

GEOG 271: Geography of Food and Eating

Spring 2017 • University of Washington

Instructor: Kathryn Gillespie

Overview

Role of Service-Learning in the Course

To give students first hand experience in addressing hunger in Seattle and the roles and activities of various organizations dedicated to food security in the city

Assignments Related to Service-Learning

SL students will be required to keep a journal of their experiences and activities and then write a five page essay integrating their service learning experience with key concepts and readings drawn from the class, especially during our week's work on Hunger in America.

Carlson Leadership & Public Service Center

Center for Experiential Learning & Diversity • University of Washington
171 Mary Gates Hall • (206) 616-2885 • <http://exp.washington.edu/carlson>