

SOMETHING FOR SEYMOUR
Christian Light Publications
Harrisonburg, Virginia 22802
© 2018 Christian Light Publications, Inc.
All rights reserved. Printed in China

ISBN: 978-0-87813-283-6

Illustrations: David W. Miller
Some reference material from Gettyimages.com
Cover & Interior Design: David W. Miller

Way up on the top of a hill, where the wind blows wild by night and day, stands an old, weathered house. When the moon is high, the windows
moan and the old house
shivers and groans.

In the old house high up on the hill lives an old man, sad and alone. All day long old Seymour sits and rocks. Sometimes he's sad and he sighs, for he knows something everyone knows—that he's not like most folks. "A-ain't t-too smart," Seymour says as he sits and rocks. People tease him and call him names. But today . . .

... something is going to happen.
Old Seymour claps on his cap and opens the rusty screen door. His heart beats fast. He smiles and scuffs across the weathered porch, his clawlike nails scraping the unpainted rails.

One step, two steps, three, and four.

Off he totters down the hill toward the farm
just past the clump of trees.