

STANDARDS FOR INTERACTING WITH YOUTH

Addendum: Virtual Interactions with Youth in research settings and studies

This addendum describes the minimum expectations that we hold for personnel who have virtual interactions with youth in a University led research setting. Virtual interactions may include the use of technology (e.g., e-mail, smart phones, text, learning management systems, online communications platforms, social media, etc.) to carry out study activities.

The University Standards for Interacting with Youth apply to any interaction between youth and research study personnel, whether had in person, online, or via other technologies. Specifically in virtual settings, as study staff you are expected to:

- Limit virtual contact to purposes consistent with the study’s mission and/or for a clear educational, developmental, or health related purpose, in the presence of another staff member, and with the consent of the youth.
- Conduct all virtual interactions in a manner that promotes safety and complies with the general contact guidance outlined in the Standards, including:
 - Observing the Rule of Three in online meetings and all other virtual communications.
 - Using only study-sponsored email, phone, video conferencing, or social media platforms.
 - Avoiding text and electronic one-on-one communication between a single staff person and a youth. Instead, use technologies and platforms which are accessible by multiple staff members (e.g., a shared email inbox or a group chat functionality) and/or a youth’s parent.
 - Not engaging in purposeful communication or contact including phone or electronic communication or social networking with youth outside of sanctioned study activities.
- Treat all youth equitably (i.e., consistently as allowed by the IRB-approval protocol, and fairly), including ensuring equitable access to and support for any technology needed to fully participate in study activities.
- Proactively address harassment, bullying or other inappropriate conduct of youth participants.
- Never share sexually explicit online content with youth unless required by the study for research purposes and approved by the IRB.
- Never record youth’s images or interactions with youth, except if explicitly allowed by your study and with all requisite consents in place. This includes video recordings of online interactions, screen captures, screenshots, or creating other photo or video records of youth.
- Be mindful of your online presence and the content shared publicly via your social media or other platforms.
- Ensure online and virtual interactions are conducted via safe, known platforms that limit risks to youth participants.

CONSEQUENCES OF VIOLATING THE ADDENDUM FOR VIRTUAL INTERACTIONS

In the case of violations of the Addendum for Virtual Interactions, the University will adhere to existing policies and procedures for corrective action. Actions taken will first and foremost consider the need to ensure the safety of youth participating in the study.
