Congratulations!

We’re honored that your student is officially a Husky.

This is a great time to delve into all that the UW has to offer for your student — and for you.

We know that behind every Husky, there may be a wide variety of loved ones, mentors and supporters who helped them get where they are. We mean “family” in the broadest sense, aware that a student’s circle of role models might go beyond the traditional definition. If you’ve helped guide, care for and love a UW student, you are part of the UW family. We’re so glad you’re here!

The best way to learn about your student’s college experience is directly from them; check the “Talk with your Husky about” sections of this guide for conversation starters on many aspects of student life, from selecting a major to creating a budget.

You and your Husky are about to embark on a life-changing experience as part of the UW family — and we’ll be here to help and celebrate with you along the way!
Your involvement in your student’s life doesn’t end when college begins.

UW Parent & Family Programs (PFP) is here to help you stay connected with your Husky and support your family’s UW experience.

We keep in touch with families via email, social media and events — plus a website to help you navigate the UW, and the UW Parent Insider newsletter.

Questions? Contact uwparent@uw.edu.

Your philanthropic support is a meaningful way to enhance the student experience for your Husky and for many others. Gifts to the UW Parent Fund for Student Success will support programs and opportunities for students in need — including leadership development, career and internship guidance, emergency resources and wellness services.

Exploring majors

Your UW student has the choice of pursuing one or more of over 180 majors — and no matter what they choose, they’ll get a great education from one of the world’s top universities.

A degree is the credential a student will earn from succeeding in their overall education, while the major is their specific area of study. With the UW’s wealth of academic offerings, students can change majors without changing universities.

For more information on majors, visit uw.edu/uaa/advising/degree-overview/majors.

Exploring careers

Pursuing a major at the UW opens up many career paths and directions that a student might not have considered or even heard of before.

English majors might work at Microsoft. Anthropologists could work in government. A degree in public health opens doors to a multitude of health-care careers beyond physician and nurse.

With a UW degree, anything is possible.

Academic advising & support

General advising

A UW student’s academic journey begins with general advising from Undergraduate Academic Affairs. General advisers help students plan course schedules and clarify academic and personal goals. Through the MyPlan online platform, students can explore majors, register for courses and track their progress toward their degrees.

School or departmental advising

As students research specific majors, they may consult advisers in those programs. Once they’re admitted to their degree programs, they’ll continue to work with advisers until they graduate.

Specialized advising

The UW Office of Minority Affairs & Diversity (OMA&D) offers advising for students in the Educational Opportunity Program, College Assistance Migrant Program, Champions Program for youth and alumni of foster care, and TRIO, which supports economically eligible and first-generation college students. The Honors Program and Student Athlete Academic Services also offer specialized advising.

Tutoring and writing centers

The Center for Learning and Undergraduate Education (CLUE) provides drop-in tutoring in Mary Gates Hall, the HUB and Othello-UW Commons in South Seattle, while degree programs from chemistry to psychology offer specialized tutoring. OMA&D’s Instructional Center offers tutoring, study groups and mentoring for Huskies who are first-generation college students, economically disadvantaged or from underrepresented minority groups.

First-year Interest Groups (FIGs)

Learning is more fun with friends. Through FIGs, small groups of students take a series of courses together. FIG courses facilitate small-group learning, and FIG students often form study groups outside of class.

Paying for housing and food

UW housing and dining payments are made to Housing & Food Services (HFS) — by credit card on your Husky’s MyHFS homepage, by check (in person or by mail), or with Flywire for international students. Any financial aid remaining after paying tuition and fees will be automatically transferred to pay quarterly housing and dining charges.

Students living in residence halls can authorize family members to access their housing and dining accounts and billing reminders through MyHFS.

Husky Card

Your student’s Husky Card is not only their student ID — it’s also linked to their Husky Card account and can be used to pay for on-campus dining, vending machines, parking and more! You can deposit funds into your student’s Husky Card account remotely.

Learn more: hfs.uw.edu/Husky-Card-Services

Student employment & internships

Students can search for jobs (on campus or off) in Handshake, the UW’s online job-and-internship database. Offered through the Career & Internship Center, Handshake connects students with part-time and full-time jobs and internships throughout the University and beyond. The Career & Internship Center also offers career coaching, career planning workshops and quarterly employer events.

Students with work-study awards as part of their financial aid package can be employed in work-study jobs up to 19 hours a week when classes are in session.

The U-PASS makes getting around a breeze — no car required.

Each student’s quarterly U-PASS fees let them access public transit with their Husky Card, including unlimited rides on Metro and regional buses, as well as Link Light Rail. The U-PASS also provides discounts on vanpools, carpools and transportation-related items such as bicycles.

The Commuter & Transfer Commons in the Husky Union Building (HUB) offers day-use lockers, phone chargers, a kitchenette, changing and lactation rooms, a study area and other resources.

Limited parking options are available to students.

Protecting student information

Student information is protected by the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA), which states that once a student turns 18 or attends a school beyond high school, only they may have access to their grades, disciplinary proceedings, billing and financial aid. The University cannot release information about students to anyone — not even parents or other family members.

However, students may give others limited access to their academic, financial and health records through MyUW, the online platform students use to manage their own records from the time they’re accepted to the UW, throughout their studies and even after graduation. Students may also arrange to have a parent or other third party receive tuition billing emails. Access to housing and dining information is assigned through the MyHFS Homepage; authorized parties will be emailed when billing notifications are sent to students.

The UW further protects students and their privacy by using two-factor authentication when students access their accounts and records online. In addition to entering a password, students enter a code sent to their phone to log in. This prevents others from accessing students’ accounts without permission.

Student conduct

As a member of the UW community, your student is expected to demonstrate integrity in all their endeavors. The vice president of student life, the Title IX coordinator, and the dean of the school or college in which the student is enrolled or their delegates are charged with investigating and adjudicating suspected violations of the Student Conduct Code, including academic dishonesty.

The Washington Administrative Code (WAC) 478-121 and two companion policies, Student Governance Policy Chapter 209 and Chapter 210, apply to students; students are expected to make themselves aware of and comply with the law and with Washington and campus policies and regulations.

The UW Student Conduct Code was developed to maintain a safe, supportive and inclusive community that engages students in order to foster their academic success, personal growth and responsible citizenship. Students are considered to be maturing adults who are capable of making their own decisions and accepting the consequences of those decisions.
