HANFORD, WASHINGTON

6th War Loan Nov. 20-Dec. 15

The Treasury Department has announced officially that extra war bonds for the Sixth War Loan will be sold by the banks and other issuing agencies throughout the country during the four-week period from November 20 to December 15. Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau has called attention to the dates which make it easy to give extra war bonds as Christmas gifts.

As in previous War Loans, the Richland and Hanford offices of the Seattle-First National Bank will be the issuing agents for all workers on the H.E.W. project. Details of the procedure for enabling workers to subscribe to extra bonds will be published in the next issue of The Sage Sentinel, at which time all crafts, departments and sub-contractors employees will be advised as to the methods to be followed.

Although the exact quota for Benton County and the project has not been announced at this time, it has been stated by Washington that the entire loan is not to be as large as the sixteen-billion-dollar Fifth War Loan which the nation put over the top so successfully in June and July of this year. It may be assumed therefore that the project quota for the Sixth War Loan will be proportionately smaller than it was for the Fifth.

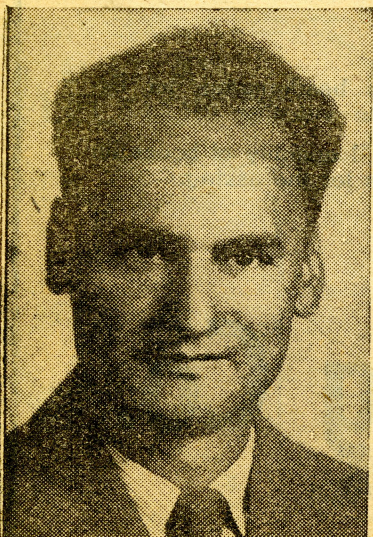

High officials have pointed out that the savings effected by the purchase of extra war bonds will enable millions of people to buy consumers goods as they become available following reconversion to normal production.

Italy Forum Topic Tonight

The Fall Forum Series, of which tonight's lecture is the second, has changed "residence." Formerly held in the United Protestant Church auditorium, the meetings are now scheduled for the Conference Room of the Training and Relations Building on Kadlec Plaza.

Tonight's speaker, Dr. Engelo Pellegrini, professor in the University of Washington, will lecture on "Are the Italians Ready for a Democratic State?" Dr. Pellegrini is a well-known speaker on Italy and the problems of the Italian people. For many years he has been a student of the Fascistic movement, in addition to his major work in the field of speech.

This university professor is scheduled to speak in the Training and Relations Building tonight at 7:30 p.m. H.E.W. Employees Association is sponsor of the Forum Series.

ANGELO M. PELLEGRINI

Youth Center to Open Tonight at Division & A

A new Youth Center on Division Street and A Avenue will open tonight with a "house warming." The party will feature bingo games, dancing to the new juke box and informal matches at the pool and ping pong tables.

Facilities at the new center include a reading and writing room, lounge room, game room and club room. Trained supervision is on hand at all times to assist. Boys and girls of school age are invited to make use of this new center, and an invitation is issued to parents to give the place a "look-see."

The Youth Center is open Monday through Saturday from 10:00 a.m. to 10:00 p.m. and on Sundays from 1:00 p.m. to 10:00 p.m.

Close Mess Hall No. 6 Tomorrow, Says Olympic

The last meal to be served in Mess Hall No. 6 will be tomorrow's evening meal, Olympic officials announced.

All holders of green tickets who are evacuees of the 131 through 140 barracks area should go to Boardroll to get their meal tickets stamped with the number of an assigned mess hall.

Men remaining in this area may continue using the green tickets, but are assigned to eat in Mess Hall No. 3. No other mess hall will accept unstamped green meal tickets.

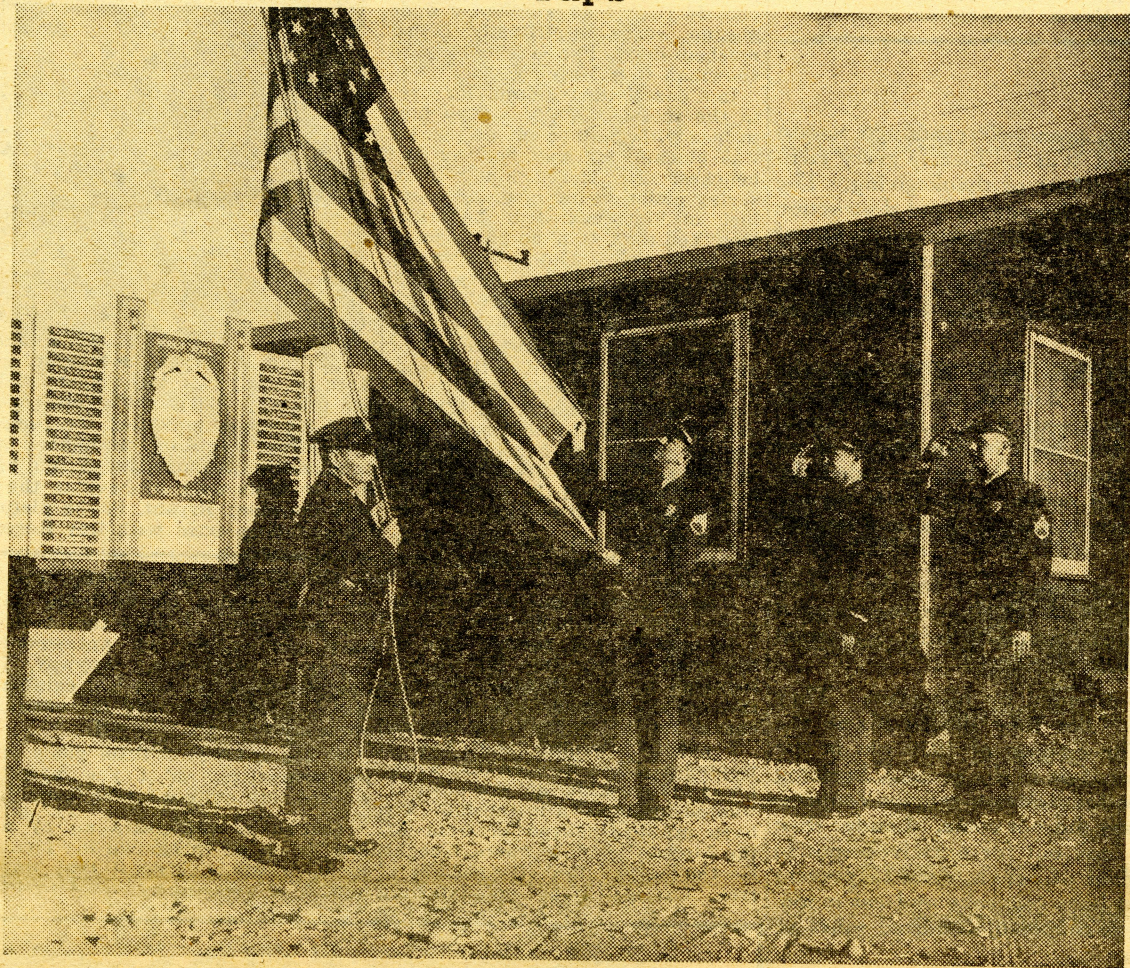

H.E.W. Concert Band in Regular Program Monday

Monday brings the H.E.W. Concert Band to the Auditorium for an evening of music.

Listeners at the weekly series usually hear at least one of their favorites on the program. Project musician members of the band give their talents to the concerts weekly.

The program will start at 8:30 p.m. Sponsorship of the band is by H.E.W. Employees Association.

Taps

With Armistice Day tomorrow, the morning and evening stars and stripes ceremony at Patrol Headquarters in Hanford becomes particularly appropriate. At the left, Patrolman C. W. Mason lowers the flag, while Sgt. J. A. Schmitz lends a helping hand. Standing at attention are Lt. W. A. Welch and Sgt. A. F. Novotny. At the base of the pole is the plaque carrying names of former patrolmen now serving in World War II. This Armistice Day marks the 26th anniversary of cessation of World War I hostilities.

Open Christian Science Reading Room in Hanford

A Christian Science Reading Room will open Monday in Hanford. With literature, The Monitor and writing materials available, the room will be open each Sunday from 2:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. Monday through Friday the hours will be from 5:30 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. Location of the new center is in the former youth Hut No. 2, between the Community Building and the Grange Hall.

The Weather

High and low temperature readings for the week past were 61.9 and 31.7 degrees, the higher recording falling on the 31st and the "low" registered November 2.

Is the War Over?

Here are the shortest distances to Berlin from advanced allied lines (all unchanged in week):

Western front—296 miles, from point near Nijmegen.

Russia—315 miles, from Warsaw.

Italy—535 miles, from point south of Ravenna.

Select Junior Officials In Hanford's Round-Up

Hanford Fall Round-Up will make an energetic start tomorrow in the Trailer Camp with a youth government in charge for one week.

A Safety Rally will present the "officials" with their titles. There will be a mayor, aldermen and departmental superintendents. "Officials" will be given a luncheon following their tenure of office, with the Project Manager and Area Engineer acting as hosts.

In cooperation with the Fall Round-Up, trailer residents are asked to gather all trash in or around their trailers and to make repairs on their property.

Restrict Salamander and Open Fires on Project

With the coming of winter, a procedure memorandum has been issued restricting the use of salamanders and open fires.

No fires built on the ground will be allowed at all, whereas salamander fires will be allowed within the areas only under the regulations of salamanders—mainly for the protection of concrete and during adverse weather conditions.

Open Men's Huts for Reading, Writing, Cards

Hutments G and H facing the billboard side of Rec Hall No. 1 on Second Street near B Avenue opened last week. Primarily for men, they provide the nation's leading magazines and newspapers. Facilities are also available for writing letters as well as for card games. Hours are from 2:00 p.m. until 11:00 p.m.

Gray Ladies

The names of four members of the Red Cross Gray Ladies article which appeared in The Sage Sentinel last week were inadvertently omitted. They were Mrs. W. E. Babcock, Mrs. Cleon Brewer, Mrs. Carl Crane and Mrs. B. F. Doran.

Air Base Band Sunday at Aud.

Armistice Day will be the theme of the Sunday Afternoon Program this week in the Auditorium.

The Walla Walla Air Base Band is scheduled to play for Hanfordians, "setting the stage" with their snappy martial airs. Another of the outstanding features for Sunday will be playing of a recording of Helen Hayes' speech on Armistice Day.

Adding pomp and significance to the program, a Boy Scout color guard will place the flags, and a recitation of "In Flanders Field" will be given by a local speaker.

Several musical solos by the band, plus a singing solo by Buddy Trent complete the program.

Sunday Afternoon Programs begin at 3:30 p.m. and have no admission charge.

Stunt Show On Thursday

At next Community Night program, every one in the audience is part of the show.

Stunts and quizzes, in which the folks out front will try to win the prizes, is only part of the fun. Community singing of the good old numbers and the newer ones as well is still one of the major attractions of the weekly show.

The show on next Thursday will be held in Hanford Auditorium as usual—at 8:30 p.m. There is no admission charge for these weekly entertainments.

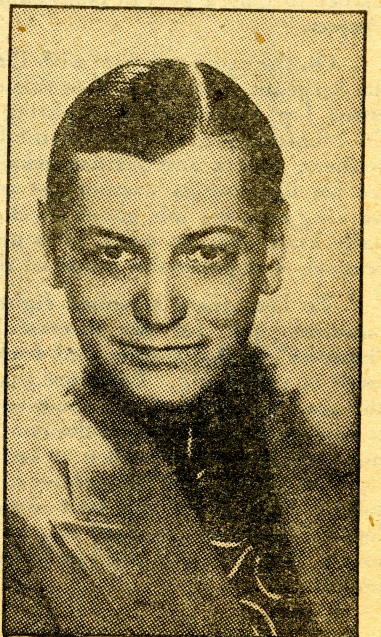

Sanders Orch Tonight, Sat.

Another "name band" comes to Hanford! This time it is Joe Sanders and his Nighthawks, plus a feminine vocalist.

Sanders was nicknamed "Ole Lefty" because he was considered one of the best pitchers on a Kansas City semi-pro league's baseball team. But that was before he chose to follow the musical road to fame.

From Chicago's radio stations, Sanders first came into the national public's eye. In addition to broadcasting, he played for five years in one of Chicago's more popular nighteries.

Sanders will be at the Hanford Auditorium tonight and tomorrow—instead of the usual Saturday and Sunday engagements, Sunday dances being discontinued. The hours are from 9:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m. Admission is $1.00 for men and 50 cents for women. H.E.W. Employees Association is sponsor.

Armistice Day

At eleven o'clock in the morning, twenty-six years ago tomorrow, the last shots were fired in World War I. Nearly every civilized human being breathed a devout prayer of thanksgiving. The war was over. At long last the killing and maiming and destruction had come to an end. After those first breathless moments of solemn thanks, the whole world went crazy. In each city, town and crossroads of every warring country, the people gave way to delirious joy, unrestrained and unconfined all day—and most of the night.

When it had quieted down from that first wild rejoicing, the world began to wonder. What now? Without exception friend and foe turned their eyes to the west—to these United States. Never before or after have we stood so high in the esteem of all people. We were the heroes, the nation which had provided the final knockout punch and which asked neither reward nor reparation. We were the knight in shining armor, without fear and beyond reproach.

Never has there been so golden an opportunity for the United States to take the leadership in world affairs which everyone begged us to accept. Ours was the God-given chance to lead civilization toward permanent peace. We muffed it!

How or why we muffed it is disputed by historians. They look at the actions of the leaders. But they should blame the American people and no other. The election of 1920 was in the offing. The candidates had their ears fast to the ground, listening for the voice of the people. But the loud clarion call for cooperation with other nations to end all wars did not come. Louder than it was a selfish voice which said to look out for ourselves—not to give up a bit of our national freedom of action, even to prevent another war. We thought we could have our cake and eat it too. At that time an airplane could fly a couple of hundred miles to drop five hundred pounds of bombs.

Today we are paying the price for our narrow selfishness a quarter century ago. We are paying with the lives and young bodies of our sons, by the hundreds of thousand. We are being taught a lesson. But are we learning? Are we comparing the puny efforts of our 1918 fliers with the death and destruction our sons spread over thousands of miles of enemy territory today? Are we observing the buzz-bomb of 1944 and realizing that with a few years of development by clever technicians it will be a cheap weapon of tremendous destructiveness from which no country on earth will be secure?

We have a second chance, after we have won this war, to make a peace which will endure. We cannot do it alone nor can the rest of the civilized nations do it without us. There can be no better time than Armistice Day for the whole American people to solemnly vow that they will not muffle this second chance. There may never be a third.

In the Dark

In introducing Commander Corydon Wassell to his Hanford audience about ten days ago, Lieutenant Mallett said that he had never seen the likes of the clearance detail to which the Commander and his party had to submit to gain admittance finally to this Project; and that he was sure that Dr. Wassell had not encountered, such security even at Java in 1942 or the famous Doctor would never have been able to escape his Jap pursuers. Although these remarks were made jokingly, we should be justly proud of our security provisions that guard the entrances and exits of this Project. If we are individually inconvenienced from time to time through time-delaying searches or questions, we must realize that it is our chance to play a part in maintaining the security of this important Project.

On the same program with Dr. Wassell, a tall, weathered Marine Sergeant, just returned to this country from fighting the treacherous Jap, compared the fighting in the jungles with working on the Hanford job, as he understood it to be. Out there, he said, the soldiers, sailors and leathernecks fought an enemy they couldn't see for his cunning camouflage and concealment and here we are working on a big job, about which, for security reasons, we individually know only so much as is necessary for each of us to do effectively our particular phase of the job.

To hear these seasoned fighters tell us that we are doing an important job, for the successful accomplishment of which our "buddies" in the jungles and foxholes are counting on us, should swell us with pride. But more than that, it should emphasize to us the need to continue our construction or production efforts. And to safeguard our accomplishments, to assure that these efforts have not been in vain, let's keep us our security-mindedness.

Let's safeguard this project in all our actions and our conversations. Each of us is a part-trustee in this job—as a trustee, our legal obligations are clear cut; our patriotic duty to ourselves and to Dr. Wassell's and our "buddies" out there should be even more impelling.

LET'S WATCH OUR ACTIONS AND WORDS. LET'S KEEP THE ENEMY OUT AND IN THE DARK.

'Sage' Turns With Leaves

You'd think that them oldtimers who've been 'round here for a long time would try to be more tactful 'round us newer ones. There's some that is, but there's some that ain't.

Other mornin' I come to work feelin' powerful low. One of them guys from the middlewest (Missouri) says to me, "Know what I miss more than anything right now?" I says, "I ain't in no mood for that kind of danged guessin' contest this mornin'!" He says, "It's the leaves turnin' an' fallin' back home now!"

Holy jumpin' jeeppers! If he'd a poked me in the guts with the end of a 16 ft. 4x4 he wouldn't a done me no worse. Spiritually I just mushed down like a school yard snowman in a March rain.

In a daze I started stumblin' over to the tool box, an' come up face to face with another one of 'em. He was blockin' my way between the benches. He had a kindly reassuring smile on his face, an' every inch of him seemed to be tellin' me, "You ain't goin' no place, bub."

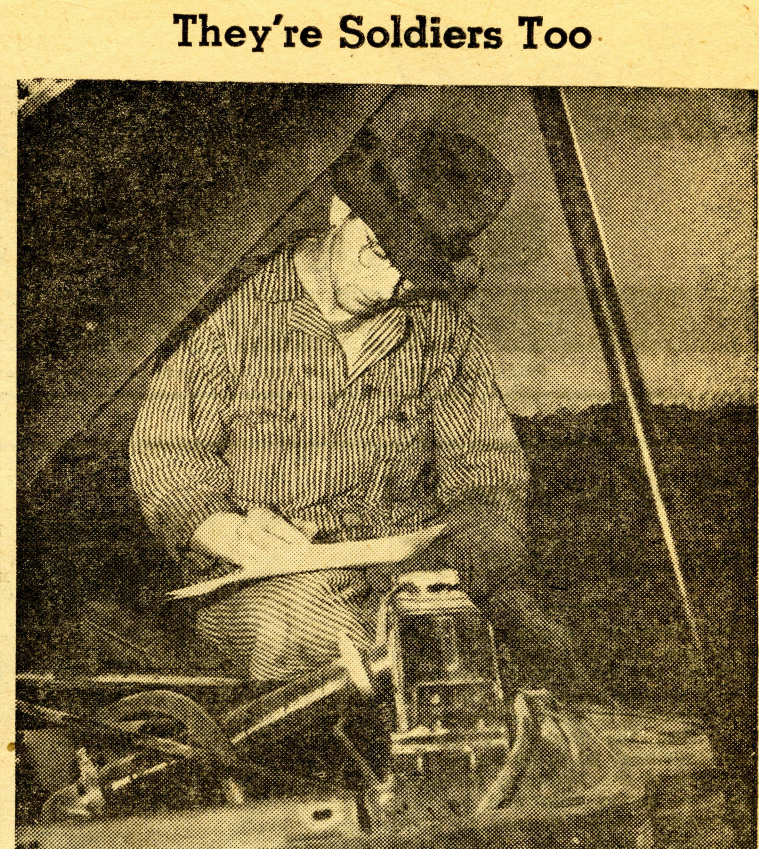

I knew that I had to stay away from that guy with the leaves idea, an' I did. But I just couldn't git them leaves out of my head.

Back in the country where I grew up there's elm, maple, cottonwood, hickory, walnut, white, red an' black oak, hawthorne, wild apple and plum, a bit of cedar, some poplar, not to mention hazel nut bushes, wild fern an' the likes. In the 23 acres of timber on the farm where I grew up, we had 'em all.

Folks, I'm tellin' you, when them leaves was turnin', it was a sight to behold.

I thought about one of the times when on my way home from school I loitered on the pasture side of the creek, lookin' into the timber, listenin' to the breeze rustlin' through the trees an' the squirrels chasin' 'round through the leaves.

I got to dreamin' 'bout how I wanted to die. I decided that when I was old an' ailin' an' got down, I wanted to go down in the fall. I'd have my bed moved in front of the kitchen window where I could see the leaves fallin' off our catapla tree. Catalpa leaves don't fall like most leaves. You'll seldom ever see two catalpa leaves fallin' at the same time. I think they must have some sort of agreement amongst themselves. Anyway, I figured that when that last catalpa leaf fell I'd gently fold my hands, close my eyes an' take off.

Doran M. Bryant, mechanic, gives one of the busses at the 100-F Area its daily "aircraft inspection." He and his foreman, R. V. Hobbs, are pretty proud of their "no-breakdown" record. And though the average workman may feel far removed from the war, these men feel themselves a definite and important part of the conflict. "It takes men to make the weapons, doesn't it?" they ask—and add: "Well, we get the men to their work by keeping the busses in repair." And that's that. (On the side: Bryant, in the picture above, has worked as a singing-riding-roping extra with Roy Rogers, Gene Autry and stuff.)

It was a touchin' little piece of melodramatics, an' I got myself worked into quite a lather 'bout it.

'Course as the years go by a man is bound to change his ideas some. I wouldn't do it that way now.

Tell you what. When that last catalpa leaf fell, that's when I'd start wagin' the greatest struggle of my career. Tryin' to hold out through the winter. An' so help me, if I could just hang on 'til them bloomin' leaves started to buddin' in the spring, I'd know danged well then that I could make it to another fall.

Gee whiz. I hope my goin's on hasn't made any of you tree country folks feel bad. If it does, all I kin say is, you gotta be rugged these days.

Hit Best Presentee Standing in Month

Hitting its best average in a month, the project as a whole clocked 5.8 per cent absentees for the week.

Four crafts tied for first and second place in this week's presentee standings.

Taking the top spot were bricklayers and transportation with 4.5 per cent of their members absent during the weekly period. An average of 5.2 per cent absentees was the standing of Riggers and Labor, in second place.

Crafts not far behind the leaders were Reinforcing Steel and Earthworks, with 5.3 per cent and 5.4 per cent respectively.

Five crafts improved their standings from the week before, while the remaining nine slipped back. Those improved were: Labor, Concrete Labor, Riggers, Piping and Mechanical.

Richland-Hanford Women To Organize Club Monday

A meeting will be held Monday to organize a local Women's Club for women of Richland and Hanford.

This Women's Club is affiliated with the Washington State Federation of Women's Clubs. Mrs. F. T.

Matthias (acting chairman) and Mrs. Margaret Thompson (acting secretary) urge all women interested to come to the meeting to be held in the library of Columbia High School, Richland, Monday at 3:00 p.m.

Trimble Joins Harmon In Hanford Notary Office

R. R. Trimble has joined with Vernon K. Harmon in the Hanford notary public office on the Shopping Circle. The partnership has been established to offer more complete service to village residents.

In addition to notary service, the office also handles the issuance of car and trailer licenses as well as hunting licenses. Hours are continuous from 11:00 a.m. to 10:00 p.m.

Ellis Marshburn New Hanford U.P. Minister

The Rev. Ellis Marshburn has taken over the pastorate of the United Protestant Church in Hanford. He succeeds the Rev. E. J. Blackmon, who has gone to Seattle as executive secretary of that city's National Conference of Jews and Christians, an organization seeking to promote tolerance by uniting citizens of all faiths.

Marshburn, "on loan" from the Home Mission Council, has been working with labor and agriculture groups in Washington, Oregon and Idaho. As pastor of the Hanford church, he has indicated that the same program of activities will be continued. He is making his home in the parsonage in Building B-25, one block south of the United Protestant church, which faces Fifth Street near Eisenhower.

Hanford Optical Office To Close November 20

Attention is again called to closing of the C. A. Johnston Optical Company office at Division Street and A Avenue on November 20.

William Wilson, in charge of the office, asks that this date be kept in mind by all those who placed their orders prior to October 31.

Hours to be observed from now until the closing date are from 12:00 noon to 9:00 p.m. Saturday, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Question Box

Q—We are a group of girls working for the Olympic Commissary Company and would like very much to donate blood to the Red Cross. Is it possible to do so in Hanford, and if not, would it be possible to start a blood bank? I know there are many men and women who would like to give their blood but cannot take the time off to go to any other city. B.C.

THE WORLD AT WAR

The Western Front

The battle of southwestern Holland, an extremely important battle for the Allies, was practically wound up last week in complete victory. Few German troops were left south of the Meuse (Mass in Dutch) River, and those who remained were roaming around the swamps and farms looking for small farmer's boats in which to escape across the river. The weather has been consistently against us all through the Dutch campaign, and it did not switch sides last week. A heavy fog rolled over the countryside which enabled the Nazis to get away from the air strafing which would have surely decimated them in decent flying weather. But not all the enemy escaped—thousands of prisoners were taken and the casualties were heavy.

To the west, unexpectedly strong fortifications and gun emplacements were revealed as the Canadians fought their way across the narrow neck of land connecting Beveland Island with Walcheren Island, the last Nazi stronghold on the north bank of the Schelde Estuary. Not to be denied the clearing of the approach to Antwerp any longer, General Dempsey called on the navy aid air force to make a strong commando landing on Walcheren to form a pincers with the Canadians coming in from the land side. This bold maneuver succeeded so well that by the end of the week the navy was busy clearing the mines from the estuary and the first allied supply ships were preparing to move into Antwerp.

The Germans have fought the battle of lower Holland hard and well. They have realized what a great loss it will be to them as well as we have known how absolutely essential the undamaged port of Antwerp is to our supply problem. The port has been ours for two months, and is doubtless in perfect condition by this time. With the estuary opened up huge supplies will start rolling to the north and of the Western Front by the shortest possible route. General Dempsey, General Hodge and General Patton will be able to mount offensives of overpowering strength with the assurance of a steady stream of arms and equipment. The second phase of the battle of Germany is ready to begin. That it will start with a great flanking movement pointed at the weak northern end of the Westwall is a good bet.

Toward the end of the week General Eisenhower began one of his favorite tactical moves. All up and down the front strong sorties were preceded by heavy artillery fire. This action is designed to accomplish two purposes—to feel for weak spots and to give the enemy the jitters wondering where the main attack is going to hit. Down in the Vosges mountains General Patch's boys hit a fairly weak spot and advanced as much as five miles in parts of a 25 mile front, taking the town of Baccarat, key to two mountain passes into Germany. The quiet Cologne sector also flared into action. After heavy artillery preparation our GI Joes came out of the gloomy Hurtgen Forest, took three towns, one of them ten miles inside Germany and cut the important Duren-Hurtgen Road. By Friday they were only 27 miles from Cologne on the Rhine.

The Pacific Front

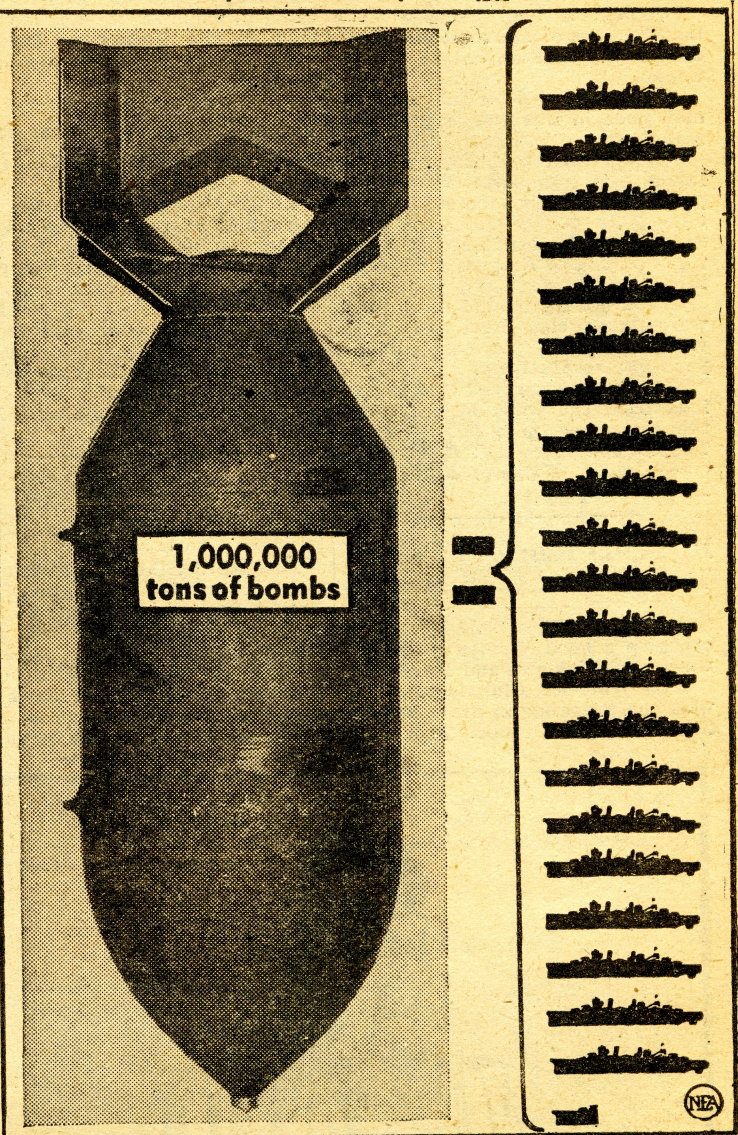

Nearly three years ago American and Filipino soldiers fought a heroic delaying action on Bataan. They were expendables who enabled us to gain time enough to marshal men and materials to stop the enemy at New Guinea. Last week the Japs sent some expendables to Layte to try to delay MacArthur while they reinforced Luzon and Mindanao. With Samar in our hands and Leyte three-quarters cleaned up it was definitely a suicide squad which landed on the west coast of Leyte after dark. With the men at weapons at his command MacArthur is not liable to fool around very long with any Jap delaying action. Now that he has a firm foothold in the Philippines it is probable that he is cuffing the Japs with one hand while he prepares for new offensive action with the other. But this suicide stand is typical of what may be expected as we advance closer and closer to Japan.

The Eastern Front

The Russians have a habit which is very annoying to the Nazis. When a drive slows down on one sector due to enemy reinforcements, they transfer their punch to another sector. They can swing a haymaker with either hand. That is what happened on the Eastern Front last week. The Nazis rushed strong reinforcements to East Prussia to defend the home of the Junkers, and succeeded in slowing down the strong Russian offensive. Meanwhile the Red armies on the southern end had been gathering strength, so they started swinging with the left. They hit so hard that in the week they advanced from about 80 miles west of Budapest to the very outskirts of the Hungarian capital. When that is taken the Germans face another pincers on the homeland from the southeast. The net tightens.

Down in the Balkans the last of the supermen fled like rats from Greece. That country is now entirely cleared of the enemy. The

Why the Enemy Stagger

One million tons of bombs have fallen on the enemy since Pearl Harbor—a volume of explosives which, as shown on chart above, are equal to the combined weight of 22 and a quarter battleships of the 45,000-ton Iowa class. Almost half of the total has been dropped since D-Day in Europe, according to Gen. H. H. Arnold, AAF commander, who promises that the second million tons will fall "in only a fraction of the time required for the first."

estimate of the number of Nazis trapped in the Balkans ranges anywhere from two to five divisions. None of them represent a formidable fighting force, and all of them are wandering footloose and weary through countries where they are hated. Those who live to see the fatherland again will be purely lucky.

The Strategic Air War

One of the main reasons for our recent success in the Pacific is revealed by figures released by the Navy. In a two-month period fliers of our Third and Seventh Fleets destroyed 2,594 enemy planes. We lost 300 planes but due to rescue efficiency, many less crews. The battle of the Philippines gave us a new naval flier hero, Commander David McCampbell of Los Angeles shot down nine Jap planes sure and two more probables in one day, October 24th. It took him 95 minutes to do it.

Over Germany the Luftwaffe challenged our raiders with a large formation of new jet-propelled planes. The score: we got 203 German planes, they got 59 of ours—40 bombers and 19 fighters.

For some time the R.A.F. has been precision-bombing enemy canals, dams, dikes. Nothing loath to borrow a good idea, the A.A.F. last week bombed and drained one of Germany's most important canals and one lesser one.

The Burma-Chinese Front

For centuries "China Tea" has been among the best, but the tea that has been brewing for some time past in China has turned out to be a bitter cup for the Allies. The recall of General Stilwell has brought the situation into the limelight, with explanations and re-creminations coming from many sources. The bitter brew seems to be that China is not an organized and unified country as are its major allies. Chiang Kai Shek is the brilliant leader of the Nationalists, but there are many semi-independent war lords who pay only lip service to Chungking and the Communist army in north China which is not reconciled to the National government. To this weak internal situation add the tremendous difficulty of getting war materials into China and the war-weariness of the people and you have the one black bitter cup in the whole allied tea pot. The only hope of relief in the near future is a strong successful campaign to reopen the Burma Road, followed by an invasion of the South China coast to form a pincers on the Jap forces in China.

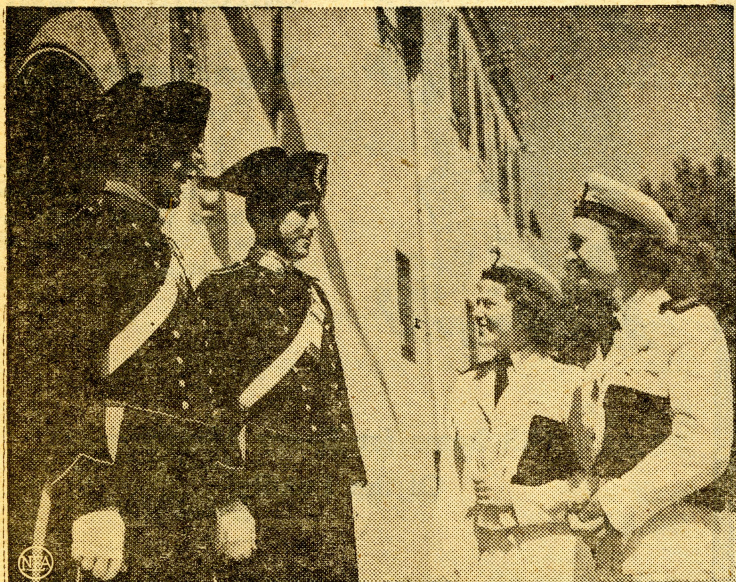

The Overall Picture

Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons, "I cannot predict nor still less guarantee the end of the German War before the end of Spring or even before we reach early Summer." As for the war against Japan, Churchill said it would not be wise to assume that it can be ended in less than a year and a half after the Nazis surrender.

Bad news from the Philippines caused Japan's Premier Koiso to blame the home front for a lag in war production. Broadcasting from Tokio he said that Japanese soldiers were dying because they were not getting enough weapons. The words had a familiar ring to those who remembered how often we wept over "Too little and too late." And we are still short of some essential items.

Speaking on the 27th anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution, Joseph Stalin threw his full weight behind an international peace organization with teeth in it to quickly squelch an aggression. He hailed an unprecedented unity between Russia, Britain and the United States—a unity which he said will survive the war. It would be a miracle for the allies to have no differences of opinion or point of view, he said, but it was almost as great a miracle that our differences are so minor. Speaking with great pride of the Russian Army, he at the same time paid high tribute to its allies on the western front. The three armies were closing a huge vise on Germany from which there was no escape for the Nazis—the only question was that of time, and he confidently predicted that Berlin would be occupied soon.

On Second Thought

by Gordon Sutherland

Last week this reporter spent one of the most pleasant evenings I have had since coming to Hanford. The occasion was when Dr. Wassell spoke to us in the Auditorium. A few of us had the pleasure of acting as hosts to the hero of Java and the navy men who accompanied him.

To begin with, two ladies who are doing their bits here at H.E.W., had expressed a wish to meet the commander, as each had a personal relationship with which to surprise him. And it was a pleasant surprise when Commander Wassell was introduced to Mrs. Wassell. He had been told that Hanford was remote from the beaten paths, so it was the last place that he would have expected to meet the wife of a cousin of his. Then when we introduced the second lady, whose name meant nothing to the doctor, as the fiancée of an old Arkansas fishing companion (now a major in the army) the good doctor's cup was overflowing.

At dinner our guest of honor asked if the meal was typical of our food here at Hanford, or whether the chef had fixed up something special for us. We assured him that everyone in every mess hall was getting exactly what we ate, and that it was an average meal for us. The doctor, knowing something of the size of the project, was amazed that food so good and well prepared could be served to so many people at once. He was thoroughly familiar with the problem involved in feeding large numbers of people, and highly complimented our commissary on a difficult job well done.

After dinner we had about an hour to put in before the commander was scheduled to speak. Sitting around chatting about this and that, I took advantage of the opportunity to ask Dr. Wassell if he was acquainted with a branch of his family which had moved from Missouri to Connecticut some years ago. He said that he did not know those Wassells personally but knew of them. I told him that about ten years ago they had settled down in the little Connecticut town where I lived, and how the four Wassell boys and one girl had gone through school and grown up with the same crowd as our four girls and one boy. Then the war came and all four Wassell boys enlisted in the Army Air Forces. First one crashed in training at an Alabama airfield; then the second was lost on an air patrol duty over icebound Greenland; only a few months later the third was reported missing from a bombing mission over China. Four fine young American brothers, every one of whom volunteered for extra-hazardous service—it is hard to understand why one family should have to give so much to our country when so many millions of us give so little.

Commander Wassell was deeply moved by my story of those distant relatives of his. He touched the ribbons on his chest, "They gave me this Navy Cross for what happened in Java. It was purely chance that getting those wounded sailors out before the Japs caught up with us came to the attention of those in high places. But the heroes of Java were those boys who voted to take a chance on what looked to be sure death rather than to risk imprisonment, and the British and Dutch who stayed behind to fight a hopeless delaying action, knowing what their fate would be. I wear this ribbon with pride—but I wear it for those men, not for myself."

He went on "And those Wassell boys you knew—I'm proud to have the same blood in my veins. It's boys like them who are the real heroes of this war. They go out eagerly, they take the orders given them and do their duty as they see it. Some die without ever hearing an enemy bullet whine, but they are heroes just as surely as those whose names are spread over the front pages of the newspapers. We have millions of men like that, which is one reason why we've never been beaten. We call them dough-boys, gobs, leathernecks, GI Joes, Yanks—they're the real heroes."

"And their families—the mothers and fathers, wives and sweethearts, brothers and sisters who can't go—who have to 'keep the home fires burning' as the old song says—don't think for a minute that they're any less heroes. When you're in action you get a lift from tension and excitement, a sort of super-charging that carries you through what has to be done. But back home you have to go about the ordinary, humdrum duties day after day with always deep down in your heart the consciousness that someone you love may have just breathed his last. That's the kind of heroism that never makes the headlines, but those who have it are heroes without medals or ribbons just the same."

Musing, the Commander added, "If the boy who is missing in China managed to parachute down in friendly Chinese territory, the name Wassell might help some. I spent a good many years there doing medical missionary work, and made a great many friends in various parts of China. I hope the youngster managed to land safely in a region where some of my friends are. He might not be heard from for a long time but still be safe."

When you have spent a few hours with a man like Commander Wassell, a man who has devoted a lifetime to serving humanity and has then risen to the heights in a critical situation, what is there to do but to go back to your work with a renewed vigour and determination to get the job done, well and soon?

Explain State Insurance Aid

The Washington State Industrial Insurance and Medical Aid act is a state administered service to aid injured workmen and their families in the event of injury on the job. The expense of the Industrial Insurance is paid by the employer, and is administered by the state.

In the event that a workman is hurt while working, he will be awarded a compensation during the time that he is off from work. If compared to our present war-time wages, this compensation is very small, however, in the event that a workman is fatally injured, his widow and dependents receive a monthly payment of $50 plus $15 per month for the youngest child plus $10 for the second youngest child and for each additional child $7.50 per month. The widow is to receive this amount until her death or remarriage and the children until they reach the age of 18 years.

In addition to the Industrial Insurance Law, the state of Washington has a Medical Aid Act which provides that any workman shall receive free medical and surgical aid, hospital care and transportation if injured while on the job. This fund is also supported by the employer.

Forty-seven of the forty-eight states have Industrial Insurance laws. (In some states it is called "the Workman's Compensation Law.") The laws vary in different states to meet the particular need of the workman in that section of the country.

The Industrial Insurance Law should not be confused with the Federal Old Age Benefit Law or the Unemployment Compensation Law, as all three of these agencies are administered separately and maintain funds for their administration.

Woman of the Week

WOMAN OF THE WEEK is Virginia McShane—who, paradoxically, is an "instrument man"—anyhow, she works with little gadgets and dinguses that look as confusing as a jigsaw puzzle. But Virginia is one contradiction after another anyway. She's a native of the state—Spokane (a rare bird), but her technical training came from the east—Rutgers and Columbia Universities. Then there's the fact that this attractive, rosy-cheeked, black-haired colleen is the mother of four youngsters, ages 13, 12, 11 and 7. A widow, Virginia's been in war work in the Northwest for three years.

At Barracks 254

One of the many planned recreational activities in the Negro Recreation Center in Barracks 254 is the art class, pictured above, with Irene Sanders (an Olympic employee) and Jessie Wodson (200-W janitor) deeply absorbed in their paintings. Last week a display of wall plaques, oil paintings, pencil sketches and other articles made in the classes were in an open-house exhibit at the center. Other activities at 254 include juke-box dancing, reading, listening periods for classical recordings, group meetings and writing letters home. Matred McKissick and Helen Hunt are in charge of the program.

Local Fighter To Meet Dolan

Abie Chavez, Hanford's own bantam battler, will meet Joey Dolan, who twice has won his matches in the Auditorium ring, on November 20 in the main-go on the night's boxing card.

Champion in the Southwest (he's from Albuquerque), "Little Abie" took the crown from Thurman Murdock in 10 rounds. A scant review of some of Abie's fistic classics includes: a decision over Henry Moreno in 10 rounds and a close and boo-ed decision to Benny Perez, who was then champion of Mexico and one of the leading bantam contenders of the world. In the clean-cut defeated column stand such fight names as Babe Colima, Cherokee Kid and Benny Cordova.

Little Abie, while training here at Hanford, has been the talk of the town with fistic lovers. Possessor of a body that has the beauty sculptors a-hunting, Abie, together with the others on the card to be announced later, will have Hanfordonians yelling come Monday week in the Auditorium.

A BIG ONE

Amid cat calls and such rude bits as "did you use a .22 or a shotgun," W. P. Ramsey, Hankee-James Refrigeration man, proudly holds up a 12-pound steelhead he caught "oh just down here on the river." Angler Ramsay, from Corpus Christi, Texas, says he used a spinner on the big fellow; he also offers the tip that fish are running pretty good on the river just now.

Gasoline hoarding allowed a quick weekend hunting trip to the Canadian border for Bill Vail and Karl Payne, shown above with their bag of two 4-point bucks at 248 and 268 pounds.

Re-State Regulations for Withdrawal of Contraband

Attention of those leaving the project is again called to the new procedures relative to withdrawal of contraband (guns, cameras, ammunition, explosives, etc.) from Hanford Patrol Headquarters.

"Request for Contraband" application forms are to be obtained from the Contraband Clerk, Hanford Patrol Headquarters. These may be obtained at the Contraband Room from 8:00 a.m. through 6:00 p.m. and at the Ordnance Room from 6:00 p.m. through 8:00 a.m. The applicant must indicate on these forms the date and approximate time of his leaving and by which barricade. The articles to be transferred to him will then be transferred by Patrol to that barricade. Applications made before noon of any day will be processed by 2:00 p.m. the same day.

Particular attention is called to these procedures so that those leaving the reservation will not be inconvenienced through unfamiliarity with these regulations.

Practice Girls Cage Team

Six girls basketball teams—that may be the league set-up for Hanford's Auditorium season if present plans follow through.

Two teams are already working out Tuesday and Thursday evenings in answer to the first call for cage talent among the girls. And contact has been made since with Nurses, Olympic Commissary, Time Office, Mimeograph Department, WAC's and Women's Rec Hall. The WAC's had to decline, but Miss Achterman is still holding out for a six-team league for twice-weekly play.

Good Gyms —Need Teams

With two swell gyms for basketball use, Rec officials are blue this week about the response so far to organization of a men's cage league.

Two teams, Concrete and Newberry-Chandler & Lord, are the challengers. Concrete's pilot being Dave Showker and A. E. Hurntner taking over the sub-contractor team.

Tentative dates with the Universities of Oregon and Washington are on tap, with invitations sent to other stiff competition schools and service camps. Invitation is also given for entry of other teams in the Hanford League.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK: What's Your Outstanding Memory of Armistice Day?

P. M. Richardson
Labor

"The boys at my camp in New Jersey sure whooped it up back twenty-six years ago when the Armistice was signed and I was in the Army," Richardson said. "Things were pretty rough in those days."

This Labor Department man celebrated (besides Armistice Day) a year's service on the job this week. He's from Russellville, Kentucky, but of course lives in the Hanford barracks now.

G. M. Patterson
Painter

Sure Patterson remembers Armistice Day: "I was just a kid down in Florida," this Southerner says. "We tied tin cans on the back of our bicycles and raised quite a little hob in the town by riding up and down the streets on our bikes."

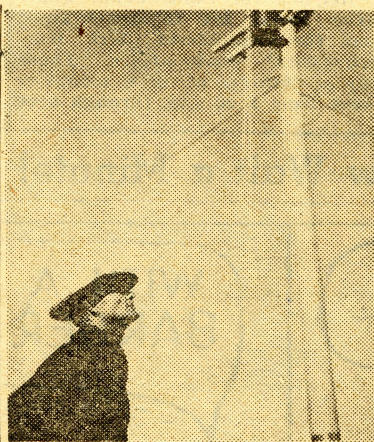

From Jacksonville, Patterson came north to Hanford "about three months ago." He's single (he asks if that's an advantage) and lives in the barracks.

W. T. Ferguson
Carpenter

"Well, now, it's peculiar about November 11, 1918," Ferguson said, "but if the Armistice had been signed two days later, I might have been a soldier. I was scheduled to be inducted on the 13th."

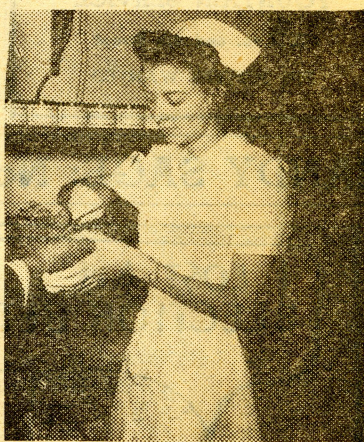

Ferguson is a hard-hitting 69-year-old carpenter at 100-F. From Clinton, Indiana, now living in Connell, he's worked at Hanford for more than a year. His wife and daughter make the family home over in Connell.

C. P. Parker
Electrician

"I was in the middle of the Atlantic on Kansas," Parker said, hurriedly explaining that "Kansas" was his battleship when he was in the Navy in 1918. "We didn't have much equipment for putting on an Armistice celebration, but we managed."

Now living in Prosser, where his wife and two children make his home, Parker is an electrical foreman in the 100-F Area. He's from Houston, Texas, originally.

Mary Bess Johnson
First Aid Nurse

"Why, I don't remember Armistice Day," Mary Bess said, surprised. "I wasn't even born yet."

Miss Johnson, from Liberty Hill, Texas, was "fixing-up" a "minor" in the 100-F First Aid Station, where she's on duty, when asked the Question of the Week.

Too young to remember the first Armistice, she's looking forward to VE-Day and the return of her brother and sister from the Army and Navy, respectively.
