The first Alpharetta Methodist church building was erected about the year 1859. Prior to that time the congregation worshiped at a camp-ground. This was known as the New Prospect Methodist church and retained that name until Milton county was formed and the town of Alpharetta was named. The church was then called the Alpharetta Methodist church.

This same building was used, with repairs being made, until the year 1931. At this time the officials of the church, together with the Woman's Missionary Society, sponsored a movement to erect a much-needed new building. Work on the new building began during the year 1931 and it was completed in the year 1932. Reverend James L. Marlin was pastor the year this movement was begun. He was succeeded, in the order of their service, by Rev. Blake Craft, Rev. J. K. Kellely, and Rev. Frank Moorehead. These pastors all gave their whole-hearted efforts toward the furtherance of this project.

The present building consists of two auditoriums and nine S.S. classrooms. It is situated on a plot of ground consisting of about two acres and is valued at approximately $20,000.

Adjoining the church is the parsonage, which is located on a plot of ground 100 by 200 ft. The parsonage is a building consisting of six (6) rooms and a bath and is valued at $24,500.
