

Sophia Dyer MD

Dr Sophia Dyer is a graduate of the Boston University School of Medicine, MD, the Massachusetts College of Pharmacy and Allied Health Sciences, BS, and received a Certificate in Environmental Management from the Tufts University School of Engineering. Dr Dyer is Board certified in Emergency Medicine. She has been with Boston EMS since 1999. She served as Assistant Medical Director and Associate Medical Director before being named the City's first female Medical Director in March 2009. She has also been the recipient of many awards, including the EMS Physician of the Year Award, Metropolitan Boston Emergency Medical Service Council, 2003; the Frommer Award for Excellence in Emergency Medicine, Boston City Hospital, June 1997; and the Award for Excellence in Academic Emergency Medicine, Boston University School of Medicine, May 1993. Additionally, Dr. Dyer has authored more than 30 medical publications

She is currently Associate Medical Director at Boston MedFlight and Professor, Dept of Emergency Medicine Boston University School of Medicine.

Dr Dyer will be presenting on TikTok Challenges Seen in the ED
