

FCC Services Welcomes Learning and Development Leader

FCC Services has welcomed Lisa Cavanaugh as Vice President of Leadership Development Experiences for FCC Services, where she will lead a team in developing and executing best-in-class leadership development and experiential learning strategy and programs.

“I’m passionate about delivering powerful leadership development programs that help people and organizations do more than they thought they could, and that have a truly transformative, lifetime impact,” says Lisa. “I bring a genuine curiosity to my client relationships so I can understand their challenges and learning styles, and how best to support them to achieve their goals.”

Lisa brings more than 20 years of learning and development experience to her role, most recently serving as managing director for the Center for Creative Leadership responsible for delivering positive and effective leadership development experiences for senior executive leaders. She also previously served as vice president of organizational effectiveness and business strategy for Magna Energy Services, global director of learning and development for the Bristow Group, and in several roles for Key Energy Services including vice president of organizational development, senior marketplace director, business development director and director of business strategy. She began her career in management consulting with Accenture.

Lisa earned a bachelor’s degree in liberal arts and sciences from the University of Illinois and a master’s degree in applied industrial/organizational psychology from Colorado State University.

Click here as Lisa introduces herself and provides background on her training.