LAURIE GARRETT

Friday, March 4, 2011, 3 p.m.
Mayer Auditorium, Health Sciences Campus
Admission is free.

Laurie Garrett is one of America's most eloquent and forceful speakers on global healthcare, infectious disease and disease prevention. The only person to win the three "P"s of journalism—the Pulitzer, the Polk and the Peabody—Garrett is the best-selling author of The Coming Plague: Newly Emerging Diseases in a World Out of Balance and Betrayal of Trust: The Collapse of Global Public Health. She will deliver a multimedia talk that uncovers the reality of healthcare in the United States, Europe, Russia and Africa, providing a new understanding of both the challenges and the opportunities of delivering quality healthcare globally.

Presented by Visions and Voices: The USC Arts and Humanities Initiative. Organized by Pamela Schaff (Pediatrics and Keck Educational Affairs), Erin Quinn (Family Medicine and Keck Admissions) and Lyn M. Boyd-Judson (Levan Institute for Humanities and Ethics). Co-sponsored by the Keck School of Medicine's Program in Medical Humanities, Arts and Ethics; the USC Pacific Center for Health Policy and Ethics; the Levan Institute for Humanities and Ethics; and the Department of Preventive Medicine/Institute for Global Health.
