Mount Pleasant

Numbered among the oldest Methodist Churches of North Georgia is Mount Pleasant in the northeast section of Whitfield County. It is on the Varnell Circuit. The first church building, which stood on a site adjoining the cemetery, was destroyed by fire. The present building was erected on a nearby lot a short time later.

The rock for the foundation of the present church was hauled to the site by ox team.

Mount Pleasant church may not be the largest church in Whitfield County but it has held continuous services ever since its organization "as one of the oldest."

The present church building was erected about 1881. The earliest legible date on a grave stone was 1888.
