All The Elements of Nature

Doctor Pioneering New Approach to Treatment

by Dennis McMillan

Dr. Emanuel Revici, scientific director of The Institute of Applied Biology in New York City, has developed a unique treatment for AIDS utilizing a safe, non-toxic chemotherapy and nutritional supplementation. His approach has brought about many remissions and recoveries from the usually fatal disease.

Out of his 274 AIDS and ARC patients who have been treated during the past six years, only 22 have died, and most have experienced measurable, positive change.

Revici, a 91-year-old theorist, biochemist, and physician, and founder of The Institute of Applied Biology for research and treatment of degenerative diseases, is a pioneer in this field. He has created a completely new system of medicine, diagnostics, and pharmacology by going back over 5,000 years into Oriental philosophy and medicine, and combining this yin-yang approach with the quantum physics of Albert Einstein. Moving away from today's Newtonian approach of cause and effect in medicine, Revici's method does not deal with treatment of the disease, but rather a holistic approach re-establishing balance within one's system and enabling it to heal itself.

Einstein's physics and yin-yang Oriental philosophy both involve a dualistic universe where two opposites complement and oppose each other, and ultimately maintain balance. This is the basis of Revici's medicine.

Revici uses the terms "anabolic" and "catabolic" to describe the processes the human system goes through. When in an anabolic state, the body is in a building-up stage, utilizing synthesis and repair, positively charged; when in catabolic state, the body is breaking down, using energy production and digestion, and in negative charge. The state of health is one in which a balance of anabolic and catabolic is maintained; conversely, a state of disease exists when either anabolic or catabolic is exaggerated.

Dr. Revici has discovered that most Kaposi's sarcoma comes from anabolic imbalance, and most other opportunistic diseases are catabolic. Revici has found that non-toxic agents can be administered to restore balance in a diseased system. Anabolic imbalance can be treated with lipid acids and sulfur, selenium, magnesium, and lipid-copper compounds. To balance catabolic dominance, lipid alcohols and lithium, zinc, and iron compounds are prescribed.

Revici has made the discovery that all the elements of nature as found in the Periodic Table of Elements correspond with either anabolic or catabolic activity. The heavier metals have been found to be the most effective in treatment.

The AIDS treatment program has four phases. First the patient is injected with antiviral agents to treat the primary viral infection. Then the immune deficiency is treated with refractory (disease-fighting) lipids. Next, the secondary opportunistic disease (most commonly KS or pneumocystis) is medicated with antibiotics, antimicrobial, or antifungal agents. Finally, the anabolic/catabolic state resulting from exaggerated imbalance in the immune system (caused by the secondary disease) is diagnosed and treated.

Revici has created several medications using lipids bonded to the heavier elements. Like most alternative medications, the non-toxic lipidic medicine has not yet been FDA approved, but a New York law (under whose jurisdiction the Institute resides) does allow any licensed physician to prepare non-toxic formulas.

Many conventionally trained physicians are amazed at the multiple pathological imbalances that can be treated by a single medication of Revici's. Since the body is limited in the number and types of symptoms it can express, one lipidic medicine may apply to several seemingly unrelated diseases. The doctor cited five examples: migraine, sunburn, shock, hemorrhage, and pneumonia—all medicated with the same non-toxic formula.

Part of the unpopularity of this new medicine among established medical associations is that this is individually guided non-toxic chemotherapy, where the substances and dosages vary for each patient, and may have to change as often as day to day if imbalance so indicates.

Regular monitoring and frequent analysis is required. The patient takes a great deal of responsibility in his monitoring process. He must measure and chart the changes in his PH several times a day, as well as take tests for specific gravity, surface tension, and chloride levels.

This personal monitoring gives the patient a sense of taking back his power in an unusually victim-oriented situation. But this necessitates discipline, which an AIDS sufferer will not always want to follow. Some patients find a sort of comfort in completely handing over their care to the medical team. Still other patients do not have the patience to stick with one treatment approach, often haphazardly switching from one "cure" to another, and finally resorting to taking possibly toxic medicines such as AZT and harmful chemotherapy.

According to Revici's AIDS program coordinator, Douglas Murphey, the doctor will not treat patients who are currently taking AZT, which Murphey claimed "is extremely toxic. AZT will totally destroy the lipids," he explained.

Impressive results are said to be obtained when refractory medicines are administered to AIDS patients. "In pneumocystis pneumonia and other opportunistic infections, manifest favorable changes are often obtained in less than 24 hours," claimed Dr. Revici. Antiviral treatments and refractory lipids "have kept patients entirely without any symptoms for years," he added.

One of 15 available testimonies includes that of a 38-year-old male who claims his KS skin lesions were treated in February 1984, and by October 1984 almost all had disappeared. The patient stopped treatment for a few weeks and the lesions reappeared. He returned to the program and by August 1985, all lesions were gone. Reports that his T-cell count rose from 370 to 564.

"I believe that this method represents the future of medicine," claimed Revici.

The doctor lives off his Social Security benefits alone. "I don't receive one dollar from patients. All goes to the Institute for Research," he explained.

Presently Revici and his 29 West Coast patients want to train doctors and set up protocols in California to carry on the study and administering of treatment.

The AIDS Healing Alliance is committed to living, creating wellness, and promoting the many ways that disease can be an opportunity and a catalyst for growth and change. AHA presents workshops designed to provide support and guidance for change, provides information with the 1st AIDS Pack and is conducting the Long Term Survivors Survey.

WORKSHOPS

AHA's "Tools For Healing" workshops on Sunday afternoons focus on holistic healing resources and are designed to provide practical experiences that increase awareness. Topics have included: AN INTRODUCTION TO HOLISM, THE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN EMOTIONAL HEALTH AND BODYWORK, NUTRITIONAL PROGRAMS TO BUILD THE IMMUNE SYSTEM, and HOLISTIC LIFE PLANNING. Our 1988 schedule also includes: NATURAL MEANS OF IMMUNE STRENGTHENING, PRACTICAL METAPHYSICAL TOOLS FOR SELF-HEALING, STRESS MANAGEMENT TECHNIQUES, PRACTICAL NUTRITION AND COOKING, AND CHINESE MEDICINE.

LONG TERM SURVIVORS SURVEY

The Long Term Survivors Survey is a comprehensive investigation into the techniques, tactics and transformations that have been instrumental in health recovery and maintenance of people with AIDS or ARC. This survey will allow AHA to provide relevant information about common elements that seem helpful in dealing with the conditions of having suppressed immunity, being HIV positive, or having an ARC or AIDS diagnosis. It will also provide data to substantiate the fact that people are healing themselves, and to show that there are indeed long term survivors of AIDS, thus creating a firm foundation for positive action for change.

THE 1st AIDS PACK

The AIDS Healing Alliance maintains this file of information on alternative/holistic and non-toxic treatments and protocols for physical, metaphysical, emotional, psychological and spiritual healing as a supplement to the "Tools for Healing" Workshops. Both medical and non-medical approaches are represented.

AIDS Healing Alliance is a member of the
