Imagine the thrill that leaped into my pastor's heart when Music Director Cindy Good and her St. Ann's music ministry volunteered to organize and conduct last Sunday's Great St. Ann's Churn-off. To say it was successful would be an understatement. Our ever-dependable Knights of Columbus were willing to cook the hotdogs, John and Laurie Featherstone offered to organize the Bingo game, and thirteen families registered to make some of the yummiest ice cream I've ever tasted. Thank you to everyone who contributed, worked, prepared, and attended. My visiting friends from New York were wowed by the energy and community of St. Ann's. So much grace is evident in our Catholic community.

Every summer seems to find us forgetting our liturgical ministers schedule and failing to get a replacement for our ministry when we're going to be gone. Please don't forget to keep looking for your assignment and mind the fact that your community of faith depends on you to show up or get a person to serve in your place. I earnestly remind you not to call, email, or text Stefani to find a replacement for you. Friday night and Saturday morning notifications are beyond what her job is at St. Ann's. Thank you for your cooperation in helping us have organized and beautiful liturgical celebrations.

Prayer on Father's Day

from A Book of Uncommon Prayer by Brian Doyle

Brothers, I too have spent many sleepless hours worrying about money and insurance and minor-in-possession citations and speeding tickets and endless bouts of the flu which might mean some horrifying disease. I too have snarled and barked and growled and roared at my children. I too have sometimes, usually in the shower, wondered what crimes I committed in a previous life to be afflicted so with rude and surly and vulgar and unappreciated progeny. Yet I too, brothers, know that they are why we are the luckiest men who ever lived; and I too have laughed so hard at their capers and antics that I had to lie down for a while; and I too have bathed and fed and rocked and cuddled and wrestled and played and sung with them, and believed myself at those moments to be closer to heaven than any man ever, and known that this was indeed so, even more than it was and is in the delightful throes of romantic love. So, brothers, a prayer for us today, as we are handed useless garish neckties and Weedwackers that will soon rust and die in the shed, and scrawled coupons for chores to be done in the future; for we are blessed, brothers, and we know it in our better moments, and we pray that today is composed of only those, for once. And so: Amen.

Fr. Scott

From Fr. Jim Quinlan of Cross Catholic Outreach

Thank you for the invitation to share the Cross Catholic message with your very warm and welcoming parishioners. The three deacons I met were wonderful and extremely helpful and your liturgies with your incredible music were uplifting. Seeing so many people in attendance at Mass was exciting to me personally. I really felt like I was truly celebrating the liturgies. I hope that Cross will be invited back and that I might be lucky enough to be asked to return.
