History of Midway Church - Glenn Circuit

Midway Church was built in 1867 in land lot number 122 and fourteenth district. It was the consolidation of two congregations, one of which was at Liberty Hill and the other called Rehoboth at Antioch. The property consisting of three acres was donated by John T. Boykin, Sr. with the stipulation that it should revert to the heirs in case of abandonment of the church. The property was deeded by the heirs to the North Georgia Conference in 1910.

The church was built by contributions of lumber, labor and money from the members and friends. Some of the lumber was secured from the Wilder estate, and is still in a state of good preservation.

Among the pastors are J. W. Lee and James Eakes. It was formerly a part of the West Point Circuit.

The original deed reads as follows regarding the boundary:

Sept. 16, 1867

"Beginning at a small chestnut oak bush near Mrs. Sloan's line, thence running westward along said line to a sassafras bush; thence southward to a persimmon tree; then crossing the public road to another persimmon tree; thence northward to starting point."

In recent years Midway has had an increase in attendance and interest. Improvements are being made on the church building and grounds.
