ANALYTICS AND ADVERTISING SERVICES PROVIDED BY OTHERS

STATEMENT ON COOKIES AND SIMILAR TECHNOLOGIES

We and our vendors use cookies and similar technologies on our online services, electronic communications and advertisements that automatically receive and track certain data about your device and interaction with our online services, communications and advertisements. You can read more here about the types of cookies and similar technologies we use, why we use them, and how you can exercise your choices.

Overview of cookies and similar technologies
“Cookies” are small text files that are stored on your browser or device by websites, apps, online media and advertisements. There are different types of cookies. Cookies served by the entity that operates the website you are visiting or using are called “first-party cookies” (so cookies served by Hippo while you are using our online services are first-party cookies). Cookies served by companies that are not operating the website you are visiting or using are called “third-party cookies” (so, we may allow an analytics partner to set a cookie on your computer via our online services while you visit our online services, and that would be a third-party cookie). Cookies may also endure for different periods of time. “Session cookies” only last only as long as your browser is open. These are deleted automatically once you close your browser. Other cookies are “persistent cookies” meaning that they survive after your browser is closed (for example, they may recognize your computer when you re-open our online services).

“Pixel tags” (also called web beacons, clear GIFs or action tags) are small blocks of code installed on (or called by) a webpage, app or advertisement which can retrieve certain information about your device and browser, including device type, operating system, browser type and version, website visited, time of visit, referring website, IP address, and other similar information (including the small text file (the cookie) that uniquely identifies the device). Pixel tags can also be used to monitor the way in which visitors interact with websites, electronic communications and the content thereon/in. Pixels also provide the means by which third-party partners set and read browser cookies from a domain that they do not themselves operate and collect information about visitors to that domain, typically with the permission of the domain owner.

“Local storage” refers generally to other places on a browser or device where information can be stored by websites, ads, or third parties (such as HTML5 local storage and browser cache).

“Log file information” (also called “server logs”) refers to information that is automatically reported by your browser each time you access a website, including your web request, IP address, browser type, referring/exit pages and URLs, number of clicks, domain names, landing pages, pages viewed, language and other such information.

In this privacy statement, these and similar technologies are collectively referred to as “cookies and similar technologies.”
Types and purposes of cookies and similar technologies

These cookies and similar technologies receive and track certain data about your device (such as your device type, operating system, device IP address, mobile network carrier, and device and advertising identifiers) and interaction with our online services, communications and advertisements (such as access dates and times, features or pages viewed, advertisements and ad features viewed, and approximate location based on your IP address). The following table sets out the different categories of cookies and similar technologies that our online services, electronic communications, and advertisements may use and why we use them.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Cookie Types</th>
<th>Purpose</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Operationally Necessary</td>
<td>These cookies and similar technologies are necessary to the operation of our online services. This includes technologies that (i) allow you access to our online services, (ii) are required to identify irregular online service behavior, prevent fraudulent activity and improve security, or (iii) that allow you to make use of our functions.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Functionality</td>
<td>These first- and third-party cookies and similar technologies allow us to offer you enhanced functionality when accessing or using our online services. This may include identifying you when you sign into our services or keeping track of your specified preferences, interests, or past items viewed or utilized so that we may enhance the presentation of content on our online services.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Performance, Analytics and Research</td>
<td>These first- and third-party cookies and similar technologies allow us to assess, improve and research the performance and use of our online services, and to better understand the interests of people who interact with our online services and ads. This includes our analytics activities that help us understand how our visitors use our online services, determine if you have interacted with our communications and ads, determine whether you have viewed an item or link, or to improve our online services content.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
| Advertising and Targeting        | These first- and third-party cookies and similar technologies are used to deliver relevant ads, and track ad campaign performance and efficiency. Similarly, our business partners may use a cookie or other technology to determine whether we have served an ad and how it performed, or to provide us with information about how you interact with them. One way we do so is by allowing network advertising companies with whom we work to place their own cookies when an individual visits our online services. This enables the network advertising company to recognize individuals who have previously visited our services. When the individual visits a third-party website on which that network advertising company has purchased ad space, the advertising company can then recognize the individual's interest in our products and services and deliver one of our advertisements. For example, Hippo Insurance Services uses two Google Analytics Advertising Display Features, which collect information through cookies and similar technologies: Remarketing with Google Analytics and Demographics and Interests reporting, Hippo Insurance Services also uses Microsoft advertising and advertisements through Facebook. If you would like to opt-out of having your data used by these cookies or control your ad preference settings on these other platforms, please visit the following websites:
