

How Does Your Business Stack Up?

Self-Diagnostic Assessment Test

Dear Business Owner:

A lot of people fixate on the abstract concept of trying to work "on" their business, instead of "in" it. I'm a more direct and logical thinker: I've always tried to figure out how to get a business to work harder for its owner than he or she worked for it. A simple difference perhaps. But a major difference, nonetheless.

With my driving thought always being how many ways I can help get your business working harder and better for you --- I've created an 87-question, self-diagnostic assessment test called "How Do You And Your Business Stack Up?" It asks some very straightforward, (yet highly revealing) questions designed to instantly detect whether or not your business could --- and should --- be working harder and more profitably for you --- And if so, precisely where you have the most room for improvement.

It's the perfect grounding and preparatory orientation to help you gain maximum insight, benefit and value out of the two hours we'll be spending together on the teleconference call.

I invite you to sit down right now and go through the 87 questions on this test --- the answers and their business/financial implications to you will be self-evident. Once you've completed all 87 questions, see where you stand (see self-diagnostic interpretation section at the end).

It's a shame to see promising businesses under-perform their capability to deliver more income, certainty, profits and wealth to their owners --- if it's easily doable. Frequently, merely shifting the marketing you do, the strategy you follow and/or the money-making system you implement can double, re-double and even re-double -- again -- the income and profits your business delivers to you.

I created this self-diagnostic assessment test to see whether or not your business could be --- and should be --- delivering more pay-off for you.

In conclusion, I look forward to spending quality time with you on my business building workshop.

Jay L. Abraham

The "Key" For Interpreting Your Answers

Now that you've completed answering all the questions in this assessment test, here's how to see what it all means to you:

Tally up all the points your answers represent by calculating the point status of each answer you've given (use the number in parentheses following each response). Once you get your combined total, here's what it tells you...

- a) If your total points equal 59 or less, it tells you that your marketing is very weak, your opportunity for growth and greater profitability with a better marketing strategy to follow IS ALMOST ASSURED. You are probably realizing less than 15 of your real business/financial/marketing potential.
- b) If your total points equal 60 to 193, you're marketing at a decent level; but your business has exceptional room for improvement. You can probably increase your overall performance by 80 or more merely by better understanding and applying the marketing opportunities you have available.
- c) If your total points exceed 194 or higher, congratulations! You're a very fine marketer already and should feel good about where you've come, so far. But, ironically, because YOU understand so well the real additional marketing opportunities available to your business - your business probably still has spectacular geometric growth possible if you decided to take your strategy and tactics to the highest performance levels possible. Nevertheless, I'm very proud of your level of success so far.
