

As to this Lent compared with last there are many external causes the ill effects of which others feel no less than you do. First the frequent & long ~~and~~ suspension of Daily Service, the distraction of secular and exciting subjects, the reading of an ill chosen book, and other reasons of which I have it in my power to say that, the Flock is not responsible but the Pastor.

The fact is probably as you say; and is a matter mostly of sad thoughts, & unexpressed in secret.

Under the difficult circumstances of the case I think you did right yesterday. At all events you did it for the best; & that is right to you: and God will not suffer you to lack anything far so doing even if you were to judge wrong.

As to the general question. You complain of a want of son with "confession, humility & the love of God": and remember that I said there are the 3 ends.

They are written beginnings on means, but ends - and you must expect a long way - perhaps "fifty years long in the wilderness" - before you attain

- to such a sense of these things as would stay your complaint at the want of them.
- Accorded you can do in:
1. To aim at them.
  2. To desire & pray for them.
  3. To feel any measure of sorrow & shame at not propounding them to be sorry & ashamed. Real & honest & shame are no greater.
  4. To wait till God gives them in due season.

The words "Repentance without love" may be overstrained. There is love in the lowest motion of the heart toward God: even in the Prodigal still saying "my Father": there is real love in every desire for repentance which we feel ourselves not to possess: in every feeling of unhappiness & self-reproach such as arises in comparing other Lent with last.

Perhaps what God is teaching you this Lent is the reality & extent of your defects, such as distraction & heartlessness in prayer &c.

So that this Lent may turn out fuller of real humiliation after all than the last.

Again an increased sense of faultiness certainly does not prove intensibility of conscience.

As to inadvertence in prayer, a distinction must be drawn between carelessness, or distraction, & want of sensible earnestness, or enjoymentof God presence. These last are wholly gifts of God. and the most devout are suffered often to go long in a dry, & dim state. as in Isaich. L. 10.

You may take two great consolations.

1. That no distraction in prayer are infected ~~comes~~<sup>us</sup> as faults, but then they are voluntary, or else after perceiving them we continue in them willingly.
2. That perseverance in prayer in spite of weariness, dryness, & discouragement is if I may so say, more acceptable, than prayer with great sensible emotion.

because they have in them none of faith, patience, self-chestisement & humiliation.

Let me know exactly where I have failed to understand you.

You had direct your heart into the love of God, & into the patient-waiting for Christ".
