The Fujii Bakery and residence was built in 1943 - alongside the main highway in Wailea. The Old Mamalahoa Highway connected all of the Hamakua Coast on the eastside of the Big Island. Each town along the coast included small mom and pop businesses like the Fujii Bakery, small convenience stores, and gas stations. This little village (once nestled between cane fields) still has that small country atmosphere. A Bed & Breakfast establishment, (down the road), sports a museum like feel with art and events for the community and the next door residence still
