

Miller Quits Teaching Post

School trustees ended a week of community-wide furor by accepting the resignation of Costa Mesa High School teacher Donald Miller who had stepped on the edge of an American flag to emphasize a classroom lecture point.

Newport-Mesa School Board action came last Thursday night as it decided to honor the teacher's request that he be reassigned to a non-teaching post until after the Christmas holidays when he would be released from his tenure contract.

"Although I believe I am a good teacher and have done nothing which I feel is either ethically or professionally wrong," Mr. Miller pointed out in a statement to the Board, "I believe the publicity resulting from the present situation has been so great as to hinder my effectiveness in a classroom in this district. It may also continue to be a hindrance to the bettering of education in this area."

Mr. Miller in an earlier statement asked his fellow teachers not to direct any anger or hostility they felt towards a scapegoat in the school community, "but towards that aspect of man that allows his emotions to overcome his reason."

"In other words, try to direct your hostility into a positive force . . .," he added, "Perhaps if you can teach today's students to think more rationally, tomorrow's citizens will never cause a situation like the one which has confronted me."

Yell Leaders Will Compete

In an effort to establish the best method of choosing song and yell leaders in the future, a new procedure will be used this fall. Song and yell leaders will be selected by a committee comprised of representatives from the administration, coaching staff, and students. Selections will be based on ability, spirit, and enthusiasm.

Try-out routines will be taught two days: Friday, October 14, 3-5:00 p.m.; and Saturday, October 15, 1-3:00 p.m.; Persons interested should report to the grass area behind the gym at least one day, if not both. Preliminary try-outs will be Monday, October 17, 7:30 p.m., and the finals will be Wednesday, October 19, 7:30 p.m.

Terms of office will extend from December - June. Either elections or selections will be made in late May for next year.

Eligibility is based on an established 2.0 grade point average. It will be necessary to maintain this while in office. Freshmen students have not established their GPA's presently, but will be eligible to run for these offices in June. Transfer students with a 2.0 GPA are eligible to run for office in this selection process.

FELICIANO RETURNS — Jose Feliciano returns in concert to UCI Friday, October 21 at 8:30 p.m. in Campus Hall. Tickets for the event can be obtained in the Student Activities Office: UCI students, $1.00; general admission, $2.25.

Vietnam Day Committee Reinstated At Berkeley

Berkeley's Vietnam Day Committee — more commonly known as the "VDC" — has been reinstated on the UC Berkeley campus as an officially-recognized University organization. The action came Friday, contradicting a rejection for reinstatement made earlier in the week by University administrators.

The group, which was kicked off campus last August, will be known as the Campus Vietnam Day Committee. Its official title, however, is the Vietnam Day Committee, Campus Charter of the United Committee to End the War.

Berkeley's assistant dean of students, Donald Hopkins, commented to a staff member of Berkeley's student newspaper, the Daily Californian, that the original objection to the group was that it lacked organization. "It could not provide," explained a Californian writer to Anthill reporters, "a list of sponsors, officials or members, probably because most of the members were non-students."

Hopkins also accused the Committee of violating University rules. The VDC sponsored two non-student speakers in the same week, and it also owed the University $500.00 in back dues and fees.

Shortly after the group was kicked off campus, it filed suit against the University in the Alameda County Superior Court. The suit asked that the Court direct Berkeley officials to hold an open hearing to consider the VDC's request of reinstatement. The case was pending in court at the time their readmittance to the campus was approved. Peter Camejo, past VDC steering committee member, commented that the suit "will probably be dropped now."

Although the VDC has not yet formally elected officers, it has a governing body of a steering committee. Head of the steering committee Carl Frank reported to the Californian that plans have been made for a big rally this weekend sponsored by the VDC. The program will feature several soldiers from the Berkeley area who had originally refused to fight in Vietnam, but who are being forced to take overseas duty in that country.

Film Reflect Change

'British New Wave' to Break

"The British are ahead of us."

So stated Daniel Stein, acting assistant professor of drama at UCI, in discussing the film series British New Wave, to be presented by the Division of Fine Arts.

A Taste of Honey, first in a series of six films, will be shown October 25, followed in November by Five Finger Exercise, Expresso Bongo, The Kitchen, and The Entertainer. The concluding film, This Sporting Life, will be viewed December 6.

Britain's "restless generation," reflecting changing values and attitudes, is pictured in the films, which are "relevant to our generation," according to Professor Stein. Stein stated that the free speech movements, war protests and civil rights demonstrations of America are all part of a search for sound values, a search also quite evident in Britain.

Professor Stein noted that the films are both entertaining and educational, presenting a picture of today's England and possibly tomorrow's United States. He explained the statement "the British are ahead of us" by indicating that both England and the USA are following a pattern of world prestige, loss of that prestige through a national failure and finally the turmoil of a search for sounder values.

Because the USA still holds world prestige, Professor Stein said, "We are yet to have our angry young men." In comparing America and England, Stein presented the view that America does not yet produce films comparable to those of the angry young men tradition because "drama comes from failure."

Tickets to each of the six British New Wave films will cost $1.00; a subscription ticket to the entire series sells for $4.50. All films will begin at 8 p.m. in the Science Lecture Hall.

Draft-Exempt Test Slated For November 18

Applications are now available for the next draft deferment tests which will be given November 18 and 19. Male students of draft age must have their application filled out and post-marked no later than midnight of October 21 in order to be eligible for the November tests. He should file his application early if he wishes to be assigned to his first choice of testing center and testing date.

Cal-State college at Fullerton will be the only testing center in the Orange County area, although the test will also be administered at UCLA and USC. Packets containing an application card, information bulletin, and sample questions can be obtained at Cal-State Fullerton in the Admissions and Records Office, Room 104 of the Letters and Sciences building, or at local draft boards.

The test will only be given to those students who have not previously taken it. Out of the approximately 770,000 college men who took the tests in May and June, 81 per cent passed with a grade of 70 or better. About 146,000 failed, but no one that failed has lost his student deferment because of his score on the test, reports the Selective Service.

Lewis B. Hershey, director of the Selective Service, said that these students would not be reclassified unless "we face a steady call of over 30,000 a month." From August to November the draft quota was set at 30,000, with the exception of October's quota of 49,000.

An undergraduate student can maintain his exempt status if he passes the draft deferment test or if he is in the upper half of his class at the end of his freshman year, the upper two-thirds at the end of his sophomore year, and the upper three-fourths at the end of his junior year.

Seniors going on to graduate school must score an 80 on the test or be in the upper fourth of their graduating class.

Hershey Concedes Morality Issue

Students questioning the morality of the draft found an unusual source of support last week — Lt. General Lewis B. Hershey, director of the Selective Service System.

"I would rather go to jail than perform military service if I found it morally impossible to accept our nation's policies," Hershey replied to a question from one of over 500 people he addressed in the Yale Law School auditorium, New Haven, Connecticut.

Hershey was answering a question about what a person should do if he were of draft age and found that he was forced to perform military acts he found morally impossible to support.

1000 Woodrow Wilson Fellowships Available

The Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation offers 1,000 Fellowships to students in the United States and Canada giving serious consideration to a career in college teaching. Fellowships are awarded to superior students and fully support them through their first year of graduate study. The Foundation awards honorable mention to 1,500 additional students.

A student interested in becoming a Woodrow Wilson Fellow and planning a career in college teaching must be nominated by a college faculty member. The Foundation primarily supports candidates in the humanities and social sciences. Science and math majors looking to college teaching careers may be nominated. However, these students, if United States citizens, must also apply for a National Science Foundation Fellowship and must accept that award if offered.

In considering a student for a Fellowship particular attention is given to the nominees preparation for graduate study. The subjects, ability to write essays and independent work in the undergraduate years are considered in making an award.

In accepting an award a Fellow pledges to give serious thought to a career in college teaching and during tenure to undertake a full-time program of foundation at the undergraduate level for study leading to the Ph.D. degree, competence in foreign language and required graduate study.

The Woodrow Wilson Fellowship Foundation is represented at UCI by Henry Cord Meyer. Nominations for a Fellowship during the 1967-68 academic year are due October 31, 1966.

The following members of the UCI faculty in 1965-66 are Woodrow Wilson Fellows: Isabel M. Birnbaum, '58, psychology; Robert S. Cohen, '61, English; Dean E. Neubauer, '62, political science; Edgar T. Schell, '59, English; Martin M. Shapiro, '55, political science.

C.C. Funds Rising

The Christy Chrestensen fund at UCI now totals $1306. Donations amounting to $10,617 are being held in Christy's trust fund at the Crocker Citizens Bank in Santa Ana. The Lion's clubs in the area are sponsoring drives in an attempt to raise one half of the money necessary for Christy's treatment, $15,000.

Christy, daughter of Betty Blakeney of the UCI Accounting Office, is suffering from a kidney condition that results in the permanent, complete failure of these organs.

UCI Interfaith Foundation Opens In Town Center

University Interfaith Center (UIC) has established new headquarters this fall above the bookstore in the Irvine Town Center. Facilities open to UCI students include a lounge, seminar room, religious library, and counseling offices for Clergy, Priest and Rabbi.

Dr. Cecil E. Hoffman, executive secretary of the Center, will assist in coordinating activities of the various religious groups which will use the facilities of the center. The aim of UIC is to effectively serve religious and moral needs of the students at UCI.

Religious organizations included within the UIC movement are: the Irvine Campus Christian Fellowship (ICCF), an ecumenical venture of the Baptists, United Churches of Christ, Episcopalians, Lutherans, Methodists and Presbyterians; the Campus Lutheran Fellowship; the Newman Apostolate (Roman Catholic); The Latter Day Saint (Mormon) Institute of Religion; the Student Jewish Fellowship; a Christian Science organization; and the Intervarsity Christian Fellowship known as University Outreach.

Plans for the fall quarter include a discussion of the new morality led by the Reverend Donald Hartsock October 16 at 6:30 p.m. at the Center, and an open end discussion entitled "What's New About the New Morality?" scheduled for October 23 and led by Phil Dawson.

Further information about activities at UIC may be obtained by either calling the secretary of the Center, Virginia Baker, at 833-0891, or stopping into the UIC offices between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Book-of-the-Month-Club Critic Will Judge Writing Fellowships

Dr. James B. Hall, professor of English and head of the Creative Writing Center at UCI, has been appointed as a regional judge in the Book-of-the-Month Club Writing Fellowship Program.

Hall, a critic of the Book-of-the-Month Club, stressed that no compromise of standards had been made in his acceptance of the appointment. "I wouldn't have agreed to serve if I wasn't thoroughly convinced that work will be judged on artistic merit alone," he said.

The three judge regional committee, headed by Hall, will be screening applications from Arizona, California, Hawaii, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon and Texas, one of seven regions designated for the judging.

Two fellowships of $3000 each will be awarded in each region to young creative writers. The program is designated to give the gifted college senior an opportunity to develop his creative talents in writing the year following graduation. Final selections will be made by a board of national judges.

The program is open to any person who will be a senior in an accredited college or univer-

Weston To Appear

Randy Weston and his sextet will make a special appearance at the next session of University Extension's "American Art and Culture: The Negro's Contribution", October 17 at 7:30 p.m. Mr. Weston, jazz pianist and composer, will narrate "The History of Jazz in Performance" in the second part of Monday night's presentation.

Rudi Blesh, Social Historian of the American Queens College and New York University and author of Shining Trumpets, Modern Art USA, and Keaton, will lecture on the development of jazz. Mr. Blesh is currently working on a college textbook on jazz.

Tickets for the evening are available through the Extension office or at the door of Campus Hall before the lecture. Further information may be obtained by calling the Extension office at 833-5414.

Two Anteaters Serve As Mascots

Two different anteaters are now being used as UCI mascots. "Peter," the Playboy anteater was originated by Schuyler Bassett. A freshman last year, Bassett no longer attends UCI.

The copyright on "Peter" is now controlled by Hank Lee of Norseman Diversified. A portion of the royalties from Peter's use is turned over to the Associated Students treasury.

Lee has given UCI permission to use Peter in any way except for commercial purposes.

The "B C" - type anteater which wears a UCI sweater was created by Scot Swelnam. This anteater has been placed on the wall by the pool.

No decision has been made as to which anteater will be the "official UCI mascot."

World War One Exhibition Set

A public exhibition of books and other materials on World War I will be opened in the library on Sunday, October 16, under the sponsorship of the Friends of the UCI Library.

A reception in the lobby of the library at 3:00 p.m. will be followed by a lecture given by Professor Henry Cord Meyer. "Arms and the Man in World War I" will be the topic of Professor Meyer's lecture to be delivered in Room 1616, Fine Arts Building, at 4 p.m.

The exhibit is under the direction of Dr. Maryll Lenkey.

Stumpy Gives Squalid Advice To Confused Freshman Girl

Stumpy's at it again. Here's another of his letters to one of his many girls.

Dear Bobbi,

Having completed your first week at Irvine, I can imagine how frightened and lonely you must feel, for it is truly a big adjustment going from high school to a large university. (The fact that your high school had twice as many students doesn't matter). In order to make this transition as easy as possible I've decided to pass on to you the vast insight into college life which I acquired here last year. There is little doubt in my mind that if you adhere to my advice your Freshman year will be far more enjoyable.

Not knowing where you are living I can only hope that you've gotten housing off campus. It seems that last year, due to the large walk from Mesa

Court to the rest of the campus, most of the girls here acquired long, unsightly muscles in their legs. I realize that by not living on campus you'll be missing the explosive social life here, but knowing how much you value personal appearance, this seems to be the lesser of two evils.

If, however, you have been forced to live in the dorms then you must really be on the lookout. More than likely, they'll have given you a sophomore roommate who having been through this whole thing last year will act like G-D where you're concerned. She'll probably take the bed closest to the telephone, borrow all your clothes while telling you that you couldn't possibly fit into hers, but you'll have to be tough, show her you're her equal, when she tells you to empty the trash make her say, "please!"

Like most of us, not being particularly wealthy, you are no doubt amazed at the expense involved in living here. While no one can argue that the cost is considerable, those of us who were here last year have found ways to lower the cost.

Besides being your largest single expenditure, the Bookstore can also be your largest source of revenue. Once a quarter they give out free plastic bookcovers (I guess to sort of ease their conscience for the prices they charge for books). Well, what ever their motives may be, you'd be surprised how fast students from various high schools in the area gobble them up at a nickle apiece. If this doesn't raise enough revenue you can, without too much difficulty, smuggle cookies, cakes and other commodities out of the commons, for which Dr. Ross Avrina, and other such companies will reward you handsomely.

Enough about money, now to the subject which is of most concern to all: Freshman-dating. Without doubt, the question all Freshman girls seem to ask themselves as they're about to go out with a College man for the first time is "I wonder what he expects of me" which is quite amusing considering that the question Freshman boys ask themselves is "What does she expect me to do." Unfortunately, for the answer to this important question you'll have to wait for Dean March's lecture entitled "Premarital Sex Versus The Decision Tree".

As painful as it is, we must now go from dating to classes. If I understood you correctly, you're taking four classes. I'll now try to give you a few hints about each.

First of all English 5. Just remember to make your journal entries as spicy and risqué as possible, you see reading journals is the only "Charge" English teachers get out of life.

Math 5 — Just watch out for the flying eraser and pray for the best.

Social Science — If they haven't changed the course any since last year, then for all intents and purposes you have three classes and a rest period.

Biology — I only hope you were smart enough to schedule your lab as far away from lunch as possible. It seems that last year a lot of Biology students were found to be dissecting their Saga Hamburgers and eating their Fetal Pigs.

Lastly, the police problem. If you should ever be pulled over by an Irvine Policeman just wink your eyes, give him a sexy smile, and speak in a low seductive voice and you'll have nothing to worry about (I also hear that boys can use this same approach equally well, a fact which you might pass on to some of your Freshman friends).

Seriously Bobbi, if you make up your mind you can really enjoy your stay here. Just remember next year when the new crop of Freshmen enter, try to be kind to them, let them think of you as their friend. For only by gaining their confidence can you hope to sell them your old books which the bookstore won't buy.

Your Stumpy Friend

FBI Probe, One Demonstration Highlight Irvine Political Scene

Since UC campus politics are a rather touchy subject this year, it is worthwhile to clarify UCI's position before the locusts swoop down. In short, political activity at Irvine is minimal.

There are three political clubs on campus: The UCI Democrats, the Irvine Collegiate Young Republicans and the Students for a Democratic Society (SDS). All of these groups were founded last year on a base of existing political establishment. They have yet to succeed in capturing the following that the various movements at other UC campuses have. Membership last year ranged from peaks of 30 members in the UCI Democrats to an almost static three SDS members.

Even with these small memberships, some very unique things happened to the group. This included the impeachment of Donald Hill, a president of the Young Republicans, for suspected liberalism and a Federal Bureau of Investigation probe into the campus SDS. This probe resulted in the most heated political furor on campus last year.

An FBI agent approached an administration official and asked that the names of the leaders of the SDS be turned over to him. Since there was no set policy covering release of student information to non-students, the official set in motion an almost classic passing-of-the-buck routine which, as might have been expected, led to the office of Chancellor Daniel G. Aldrich.

By this time, the news of the FBI demand had reached the rest of the academic community and resulted in heated debate in all circles. The UCI Democrats adopted a resolution asking that the names be withheld and that a policy against release of such information in the future be instituted. The Academic Senate met and debated the subject and, although no resolution was passed, the mood of the body was obviously in the same mold as the Democratic club.

The final say was, however, with Chancellor Aldrich; he asked that the names be released.

Later in the year, UCI experienced its first (and only) demonstration. This took the form of a silent vigil against the war in Vietnam. It was not sponsored by any club, but it drew approximately 30 students and faculty members to an hour of silent protest in Gateway Plaza.

Information on any of the campus political clubs and on how new clubs may be formed can be obtained in the activities office.

Selective Service Is Not To Punish

Hundreds of thousands of Americans are in Vietnam today, fighting a war which our government has decided should be fought. They may soon be joined by six University of Michigan students who have just lost their case before the draft appeals board.

Did these students score below 70 on the draft test last spring? No, that's not why they're going to be drafted. Are their grades bad? Are they on probation or subject to dismissal? No, they seem to be doing all right in school.

The reason they have been reclassified 1-A is a simple one: they demonstrated against the war in Vietnam. They sat in at the draft board in Ann Arbor, Michigan, and are to be punished by being drafted.

To this writer, the prospect is disgusting. The draft was intended to raise an army, not to punish dissenters. Lawbreaking by civilians should be punished by the courts, not by the Selective Service System.

The issue is not whether these students are right or wrong in believing our position in Vietnam is an immoral one, but whether or not they should have the right to think we shouldn't be there.

The protestors violated the law. They were fined and given jail sentences. That should have been the end of it. But it wasn't. Colonel Arthur Holmes, director of the Michigan Selective Service System, thought the sentences were insufficient. What could be more appropriate, he reasoned, than to draft the dissenters?

Holmes is justifying this action through a section of the law which permits the drafting of persons who violate the draft law by committing such acts as failing to register. The difference between trying to evade the draft and protesting against the government's policy is apparently not visible to Colonel Holmes.

Christian Century Magazine (December 22, 1965) has editorialized that "to hold over the heads of young men . . . the threat that they will be drafted if they denounce the war in Vietnam or the draft is to say that the constitutional right of free expression is suspended for all male Americans between the ages of 18 and 26."

The American Civil Liberties Union has taken the students' cases to court. Barring an injunction, these persons who had nerve enough to stand up (and sit down) for what they believed will be drafted in November. The message from your local draft board was expressed in song by Pete Seeger:

"... It's easier far to stay half alive.

Just keep your mouth shut

While the planes zoom and dive

Ten thousand miles over the ocean."

Responsible Irreverance

By Mike Pekin

Send your problems, trivial or profound, to Mike Pekin c/o The Anthill, 3120 Commons, UCI.

Last week I toyed with a light description of an ideal sexual standard on campus — basically free sex. Today, for want of letters to answer, I would like to comment on a serious problem which is developing on this campus. It has been my personal observation that many girls, especially last year's freshmen, have acquired scandalous reputations because of liberties they took with male students in the past. This is a deplorable trend which is caused by the immaturity, if not the ruthlessness, of the men involved.

One of the signs of maturation in children is a growing feeling of empathy for others. By the time a person is an adult, he is supposed to have developed the ability to consider his own actions in the light of their effects upon other people. A surprising number of the male students here are retarded in this respect; they don't think for a moment of the girl's position before they publicize their own sexual prowess to anyone who will bother to listen. In doing so, they make the girl sound like a tramp.

We are all aware of the dual standard which paradoxically allows men to indulge in sex but forbids women this freedom. I am amazed that men can subject girls to this for the sake of their own egos. Some character trait is obviously lacking when a man can date a girl; talk to her about personal problems, plans and goals; become physically intimate with her; and then show such complete disregard for the girl's well-being. How cheaply can this guy evaluate the experience of a human life? Words fail me when I try to express my disgust for a person who can be so wound up with his own problems and pleasures that he will sacrifice another person on the altar of public opinion.

If any man is still reading this column, I would like him to ponder the probable future of the girl he has seduced. That girl wants to marry into respectable society, to become the mainstay of a man's life, and to become the loving mother of their children. Her ultimate success or failure in life will depend upon how well she performs her part in a family. How much does your talk of oral gratification and coitus with this human being help her in finding that man with whom she will spend a lifetime? I don't suggest that you should not have seduced her; just realize that the guy sitting across the table from you may have been well suited to make his life with the girl you slept with last night. It won't hurt anyone that you slept with her if he doesn't know about it, so shut up and act like a man.

To the Editor:

A group of UCI students and faculty members are interested in holding a series of open forums (panel discussions with audience participation) focusing on the past, present and future status of the grading system at UCI. The case in point for the first presentation will be the proposal for the abolition of the grading system in favor of a new percent pass-fail system.

The forum will hopefully try to answer these questions: Does competition for grades facilitate creative exploration of reality and motivate the student and/or the teacher towards new plateaus of personal and intellectual competence or is the purportedly impersonal grading system a mechanical monster which stifles meaningful growth of the individual while reducing him (you, me) to a cog in a machine? Is the grading system a source of anxiety and is it a psychological liability?

I feel that the students, faculty and administration of UCI should give their attention to the first of these forums which will be held in the Science Lecture Hall October 28 at 8 p.m.

There's An Honor Code Around Somewhere

Last year the one issue that aroused more student reaction than any other was the Honor Code. This year there's no issue that students are less aware of. Many students don't even know that we have one!

When asked to tell all she knew about the Honor Code, one freshman girl remarked, "I did hear that we had one the other day. I think it means we aren't supposed to cheat!" Even the former chairman of the Honor Code Committee — who was closer to the honor concept than anyone else on campus — was forced to ask what had happened to it at a recent meeting of the Vice-Chancellor's Advisory Committee.

For an Honor Code to function, students and faculty need to be aware of its existence, to say the least.

It is possible that the use of the honor concept is being delayed until after the ASUCI elections since the machinery for the code is provided in the proposed constitution. This would be a poor excuse for a delay, since it seems doubtful that the code would even have a chance if we wait until the middle of this academic year to say, "Okay, it's time to be honest again."

The Honor Code had bleak prospects for the future to begin with, but after the delay and indecision, its future has become even bleaker.

UCI has a choice to make. First, whether or not to follow an Honor Code. If we choose to follow one, we have another choice: whether to follow a partial code in which we simply aim to instill honesty and concern in the students, or whether to follow a real code where there are no rules, no proctors, and so on. The latter would be ideal if it were realistic, but it is not.

Actually, the honor concept is unrealistic anyway. The basic reason is that for it to function, students must not only be honest themselves, but they must also fink on others. In today's society, however, finking is something that most people just don't do.

A true Honor Code seems to be for the birds, not Anteaters.

Any form of Honor Code will have a better chance of success the sooner it is put into practice. I especially hope a code is adopted soon because there's nothing more frustrating than waiting half an hour for dinner while seeing other students infiltrate the lines. (Indeed, it's bad enough eating without enduring this added frustration!)

University Bookstore Prices Border On Petty Larceny

By John Monsen

As one makes a purchase at the UCI Bookstore he may get the feeling that the prices border on petty larceny. This feeling, of course, may be incorrect, but many students interviewed by this writer pointed out that prices do seem high, especially for used books and general school supplies. The problem comes when one tries to investigate these allegations since the bookstore enjoys a virtual monopoly on the items it sells. It may be safely stated, however, that its control of the local market hardly gives it any incentive to charge bargain prices.

It may not seem unusual that a small campus such as Irvine has only one bookstore, but a careful investigation is not so reassuring. Since the bookstore is a private business which is housed in a building owned by the Irvine Company, it is questionable whether the University may exert any influence on its policies.

Dr. Donald Walker, Vice-Chancellor in charge of student affairs, acknowledged that there have been persistent rumors about the exact status of the bookstore, and he promised to investigate. It might prove especially interesting to know more about the bookstore's pricing policies, about its relation to the University, and about future prospects for a comparative bookstore. The Anthill hopes to be able to report the Vice-Chancellor's findings in the next issue.

Whatever the results of the report, there seem to be at least two possible ways in which the situation could be improved. One might involve the addition of a second privately owned bookstore on or nearby the campus. This would not necessarily improve conditions, but it would encourage both better prices and service.

A second and more promising solution might be the creation of an Associated Students' Bookstore where the profits would be used to benefit all the students in general. This possibility should be investigated by the student finance committee until the formation of a student government. Profits from the store might enable a substantial reduction in either book prices or in the $7 per quarter activities fee.

Communist Plot Bared

Do you realize that in our public schools girls take showers nude in front of their female classmates?

This startling fact was bared recently by Dr. George Crane in the Santa Ana Register. "The tendency to expose . . .," he pointed out, "is an integral doctrine of communism and socialism."

His article details the subversion of a sacred American institution, The Bathroom.

He traces the roots of this subversion to the income tax law of 1913 which "permitted bureaucrats to invade the bank accounts and pay checks of every citizen."

The violations of our rights of privacy are spreading daily. Along with Dr. Crane, the Anthill staff hopes that as sober and reasoning citizens we may soon return to those tried and true days when everyone was taught from infancy to be ashamed of his body and its functions.

Show and Tell

By Pritzker & Bell

Friday, October 28, at 8 p.m., a series of student-faculty seminars will be held to evaluate the grading system and its possible abolishment. Far too often students simply accept the university program as it is set up for them and they are unable to think and speak critically of the system. These seminars will allow students to discuss the academic system and how it might be changed.

There are many serious academic problems at Irvine, and students should not allow the system to get away with them. We praise James Immel and Jeff Moskow for their blast at social sciences in last week's paper. More of this kind of criticism is vitally necessary from students of all departments.

There should be some student reaction to the excessive professionalism in the Fine Arts Division. We are finding that fine arts productions are too much the product of professionals and non-Irvine students. It seems to us that school productions should reflect for the most part the talents of Irvine students. The cast for Midsummer Night's Dream, the fall quarter drama production, contains a significant number of non-Irvine students. In fact, a major role is being performed by a well-known professional actor.

For the second straight year, the Art Department has planned to exhibit only totally professional shows. The rationale for this is that student's work should not be exposed to the public until they are "ready." Readiness is immaterial. The student's work must be displayed because THEY ARE THE UNIVERSITY.

This basic principle must be upheld.

When professionals are being cast instead of students in a university production, then the university has lost its focus. The purpose of university productions is not that they be successful, but that they involve UCI students.

Unbeaten UCLA Hosts UCI Tankers Saturday

Coach Al Irwin's water poloists journey to UCLA Saturday morning to face the unbeaten Bruins at 10:30.

"Our chances of winning are slight," Irwin remarked. "Our primary goal is to play the same kind of good tough ball game that we displayed in the first half of the SC game. We dropped a 12-4 decision last year to UCLA, but I wasn't dissatisfied with our play then; we scored first and led through the first quarter before they pulled away."

In sporting a 4-1 won-lost record, Irwin's crew has dropped its only decision to top-ranked SC. "Our team play has come along real well in the last few matches," observed Coach Irwin. "Though the entire team has played well as a unit, Bill Crist, Dave Smith and freshman Steve Farmer have been outstanding."

Hopefully, recovery from injuries, which have plagued the team and left it short of depth, is within sight. Randy Howatt, who has been out of the water ten days after having three stitches taken on his left eyeball, and Dave Belknap, who broke a finger in the victory over Long Beach City College a week ago, both should be ready for limited action against UCLA.

Led by 1964 water polo Olympian Stan Cole, UCLA has knocked off all comers, including UCS last Friday 5-3, in maintaining their unblemished record. Three Bruin teammates, Bruce Bradley, and brothers Bruce and Torrey Webb, joined Cole on an AAU team which toured Europe this summer.

Golf Meeting This Afternoon

This afternoon at 4:00 p.m., a meeting will be held in the Campus Hall classroom for all students interested in the UCI golf team.

Golf coach Dick Davis urges all prospective candidates for the UCI intercollegiate golf team to attend the meeting. Coach Davis also mentioned that a good score would range in the low 80's.

This year, the Irvine duffers will have three courses to practice on: Santa Ana Country Club, Monday — all day and on Friday after one p.m.; Rancho San Joaquin, every day; and Irvine Coast. Since all Irvine home matches will be held on these courses the team will have time to adjust and master them.

This year's schedule shows that the Irvine golfers will have to drive past USC and Cal State LA, both of whom were rated in the top four in the country last year. This season also will find the Ant-eaters battling the Spy Glass Hill Course in Monterey, one of the toughest courses in the country.

Coach Davis estimates that the team will carry ten players; six of the ten will participate in the scheduled matches.

Crew Coach Sees Bright Outlook

As the varsity crew squad concludes their second week of practice, crew coach Devall Hecht hopes to beat a few of the "big schools" this year. In last year's competition, Irvine's crew team had a big upset win over UCLA.

Returning for a second year of coaching, Hecht wants to concentrate on building a strong foundation of good collegiate oarsmen. Hecht is confident that with hard work and practice, the crew squad will give the "big schools" some competition and may even put on a repeat performance for UCLA.

Irvine sophomores, who will be competing against seniors with two or more years of experience, will have a rough season. Although the crew team has an abundance of spirit and enthusiasm, it seems to lack the needed manpower. Because crew, as Hecht so aptly put it, is a "horse power affair," the team needs more "bodies." At the present time, the varsity squad has only 35 members including the 15 returning lettermen. The freshman squad has less than 20.

In working to build a strong foundation, Coach Hecht also looks to the future and hopes to have a group of boys good enough to compete in national and international crew. "That's the great thing about crew," says Hecht, "It's an international sport."

Because a team may be able to qualify in any of seven crew events in national or international competition, Hecht wants to make Irvine one of the few colleges which puts a major emphasis on small boat training.

As a part time coach, Hecht is a graduate of Stanford. After three years of experience on the Stanford crew squad, Hecht moved on to "bigger and better" things. In 1952, he was named to the United States Olympic team. The 1956 Olympics, however, proved to be the big year for Coach Hecht; in Australia, Hecht and his partner won a gold medal for the United States.

Crawford Himself Planned Campus Hall To Fit Needs

In 1962 the director of athletics at the University of California at Riverside was given the opportunity and challenge to establish the athletic program at the new campus at Irvine. With the support of an administration that felt that sports was a vital part of the University, Dr. Wayne Crawford instigated a thirty year proposed athletic program.

In planning the sports program at Irvine, Dr. Crawford had to plan for the facilities that would house or field the sports. Area was no problem, as a thirty acre site was available for use. The problem was mainly money and the fact that the administration had expressed the hope that a multi-purpose building could be built.

Personally Designs Gym

To fit the needs of this demand Campus Hall was personally designed by Dr. Crawford. With a seating capacity of 2400 it would serve the dual role of basketball gym and concert hall with stage. On the floor area basketball, badminton, and volleyball could be played. Separate facilities for combatives, gymnastics, and weight training were planned. With swimming, handball, and squash adjacent Campus Hall.

Five Year Program

Campus Hall, now in its second year, is part of the first five year plan in Crawford's thirty year master plan. Campus Hall at the end of this five year plan will be able to accommodate a maximum of 4,000 students. At that time a new gym will have been completed.

The new gym (1971) will be over 100,000 square feet, with a seating capacity of 8,000 for basketball. It will also contain new handball and squash courts. A major part of the building will be devoted to the growing need of locker facilities for men. With the completion of the new gym the present Campus Hall will be used for intramurals and locker facilities for women.

Quality Foremost

First and foremost in Crawford's mind is the quality of his program, not the size or speed of its completion. As Dr. Crawford expressed, "Our athletic program can only be as good as the interest shown by the students and faculty. We want to encourage the students and faculty to engage in sports by adding the best possible facilities."
