

Petra's body is at rest, she is asleep. Yet we are relieved to know it is merely her body that sleeps, not her soul. Though her body lies in the casket, her soul has gone to be with Christ — the Christ who once assured a dying man, "Today you will be with me in paradise." Not some day, but today—this very day! There was not a moment lost between Petra falling asleep on earth and awakening in heaven. No sooner had her eyes closed here than they opened there, to be face-to-face with the Savior of her soul. The apostle Paul insisted that "to live is Christ, and to die is gain." There is gain to be had in death, and it's the gain that comes when we are released from all that is evil and awakened to all that is good. We would not summon Petra back to this world if we could, for that would be to rob her of the greatest of all gains and to force her to experience so much loss.

"You make known to me the path of life, In his presence there is fullness of joy at his right hand pleasures forever" Psalm 16:11
