precedent (pre' sə dənt): an action or decision that serves as an example or a standard in later, similar situations

Analyze the Bible Reading

The decision by the Jerusalem Conference brought joy and stability to the Gentile church. Judas and Silas, who were prophets, stayed on at Antioch to strengthen the believers there. After a while, Paul suggested to Barnabas that they revisit cities where they had preached. They would see how the believers were doing. Barnabas wanted John Mark to join them, but Paul did not think it would be wise to include Mark because he had not finished the first journey. He decided to take Silas with him, and he and Barnabas made separate journeys.

Paul arrived at Lystra in Asia Minor. There he met Timothy, a young man who became like a son to him. In fact, Paul called Timothy "my son in the faith." Timothy was part Jewish and part Gentile.

Paul wanted the young man to accompany him on his journey. Though Paul was a firm supporter of Gentile freedom from Judaism, he nevertheless asked Timothy to be circumcised. Paul probably believed that Timothy's presence would cause less controversy if he were circumcised.

Again, Paul set an important precedent. It is wrong to force Christians to practice something the Gospel does not require as though it were essential to salvation. However, we will need to respect and even adapt to local customs—as long as they are beneficial and not sinful—when we are trying to bring others to Jesus. Scriptural priniciples are the standard for judging whether local customs are sinful. In 1 Corinthians 9:22, Paul writes, "I am made all things to all men, that I might by all means save some," meaning that he adapted to local customs as he reached out to the lost.

As Paul's group journeyed from city to city, they told the churches about the decision of the Jerusalem Conference. They gave fresh encouragement, and their work brought greater stability to the churches and more conversions among the Gentiles. Paul wanted to go deeper into Asia to preach, but the Holy Spirit directed him to Macedonia instead. Macedonia is the northern area of Greece, which is part of Europe. The Gospel first reached Europe in Greece.

Paul grappled with the factors that are part of any missionary effort. Decisions had to be made about applying the Gospel in non-Jewish settings. The missionaries had to recognize and avoid practices that might hinder others from receiving the Gospel. They needed to require converted people to repent of and put away sinful cultural practices. The Holy Spirit's guidance was the key to carrying out missionary efforts. The Spirit knew where and how to build the church. Following His will brought God's blessing, and the church prospered.

Analyze the Bible Reading

As Paul's second missionary journey continued, the Holy Spirit guided him to preach in Macedonia. So his party traveled to Philippi, the chief city of eastern Macedonia. Again Paul sought out the Jews, who customarily gathered along the river bank on the Sabbath since they did not have a synagaogue. As Paul preached there, God opened the heart of a businesswoman named Lydia. She and her whole house believed and were baptized. Lydia then graciously gave lodging to Paul and his team.

God knows whose heart is ready for the Gospel. John 6:44 says that no one can come to Jesus unless the Father draws him. Kingdom builders need to know this. It is our responsibility as Christians to preach Christ. As we do, we need to pray that God's grace would draw souls to Jesus. Unless God does a mighty work with His Holy Spirit, people hear the Gospel but they do not receive it and are not converted. Many Jews and Gentiles heard Paul's preaching in Philippi, but most chose not to accept the message.

As the brethren continued to work in Philippi, a demon-controlled girl harassed them with demonic utterances. These utterances were from an evil spirit, which grieved Paul. Finally, using Jesus' name, the apostle commanded the demon to come out of the girl. The girl was miraculously freed from demon control, but this got Paul and Silas into trouble. The girl's masters had made a lot of money by using this girl as a fortune-teller. These evil men craved money so much that they were willing to exploit this poor girl. Now that she was free from the demon, she had no strange power; their source of money was gone.

The men grabbed Paul and Silas and dragged them to the marketplace, where the city's rulers held court. There they accused them of disorderly behavior and teaching strange doctrines. The rulers, without due process of law, tore off the apostles' clothes and had them severely beaten. Then they cast them into prison, ordering the jailer to secure them well.

The jailer threw Paul and Silas into the most secure part of the prison. Paul and Silas spent the night in tremendous discomfort. Their feet were clamped in rough stocks. Their backs had been torn open by their beating. Physically, they were miserable, and it is no surprise that they could not sleep. But Paul and Silas drew on God's grace by praying and singing praises to God. There is no better response to dire circumstances than to pray and sing.

God was honored, the missionaries were encouraged, and other prisoners in the jail received an amazing testimony of grace. Then God sent a great earthquake. The doors of the prison swung open and everyone's shackles fell off. The jailer saw the doors opened and, thinking that all the prisoners had escaped, drew his sword to kill himself. Paul cried out to him, "We are all here; do yourself no harm."

The jailer was overwhelmed by God's convicting Spirit. He saw that God was working through Paul and Silas. Calling for a light, he rushed into the cell and fell at the apostles' feet. "What must I do to be saved?" he asked. Paul and Silas shared the Gospel with him and his household. That night, the jailer and his whole household were converted to Jesus Christ and baptized in His name. God had used the faithful testimony of patient suffering to bring more souls into His kingdom.
