After referring to an illness, he continues:-

" thank you for your kindness in sending me a copy of the new edition of your work on the Human Mind.

It is to me a subject of great gratification to remember that though we once crossed each other in opinion we left no wounds & raised no warfare.

Lovington. March 16. 1847

My dear Sir,

A slight illness which has now for some weeks confined me to my house has made me delay to thank you for your kindness in sending me a copy of the new Edition of your work on the Human Mind.

The same cause has forbid,
as yet my enjoying it:

except in one way in which it has been a source of frequent and very pleasing thoughts, I mean as the token of kindly remembrance of an old friend:
and of the undiminished esteem we bear to each other.

It is to me a subject of great gratification to remember that though we once crossed each other in opinion we left no wounds, & raised no warfare.

I trust you will oblige me by accepting a copy of some Sermons which the Publisher shall send you, and where you come to anything at variance with your opinion, believe that we are united in the desire to know the Truth, & to do His will who is our only hope.

I trust your health is restored to you.

With my kind remembrances to Mrs. Davies,

Believe me,

My dear Sir

Yours faithfully,

H. S. Manning.
