DESCRIPTION

Criminal conduct can affect the representation of a client in many other areas of law, and attorneys are often called upon to deal with issues related to criminal law even if that is not their specialty. This program is designed for lawyers with limited experience in the practice of criminal law. This course will give the non-criminal practitioner important information to help him or her avoid making mistakes that can have a lasting impact on the client and the client’s case. You will receive practical tips in a fast-moving, general overview format that addresses issues critical to understanding and effectively handling basic criminal law issues.
