FORMS OF REFERENCE

For volume, book, and part, Roman numerals (caps) should be used; for section, number, and page, use Arabic numerals.

In the titles of French, Italian, and Spanish, and of ancient classical and patristic works, capitalize only the first word (or the first two words, when the first is an article).

Titles of books and periodicals are set in italics; titles of periodical and encyclopedia articles, and of parts and chapters of a book, are Roman quoted. Titles of book series (e.g., The International Critical Commentary, Textus et Documenta, etc.) are set in roman, not quoted.

When the reference includes the volume, the page number is not preceded by “p.”

The following models will indicate the (unabbreviated) forms of reference for various types of literature; special forms may sometimes be necessary.
