

Molly M. Jones

Sr. Assistant General Counsel, Litigation, Bayer

Molly M. Jones is Sr. Assistant General Counsel, Litigation for Bayer. Molly currently has responsibility for legacy chemical liabilities (from Agent Orange to Asbestos, Benzene and PCBs), as well as insurance recovery matters and ongoing business litigation.

Molly joined Monsanto, now a division of Bayer, four years ago after 12 years of product liability litigation as a summer associate, associate and partner at Bryan Cave in St. Louis. Her private practice experience included product liability work in industries from automotive to pharmaceutical (and everything in between) and included experience with litigation, trials, and appeals in jurisdictions across the country.

Molly currently serves her community through several organizations. She is the current Chair of the Board for the Missouri Coalition Against Domestic and Sexual Violence, an organization that supports shelters and service providers in caring for victims of abuse through education, advocacy, and legislative change. She also sits on the board of the St. Louis Zoo and acts as Vice Chair of the Marlin Perkins (fundraising) Committee. The St. Louis Zoo is perennially one of the best Zoos in America and one of the best free attractions in America - a gem in St. Louis. Service to the legal community through pro bono work and service as board member for numerous tort reform groups (ATRA, CJRG, CJAC), service as a board member of the Missouri Coalition for the Right to Counsel, and service on the Missouri Supreme Court's Commission on Civil Justice Reform round out her professional life.

In her "abundant" free time, Molly enjoys spending time with her husband (Sean) and two children (Addyson (12) and Finley (8)) at sporting events throughout the Midwest.

Molly received her Bachelor's degree in Mass Communications/Journalism from the University of South Florida (Go Bulls!). She received her JD from Washington University in St. Louis.
