The Pilgrim By John Bunyan

Who would true Valor see
Let him come hither;
One here will Constant be,
Come Wind, come Weather.
There's no Discouragement,
Shall make him once Relent,
His first avowed Intent,
To be a Pilgrim.

Who so beset him round,
With dismal Stories,
Do but themselves Confound;
His Strength the more is.
No Lion can him fright,
He'll with a Giant Fight,
But he will have a right,
To be a Pilgrim.

Hobgoblin, nor foul Fiend,
Can daunt his Spirit:
He knows, he at the end,
Shall Life Inherit.
Then Fancies fly away,
He'll fear not what men say,
He'll labor Night and Day,
To be a Pilgrim.

A Drop of Mercy

Becky McGurrin

Heinrich glared at the soldier. "You killed a good man." The soldier looked at him. "Have mercy, sir. I'm so thirsty." "Is this what you want?" Heinrich asked, holding up his cider skin. The soldier's face lit up. "Aye. Bless you for it." Heinrich spat. "Not even a drop. Here's your mercy." He turned the skin upside-down and squeezed every last drop of cider onto the ground. Set in the American Revolution, A Drop of Mercy is the story of a young man finding his way—and finding hope—through the smoke and confusion of a war that crashed into his own backyard.

Living Tabernacle

Rebecca Martin

Who should Sharon believe?

Father warns that Jerusalem and its temple are destined for destruction. But her brother Adam declares that God will never let His temple fall. Is Adam right? Or does Father speak truth when he says that believers are now God's living tabernacle?

Set in the time of the apostles, this story vividly portrays both the turmoil and the deep peace devout Jews experienced as they grappled with the reality of Jesus the Messiah.

A sequel to Fountain of Life.

Thirty Little Fingers

Sheila J. Petre

Thirty Little Fingers is for anyone with a family. Perhaps you never opened your home to a Muslim exchange student, but Sheila and Michael have, twice. Complicated friendships, marital tensions and comforts, and the kindness of strangers at the post office are chronicled in ways that will make you laugh until you cry, or just plain cry. Sheila Petre's collection of memoir, humor, recipes, and poetry is a book you'll want to share.

How Can Anyone Say God Is Good?

Gary Miller

Nick is fed up with life and aggravated by the simple-minded people who believe in a supreme being in spite of all the agony and chaos around them. How can they have the audacity to say their God is good? Written in story form and ending with the author's personal journey, this book is for the agnostic, atheist, or Christian believer struggling in the faith.

Courage That Counts

Rebecca Martin

Children aged 11-13 were no different in pioneer days than they are today. Their way of living was different, their pace of life slower, but it still took courage to overcome the challenges of growing up, just like it does today.

Friends of a Feather

Olivia Weaver,

Illustrated by Rosene Wine

Julia got along better with her pet chickens than she did with her classmates. Sometimes the other children laughed at her, so she often just played by herself. "They don't like me," Julia told her dad when he encouraged her to be friendlier at school. But when she agreed to try, nothing seemed to work. Then something terrible happened to one of her feathered friends, and Julia discovered she had good friends after all—people friends. Illustrated by watercolor paintings.

Teddy's Tornado

Heidi Clugston

Illustrated by David W. Miller

When Teddy went to sleep in his room beside the kitchen, Mommy always sang his favorite song. She left the door open so light would shine on his pillow. Then one frightening evening a tornado smashed Teddy's bike and destroyed his house. Teddy's mommy didn't have enough money for a new house. What would they do? Would anyone help them? Some kind people came to help, and Teddy and his mommy discovered that God cared for them. As their new house was being built, they learned a new favorite song to sing at bedtime. Illustrated by full-color paintings.

A Kitten Named Birthday

Janet Heatwole

Six-year-old Sarah loves to play with her birthday present, a kitten she named Birthday. Because Sarah is deaf, she cannot hear it when Birthday purrs, but she can feel it rumbling like a tiny motor inside his throat. Sarah's mother uses sign language to answer Sarah's many questions about her pet. As Sarah signs with her hands, another question is growing bigger and bigger in her mind. Will her mother know the answer? Illustrated by pencil drawings.

The Arrowhead

Lucinda J. Miller, Illustrated by Alex Brover

For many years an arrowhead lay hidden, buried in the soil of an Indiana farm. The Indian who had shot it was long forgotten. The generations of settlers who followed, chopping down trees and planting corn, never found it. Decades passed, and other families who worked the land never found it either. Then came Ted, praying and searching for an arrowhead like those his sisters had found. Will he find one? History comes alive through this story of an Indian brave, hardworking settlers, farm families, and a boy named Ted who longed to find an arrowhead of his own. Illustrated by fine watercolor paintings.

CLUTCHED in the TALONS

and Two Other Stories

DARRYL DERSTINE

Jordan looked down at the magazine cover hungrily, his heart thudding against his ribs.

Captain Jim felt calm elation as he leveled the C-130 at cruise altitude. He'd show those boys some real power.

Kaitlin slipped down by her bed and the words came, broken words from a broken soul. It was not good English. It was good submission.

These three stories powerfully illustrate the danger of becoming ensnared by the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, and show us the blessings of living free.
