The battle for number one accolade was fought at Fayetteville, Ark., before a national television audience, and Arkansas won it with a thrilling 27-24 victory over Texas.

The Razorbacks blew a 20-0 lead and trailed 24-20 with five minutes left in the game. A succession of passes from quarterback Jon Brittenum to end Bobby Crockett sparked a long Arkansas drive to the winning touchdown.

Michigan State hopped over Nebraska to second place by trouncing Ohio State 32-7. The massive Spartans crunched the Buckeye ground attack to a game total of minus 22 yards. Nebraska is third and Texas fell to fifth.

The Top Ten, with first place votes in parentheses and total points based on a 10-9-8 etc. formula:

Faculty Senate Backs Committee Endorsement of Byrne Report

The Academic Senate's Committee on Senate Policy report, which strongly favors the controversial Byrne Report plan for campus autonomy, was confirmed at the Oct. 11 meeting of the Senate.

But the vote of confidence did not bind the Academic Senate to any specific Committee proposal.

In the wake of student unrest last year, the Regents had authorized an investigation of the University system by Jerome Byrne, a Los Angeles attorney.

The results of his report substantiate many student grievances and called for a restructuring of the University system in the form of a "commonwealth."

In a choice between a centralized university system and an autonomous one, the Policy Committee strongly declared itself in favor of the latter.

"Regarding alternative forms of autonomy," the Committee report said, "It believes that the conception of individually chartered universities under a single Board of Regents is a useful starting point for discussion."

A university composed of mous school under a single Board of Regents would mean reducing the role of the University president and greatly increasing the role of the faculties and the chancellors on the individual campuses.

Thomas Kent, Policy Committee chairman and professor of city planning, said the "commonwealth" form provides campuses where the individual "chancellor and faculty senate work as partners in a common enterprise" of education.

In an interview at a meeting of the American Council on Education last week, President Clark Kerr sharply opposed any commonwealth arrangement.

"In a commonwealth any member can withdraw at any time, and no one really wants that," Kerr said. Instead, Kerr preferred decentralization of the University along federal lines.

Kent said the Senate would continue to propose and make policies on each campus "in those areas under its authority."

The chancellor would provide "effective leadership."

The Policy Committee will continue to investigate the "commonwealth" plan and will accept alternate proposals before presenting the entire draft for an Academic Senate vote.

Any final action on the Senate's proposals would have to come from the Regents.

Even the "commonwealth" system has three alternative forms:

• A system of governance in which the chancellor would be assigned primary responsibility for policy-making in most of the important areas of campus life. The Senate would function primarily as an advisory body with perhaps sole responsibility for certain narrowly defined academic matters. • A system in which the Senate assumes primary responsibility for policy-making and the chancellor serves as its executive agent.

• A system in which the chancellor and Senate would have defined and distinct areas of primary responsibility. This is the system which the Policy Committee recommends.

The Policy Committee reported that "an institution as complicated as the University of California cannot be operated permanently by the methods appropriate to building it."

"While in the past a certain measure of centralized direction may have been desirable, now such direction becomes a constrain on more subtle types of achievement," Kent said.

LBJ Decries Demonstrations Against Vietnam War Policy

By FRANK CORMIER
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson, conferring with aides after a restless night, expressed concern yesterday about weekend demonstrations against his Vietnam policy lest they cause miscalculation in Peking and Hanoi.

Johnson, up early in his third-floor suite at the Bethesda Naval Hospital, also voiced an endorsement of the Justice Department investigation of possible communist involvement in the antiwar parading and picketing.

Press Secretary Bill D. Meyers said Johnson talked about the demonstrators during an after-breakfast conference. Present were Meyers and presidential assistant Jack Valenti.

Meyers said Johnson was "surprised and concerned that the actions of the few would be interpreted as the opinion of the many by our adversaries abroad."

The press aide said recent public opinion polls actually show increased support for Johnson's Vietnam policy.

"The President is not unaware of that steadily increasing support on the part of the American people," Meyers said.

Meyers disclosed that Atty. Gen. Nicholas Katzenbach called Johnson during the weekend to discuss the Justice Department investigation of the demonstrations. In response to a question, he said he didn't know whether the President had inspired the inquiry. But he said Johnson wants the investigation "concluded as soon as possible."

With the President in his 10th day of postsurgery convalescence, Meyers said he did not know yet when Johnson might return to the White House. According to the doctors, most patients are discharged after 10 to 14 days.

Meyers said Johnson was sleepless, restless and awake off and on during the night and still is in pain.

The pain was said to be centered around the abdominal incision through which surgeons removed the President's gall bladder and a kidney stone on Oct. 8.

FBI Makes First Arrest For Protest Burning of Draft Card

MANCHESTER, N.H. (AP)—David J. Miller, 22, a college graduate who says the draft is immoral, was arrested yesterday as the first person charged under the new federal law banning draft card destruction.

Six FBI agents arrested Miller, 22, of Syracuse, N.Y., when he stopped at a service station for repair of a flat tire that had stalled a "peace crusade" he and five other members of a Catholic worker organization planned in New England.

Brushing a shock of red hair from his forehead, Miller entered no plea when he was arraigned before U.S. Commissioner Peter Bourque. He was ordered held in lieu of $500 bail.

Miller, a ban-the-bomb pin on the lapel of his coat, said he didn't want counsel. He will represent himself at a preliminary removal hearing Friday before Bourque.

Miller was arrested on a warrant issued by U.S. Commissioner Earl Bishop in New York City.

The FBI identified Miller as a man who burned what he said was his draft card Friday before hundreds of spectators and demonstrators near the armed forces induction station on Whitehall Street in New York City.

The incident came at the start of the nationwide demonstrations protesting the U.S. role in Viet Nam.

The new law, signed by President Johnson Aug. 30, carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

In Washington, Sen. Thomas H. Kuchel, R-Calif., said persons who burn draft cards and fake illnesses to escape military service "are sowing the seeds of treason."

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana said he was "shocked" by pictures of protesters burning draft cards.

Rally Speakers Blast 'Traitors'

United States is waging a racist war in Asia, "the white man against the colored man."

She also charged that the majority of people in this country would not want war if they knew the facts. She said, "The source of this violence is the ruling power, the ruling elite, alright damn it, the ruling class."

She said, "The real traitors in this country are the ones sitting in Washington. They are the traitors and we are the preservers of freedom and democracy and peace."

It was also announced that the Justice Department has begun to investigate SDS.

Vote for Bond Issue

Voter apathy today may result in the defeat of a crucial $47 million junior college bond issue. Such a defeat may lead to a loss of accreditation for the local junior colleges, and would leave the district's 12,000 students studying in overcrowded buildings.

Defeat of the bond issue will also mean unwise financing of the district's junior colleges since taxpayers now have to pay for upkeep of the old junior college buildings.

Six cities — Alameda, Albany, Berkeley, Emeryville, Oakland, and Piedmont — which comprise the Peralta Junior College District, are being asked to approve a bond issue that would enable the District to buy land and build four new campuses.

Currently, the District houses its 12,000 academic and vocational students at Merritt and Laney Colleges, leased from the Oakland Unified School District for $645,000 a year.

Many organizations, including the Alameda County Taxpayers Association, the Oakland City Council, and the Berkeley City Council, have endorsed the bond issue.

By 1970, district officials judged, current leasing costs and out-of-district fees could amount to more than the cost of funding the proposed bond issue.

New colleges are desperately needed since present facilities are overcrowded and will be unable to accommodate the anticipated 1975 enrollment of 24,000 students.

The Accreditation Commission of the Western College Association has said that permanent facilities must be developed or the colleges may lose their accreditation.

If this happens, students will be unable to transfer work taken at the colleges to four year institutions.

Since this is a special election, today's turnout will probably be small. There is a good possibility the bond issue will not receive the two-third vote required for passage. For these reasons we urge you to vote for the bond issue today.

review Yarbrough

By PAUL BARROS

Glenn Yarbrough is the Al Hirt of the vocal world: he distills, bastardizes and emasculates any valid music he can find. Like Al Hirt, he has tremendous musical facility; his voice is beautiful, unique and has a haunting tenor quality which I have not heard anywhere else.

But it is put to supreme waste. "Stanyan Street," admittedly, is a moving and wonderful ballad, but songs like "When the Honey Winds Blow," or "Whatcha Gonna Do," are reminiscent of the worst songs Jimmie Rogers ever did.

This is the Kingston Trio approach to music: everything is deliriously escapist and happy, or hollow and maudlin. Many of the songs have been written by Rod McKuen.

The best description of McKuen's material is Ralph Gleason's (SF Chronicle) — "Rod McKuen... songs sound like numbers from a high school musical."

Yarbrough sang his hit song, "Baby the Rain Must Fall," which is thoroughly enjoyable. He really seems to get into it. But directly afterwards, he sang, "It's Gonna Be Fine" and I couldn't help thinking, What a great number this would be if the Supremes got hold of it!

So it is neither the material nor the singer's approach to it that can be held specifically to blame. It is a careful combination of both, which has attracted a certain huge audience in America in the last two or three years.

His folksy image helps to draw a crowd, but his great popularity is as hard (or easy) to explain as that of Lawrence Welk.

There is also reason to suspect Yarbrough's musical integrity. In 1957 he cut a single called "Here We Go Baby." The record was rock'n'roll, and very bad, too. It never made it, and Glenn was next heard singing English folk ballads. He then joined the Lime-lighters, who were VERY popular for a while, and it was his voice which gave the group distinction.

Now, Yarbrough has a song out that complains about the noise that has been imported from Britain in the last two years, called "That Good-Time Music."

Besides making a complete musical turn-around, Mr. Yarbrough has also made a gross error. In the song, he laments the loss of the blues in popular music. If "Spider and the Fly" isn't blues, what is?

I'm sure the blues has nothing to do with the slick massacre of Jesse Fuller's "San Francisco Bay Blues," which Yarbrough sang Saturday night.

The audience seemed to dig this Tin Pan Alley, and the concert was sell-out. There was also a moderately funny comedian from Louisiana named Biff Rose, who was received well.

The funniest line of the evening, though, was in a conversation overheard after the concert: "Geez, he was great!" "Yeah, but I liked Jack Jones better."

Letters to the Ice Box

Co-op Store
To the Ice Box:
 ... As a member of FSU Local 12 (Co-op Interest Local) I would like to point out some of the advantages of having a co-operative student book store rather than a discount operation...

A co-operative is a business, but it belongs to the people who use it. These customer-owners set policy and yet share their control equally...

What would be "profits" in an ordinary business (i.e. the present ASUC store) become "savings" in a co-op, available to be paid back to the member-customers as refunds in proportion to each one's patronage...

By waiting until the end of the fiscal period to determine what amount can be returned to the purchaser the operation is assured of greater financial security...

A co-operative store could depend on a certain amount of consumer loyalty...

A co-op might also lead to better service from the store. An elected management would surely be more responsive to the needs and desires of students...

There has been some concern over the increased tax liability of a co-op, but the only additional tax paid would be on the money kept by the store for reinvestment. The law requires that ten per cent of the earnings be retained, and the tax on this sum can be regarded as trivial...

A discount store, on the other hand, will undoubtedly result in poorer service and greater financial risk. Volume will increase only as long as the ASUC store has the lowest price. Opposition can be expected from other stores and if they discount high mark-up items like paper and toilet articles the ASUC might quickly realize that it couldn't use such items in its own store to subsidize the discount on text books. If the discount experiment failed it is highly unlikely that any future attempt to organize a co-op store could get off the ground...

We also urge students and members of the faculty to inform the ASUC Senators of their feelings about this matter. There is no reason we could not have a functioning co-operative book store by September.

—Jim Conley
 Senior, English

New Low

To the Ice Box:
 The Daily Californian has reached a new low this year both in news content and editorial comment. It is no longer the spokesman for a large part of our campus, but the representative of the local political activists.

The front page pictures from last Friday and Monday serve to show the new face of the newspaper. Friday's front page featured our very own VDC's conception of LBJ, while Monday's front page carried a story and picture of an "out of order" bare-foot orator that should have been relegated to page seventeen. Monday's lead article did not proclaim Ron Jones' election as ASUC Senator, but rather the failure of Slate to obtain a majority on the Senate. Of course, the childish filthy word people have remained on the front page, as has the Vietnam Day Committee.

Editorially, the fare has been even worse. Editorials have encouraged membership in the Free Student Union, establishment of a co-op bookstore (even when such a store would eliminate many ASUC activities), and, most recently use of the Cambridge-voting (Continued on page 9)

leymour samuel davis

It was a typical Grant flick—schmaltsy, ripping color, dull. Willie loved it. Willie is a professional moviegoer. He adores movies. All movies. There isn't a movie put out in the last decade he hasn't seen. At least twice.

I'm different. I like movies with class. "Boy," I said, "that was even worse than 'Dead Eyes of London.'" Willie shook his head. "A great 'C' flick," he intoned, "first rate."

"What was so hot about it?" I barked. "You simply don't appreciate the fine points of film-making," he said with aplomb. "This had at least two, maybe three outstanding scenes in it. Which is more than I can say for 'Zorba.'"

"You gotta be kidding." "Remember the scene where Grant is in the bedroom with the girl and hangs his socks out on the flagpole to dry? It was magnificently pulled off! Fellini could learn from that. That scene alone made the movie great," he said with finality.

"Wait a minute. You're not saying that it could be compared to a Fellini-film, are you?"

"Of course not," he replied. "You don't understand. You don't compare '8½' to 'Bikini Beach Party.' You might as well try to compare 'Catch 22' to the 'Iliad.' They do entirely different things. The important thing is that a film achieves what it sets out to do. You judge a film on its own terms. You can have one try to encompass the human condition like 'The Silence,' and fall flat, while 'Beach Blanket Bingo' achieved its purpose beautifully. So which is better? As far as great pictures go, you can't beat Doris Day films."

"Doris Day pictures?" I was hurt. "Of course," he said smugly, "they have a beautiful precision about them."

"But they're boring," I protested. "Not at all! There is always the hero—Grant, Hudson, Garner. He's young, successful, an executive type, a bachelor. The incarnation of the American male's ideal."

I nodded in assent, grudgingly. "In each film," he continued, "young successful male notices Doris, young attractive girl-next-door. He likes her, tries to seduce her. He fails."

I nodded again. "Of course, he interprets his frustration as love and marries her," he concluded triumphantly.

"But they're still boring." "Ah, but the precision!" he cried. "And it's no wonder. MGM has had plenty of practice at it. They've been playing with the American public's hang-ups for years."

"They're boring," I repeated. "Admittedly, their form is somewhat limiting. But great art has always been limited by its form. Look at Greek tragedy, Petrarchan sonnets, or the fugue. And what are Doris Day films but morality plays? You could make a great sociological study of the American Dream by studying Doris Day films."

I didn't know what to say. "And do you know," he leaned close to me and whispered, "there's about to be a new breakthrough. If you've noticed, Grant and Hudson have come closer and closer to seducing Doris. One of these days, my boy, it's going to happen. And voila! the new American morality will really be here!"

Vietnamese National Voluntary Service

(Editor's note—The following article was written by Tran Ngoc Bau, a Vietnamese student involved in the Vietnam's National Voluntary Service.)

Vietnamese youth know how to do more than just demonstrate.

They belong to an industrious, patient, good natured, and courageous people who have been struggling for the past 20 years before the extremely subtle and shrewd aggressive war of the Communists. The Russian and Chinese Communists are using Vietnam as a testing ground for their new form of invasion and the free world also uses Vietnam as an outpost in opposing communism.

At the bottom of their hearts the youth of free Vietnam are painfully grieving for the condition of their country because they think that no one truly respects the rights of their countrymen.

Youth, university and high school students more than anyone else, have a deep understanding of this sad, tragic state and naturally they have agitated to demand changes, to call for a total revolution as an absolute necessity to victory. They have demonstrated reluctantly and half-heartedly because they are non-violent by nature.

The students who demonstrate are a minority and, although compelled to do so, know that they are capitalizing on an unfortunate situation, creating confusion in present stabilization efforts. Student reactions appear violent and, at times in the past, have depicted the extreme dissatisfaction of a people exploited, suppressed and alone.

However, Vietnamese youth understand more than just expressing dissatisfaction, shouting and demonstration. . . . They have and are now deeply at work, the invisible work of a craftsman building a foundation for the future in the face of endless difficulties.

THE STUDENT'S SOLUTION
Present university students were born and raised in the flames of war. They have been eye-witness to the country's ruin, the brutal slaughtering of their countrymen, the decay of society and the endless hardships of the people, of whom 85 percent are farmers. In the face of the bogus war of the Communists, youth sees a single solution: to urge their country to bring about a complete social revolution. Only with this radical solution can there be a hope for a long and prosperous peace for their country.

Since 1961, the student press has advocated a voluntary youth movement to lead rural service projects in Vietnam. However, during the Diem period this idea was rejected by Ngo Dinh Nhu, head of the Republican Youth (a Diem Government youth group) and was branded "the plan of 100 crazy people."

Then, after the coup of November 1963 when Diem fell, student leaders had a convenient opportunity to activate their ideas. A number of the leaders agreed on an organizational plan, and in early 1964 the National Voluntary Service (NVS) was formed, which from June 1964 to June 1965 has trained and sent 43 voluntary groups to serve for a year in the highland provinces and in the coastal plains of free Vietnam. At present the NVS is training an additional 100 members who have just graduated from high school to serve a year in the central plains and in the delta of the free South.

THE NVS . . .
1) It encourages students in the city to go to the poor and distant villages to demonstrate their sincere feelings by helping with the material projects of the people.

2) It carefully trains its members, asking that these youth live as model citizens, which means that they eat, live, and work with their countrymen, sharing happiness and misery so that both can increase in their understanding and well-being.

3) Each team is composed of five people, each one a specialist in a certain field. Each team works in a village for one full year. The team is an integral part of the village, stressing the ideal of common progress, democratic living, and the spirit of responsibility to one's fellow man.

the NVS is the first private group with a purely social and revolutionary character which does not yield to governmental, political party or religious pressures . . .

Shall we sit with folded arms and see if they succeed or shall we lend a hand to our busy youth in our beloved Vietnam?

"I am Who I am"

The Old Testament God of the Jews revealed Himself to Moses as the self-existent One, the underived and all-powerful Being who alone can truly say, "I am Who I am." It was at a burning bush that Moses encountered the unchangeable God:

"Moses said to God, 'If I come to the people of Israel and say to them, "the God of your fathers has sent me to you," and they ask me, "what is His name?," what shall I say to them?' God said to Moses, 'I AM WHO I AM,' and He said, 'Say to the people of Israel, "I AM has sent you" . . . the Lord God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, has sent you: this is my name for ever and thus I am to be remembered throughout all generations'" (Exodus 3:13-16).

Our English word "Jehovah" is the well-established rendering of the Hebrew "YHWH" which is derived from the verb "to be." This name of God was so sacred to the Jews that it was not to be uttered aloud. The word "Adonai" (Lord, Master) was substituted when speaking of "YHWH" or "Jehovah."

The name "Jehovah" appears at least 7000 times in the Old Testament. This name of God is always used when God is spoken of as the "Provider," "Redeemer," "Shepherd," "Healer," "Righteousness," and the "Peace" of His people Israel—the great "I AM," sufficient for every human need.

It was an angel who told Mary and Joseph that their child was to be called "Jesus" (Luke 1:31, Matthew 1:18-25). The name "Jesus" is the Greek rendering of the Hebrew word "Joshua" or "Je-hoshua" which means "Jehovah Savior."

What disturbed the religious leaders of His day was not the name "Jesus," but that claims which Jesus Christ made to be God. The Jewish priests were shocked and outraged when Jesus said that He was the very same unutterable "I AM" who met with Moses and the burning bush and who had called Abraham to lead His people:

"Your father Abraham rejoiced," said Jesus, "that he was to see MY day; he saw it and was glad" . . . The Jews said to Him, "you are not yet fifty years old, and have seen Abraham?" Jesus said to them, "truly, truly, I say to you, before Abraham was, I AM." So they took up stones to throw at Him (John 8:56-59).

Jesus Christ made other startling claims for Himself which linked Him directly with the Jehovah God of the Old Testament. He said, "I AM the bread of life. This is the bread which comes down from heaven, that a man may eat of it and not die" (John 8:48-50); "I AM the light of the world, He who follows me will not walk in darkness, but will have the light of life" (John 8:12); "I AM the good shepherd, the good shepherd lays down His life for His sheep" (John 10:11); "I AM the resurrection and the life, he who believes in me though he die, yet shall he live, and whoever lives and believes in me shall never die" (John 11:25); "I AM the way, the truth, and the life; no man comes to the Father but by me" (John 14:6); "I AM the vine, you are the branches . . . apart from me you can do nothing" (John 15:5).

What Jesus Christ claimed and asserted, that He was in fact God, is either literally and accurately true or He committed blasphemy. Why not discover the truth for yourself. Find out by asking God directly Who He is. Permit Him to show Himself to you as Jehovah, the great I AM, the Lord Jesus Christ, "the same yesterday, today, and forever" (Hebrews 13:8).

Letters to the Ice Box

system, which favors minority groups. It is an understatement to say that these editorial opinions are "not necessarily those of the University or student body."

It is unfortunate that such a small percentage of students can have such high representation on the ASUC Senate and have editorial support of the newspaper as well. At least the Daily Californian has removed the words "Monarch of the College Dailies" from its masthead. I suggest that subscriptions to the Daily Cal be made voluntary—then we shall see who will pay to read it.

—Tony Wasserman
Senior, Math, Physics

'Terrible Example'

To the Ice Box:

Theodore Jacquency and Dave Lee, by Terrible Example, failed to analyze the fourth game-theoretic alternative:

If those in sympathy with your enemy (d) immobilize your protest by using your own tactic, you may claim that (1) they recognize your right to use this tactic, since they are using it; (2) they illustrate the necessity for your opposition, in their very attempt to squelch that opposition; (3) they expose their hypocrisy in condoning a war waged in the name of peace, by their use of a pacifistic tactic to abet that war. You win yet again.

—Garth Akin
Grad., Philosophy

So What

To the Ice Box:

Accepting at face value (if only for the sake of argument) the compilation of Communist atrocities on the Daily Cal's editorial page (Oct. 13) for the benefit of students planning to participate in the International Days of Protest (IDP)—so what! I react this way not out of amoral disregard for the slaughtering of people nor yet out of any ideological proclivity to distort or apologize for Communist behavior but simply because it is irrelevant to the IDP.

These two days, after all, are directed toward protesting the U.S. government's policy not as support for slave-labor in Stalinist Russia, Chinese Tibetan policy, Communist regimes generally, or Communist ideology. These are not alternate sides of the same coin. To suggest this, as does the anonymous author, undercuts the right of dissent basic to democracy and is a personal insult to many who oppose our Vietnam policy within a framework of loyalty or perhaps even out of loyalty.

Of course, judging from the author's use of innuendo, judging indeed from the whole tone of thinking represented by the article, it is, perhaps, not unlikely that the author perceives opposition to the government (on Vietnam or whatever) as the defining characteristic of a Communist. At this point I'm rendered speechless and rather seared.

—Jerry Bass
Grad., Pol. Sci.

(Editor's note: the author was David Levy. His name was omitted because of a technical error.)

Walk in Peace

To the Ice Box:

On Sunday the San Francisco Examiner revealed that Governor Brown had 3600 men on call to handle any problems during the Days of International Protest. If the "Beast of Sproul Hall" had any real concern for law and order, he would have deployed the men under his control in such a way as to allow the marchers to complete their walk in peace. A supposedly liberal governor should certainly use his power for, and not against, a responsible expression of public opinion.

—Tom Harriman
Soph., L & S

Social Charge

To the Ice Box:

However dramatic it seems to blockade troop trains or picket atomic submarines in rowboats such meaningless gestures will not stop the Vietnam war any more than those who chained themselves to lampposts years ago stopped World War II.

The Socialist Labor Party does not question the sincerity and good will of the protesters. What we do question is their judgment and understanding of the cause of war, and their activities. Peace sentiment to be constructive must be disciplined by a knowledge of the economic imperatives which drive nations to war and how to establish the sane world of Socialism.

This is not taught at demonstrations, civil disobedience, or "teach-ins" and such "act now think later" tactics are doomed to failure. Moreover, they become diversions from the revolutionary movement whose principles can end world strife and uproot the cause of war.

The present fragmented student revolt will eventually recognize that its social purpose has been embodied in the program of peaceful, fundamental social change advocated by the Socialist Labor Party. If not, their half measures can only lead to disillusionment and social alienation.

—Jean Steiner, Secretary,
State Executive Comm. of California

Lohengrin: Pageant-like Performance

By PETER STENBERG

The San Francisco Opera paid its annual visit to the Greek Theatre Sunday, bringing with it an opera particularly well-suited to the obvious limitations to be found there. For Lohengrin is never going to make it on the strength of its libretto, in fact the main problem in staging it is to avoid pitfalls inherent in Wagner's text. The swan, the dove, the constant pounding of the breast by the chorus, make Lohengrin a satirist's delight.

In the Greek Theatre, these problems were simply left out and the result was a pageant-like performance which probably worked better than in the opera house. The static chorus, which can be deadly in the cramped theater, somehow seems to fit in the wide open outdoors of the Greek Theatre stage.

The cast offered ample proof of a strange phenomenon which has occurred in the last decade in the field of operatic singing; namely that the Americans are now producing the most exciting young singers, although they invariably must learn their trade in Germany. Of the six principles in this production, only one, Hildegard Hillebrecht, was German, and she was the least satisfactory of the group. In the title role was Jess Thomas who after getting an MA in psychology from Stanford decided he had a voice and went to Germany. Now he is simply the best Heldentenor in the world.

It is hard to imagine a better Lohengrin. His voice has a beautiful clear sound, especially in the higher registers, and he has fine power. He is also a very intelligent singer, singing his tone properly and hitting every note squarely.

Miss Hillebrecht has been suffering from a cold, and perhaps this accounted for the uncertain, rough sound of her lower and middle registers. In contrast to Thomas, she wavers around a note and never seems to catch the pure quality which is essential for Elsa; surprisingly her higher register is clearer.

Ortrud and Telramund, two of the most difficult mezzo and baritone roles, were handled by Annamaria Besel and Chester Ludwig, who have appeared in numerous supporting positions throughout the season. Miss Besel was surprisingly good. Her voice has seemed a bit cold and cutting for some of her characters, but it fit the part of Ortrud very well. She has a big voice and made it through the tortuous passages almost unscathed.

Telramund demands very precise, almost theatrical German articulation and intonation to become dramatically plausible. Ludwig did a very creditable job dramatically, considering he is not German, and his voice is always fine.

Thomas O'Leary as King Henry and Richard Fredricks as the herald were both excellent. O'Leary had some trouble at the very bottom of his register, but he certainly has proven to be one of the better Wagnerian basses around. Horst Stein makes an impressive American debut conducting this Lohengrin. He brought out very nicely both the gentleness and power of the score.

Fine Arts Quartet's Concert

By BOB HIRSCHFELD

On Friday, the Fine Arts Quartet gave their final concert at Hertz Hall, for this season at least, and gave us ample reason to bemoan their departure. The quartet, which is normally in residence at the University of Wisconsin, completed its traversal of the Opus 50 Quartets by Haydn, and also played a Quartet for Oboe and strings by Mozart (not a UC composer.)

From the beginning, the program was a delight. In vain I listened to the fifth Opus 50 Quartet, waiting for an ugly sound, a fault of any kind, at which to frown my brow critically. Nothing. The Quartet, subtitled "The Dream," lived up to its subtitle, and there were simply no nits to pick. A tempo may have been fast but the playing then justified it. The sound was quite up to what one hopes for from the Fine Arts Quartet, which is to say, very good indeed.

The final piece, the sixth Opus 50 Quartet, is called "The Frog." I will now make a critical faux pas, and reveal my total ignorance of why the piece is called "The Frog." I listened carefully for croaking or any other froglike sounds, but heard nothing, and in so doing, deprived myself of part of the pleasure of listening to a fine piece of chamber music well played.

The audience, which on this occasion filled the house and flowed over most of the stage as well, would not let the artists get away without an encore, and the quartet played the second movement of the second Opus 50 Quartet. This had been beautifully played at the first concert, and in the interim, the group had lost none of the beautiful cantabile quality they had brought to it the first time around.

The Fine Arts Quartet now presumably returns to Wisconsin, which has the pleasure of their company for a large part of the year. What a wonderful idea, to have a quartet of our very own!

Now! 1/3 off

Morgenthau Phones Talk To Teach-In

Speeches by Norman Thomas and Hans Morgenthau will highlight a teach-in sponsored by ARFEP, Americans for Reappraisal of Far East Policy, set for Sunday. The speeches will originate at the national headquarters of the organization in New Haven and will be telephoned to Berkeley from 7-10 p.m. in 2000 LSB.

Local labor and peace leaders will speak directly from 2000 LSB on the effect of the Vietnamese war on domestic affairs such as the labor movement, jobs, and business.

The Berkeley chapter of ARFEP, has been in contact with the American Friends Service Committee, the Central Labor Council of Alameda County, the San Francisco Board of Trade, and the CDC, who are planning to provide speakers for the teach-in.

Larry Stone, spokesman for the organization, outlined its goals. "We are not fighting the VDC, and we are not administration hacks. We are working to attract not only the campus community, but the community at large."

"Our implementation does not include civil disobedience but by appeal to the rational mind of the general community we hope to create not only student dialogue, but national dialogue and Congressional debate."

"We are not merely concerned with the immediate Vietnamese situation, but with the complete reappraisal of our foreign policy in Asia."

"We want to end the war in Vietnam, but we also want to stimulate the government of the United States to recognize the Peoples' Republic of China and to press for its admission to the United Nations."

Down in Front

blond boy yelled at the terrace: "Why don't ya sit in a tree!"

At last a little music was beginning to get through. Ushers were shoveling people to less offensive areas. Calm was returning to the terrace. A couple on a coral blanket toasted with white wine in crystal glasses.

And attention went back to the stage... past the stone bleachers... past the folding chairs... back to the opera.

Computer Talk Set

Alpha Kappa Psi, professional business fraternity, will meet at 7:30 p.m. today in the Black Oak Room, Student Union.

Guest speaker will be Wayne S. Boutell, acting associate dean of the school of business administration. He will speak on "The Future of Computers in Business."

Judges Miss a Mister

NOTTINGHAM, England (AP) —The beauty contest judges were about to give second prize to a buxom blonde listed as Nancy Harwood — but Nancy let out a loud whoop, all male.

Shaking with laughter, the blonde announced he really was Nigel Harwood, 19, Nottingham University student.

While the stunned audience looked on in surprise, Nigel ran offstage.

"Under the circumstances," said the chief judge, "second prize will go to this young lady — providing, of course — she is a young lady."

"Yes, I am," said pretty Ann Merdles.

"Then you get second prize," said the official.

Off stage, Nigel said: "I only did it because of a dare. I was amazed that I got away with it. I had an extra close shave, piled on make-up and tried my best to walk like a girl."

"I expected to be caught any moment but the judges seemed to be taking me seriously, and so did the girl contestants. Then I let the cat out of the bag by laughing. I just couldn't control myself any longer."

Said Malcom Turner, who runs a local model agency and who was one of the judges: "I honestly thought Nigel was an attractive girl student with a very eye-catching figure."

Twenty-eight girls — and Nigel — took part in the annual varsity queen competition Sunday night.

Parks anywhere

A Honda needs a mere 3'x6' space to be perfectly content. And that puts a spot, about a mile away from its destination.

There are other sides to Honda, too. Hondas are fiendishly frugal. A gallon of gas will carry you up to 200 mph, depending on which of the 15 Honda models you're driving. And insurance bills shrink to practically nothing. As for upkeep, a Honda needs little.

The shining example above is the remarkable Honda 50. It sells for about $215*. And there are 14 more models to choose from. Look them over.

See the Honda representative on your campus or write: American Honda Motor Co., Inc., Department C2, 100 West Alondra Boulevard, Gardena, California 90247.
