The office of Residence Life and Housing at Willamette University fosters an environment that is supportive of student growth and learning. We focus our efforts and center our work with students to enhance their self growth & well being, help them connect in a meaningful way with others, and engage in opportunities to better their residential communities throughout the academic year. We believe in creating spaces where students feel like they matter and belong.
“Residence halls contribute significantly to what they [students] learn, the friends they meet, their identities, their likelihood of graduation, and their overall satisfaction with college; residence halls are places where students make friends, connect with the larger university community, and create memories that become the foundation for meaningful college experience”
