More participatory activities

Written survey not online

Nothing

More time addressing questions brought up

More resources for working with service volunteers

Start later!

Later start

Loved it all

More non-cheese main dish available. The empanadas were delicious but small and gone when I went back for a second one. But seriously, that is a very minor complaint. Great event!

I was very impressed with the event today. I even made notes about your facilitation techniques! Great work

Not a fan of panels

Nothing

It was difficult to understand what roles the different Carlson center staff have.

microphone use for participants to share- it was hard to hear a few of the community partners.

Feed back of what students are looking for in their experience.

Not necessarily something that needs to be different but I just want to echo the theme from yesterday – create a place where we can share our training / application things! Even if it's just a google drive or something. I think a lot of people would love to have that I think the panel spent too much time introducing themselves, leaving very little time for Q&A.

The panel could have been longer. I was interested in what they were saying and was surprised when it was ended after just a couple questions.

Perhaps a slide summarizing the different types of partners (child care centers, homeless advocates, etc.)

Consider an open space as a part of this event: <http://openspaceworld.org/wp2/explore/guided-tour/>

Pre-printed nametags with our names and our Orgs.

It was all great!

nothing.

n/a

In the future (not at the kick-off event), provide some more practical knowledge

More engaging

there was too much time spent on surface level conversations

Perhaps the panel could have been done differently. Maybe questions from the audience. Maybe on cards for another break homework?

I wouldn't change a thing

Icebreaker questions at the tables to jumpstart conversations. (The Seattle Freeze is real. ; )

Time to group with other community members who host service learners in similar roles. The random seating was interesting but I think more targeted pairing would also work. Also, networking time before the program seemed less effective as we didn't have context for each other yet. For us to network, we need to know who we're in the room with, and be able to find each other.

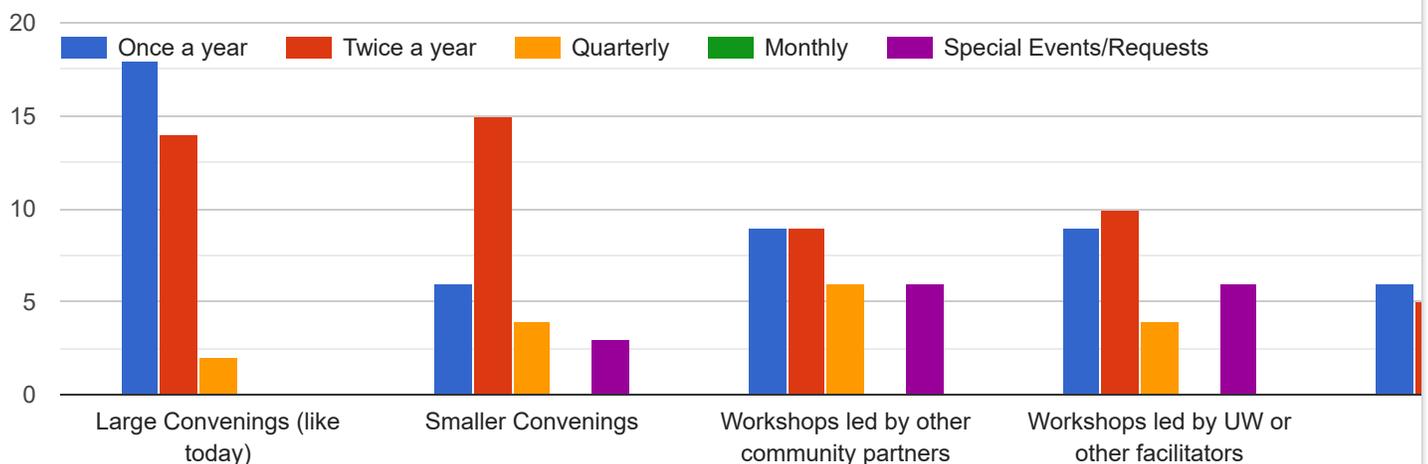

i like the panel, but would have been great to open it up to allow guests to ask some questions as well.

The event could be a little shorter in future. 3 hours felt like a long time.

Immediate follow-on with smaller (perhaps industry-related) gatherings

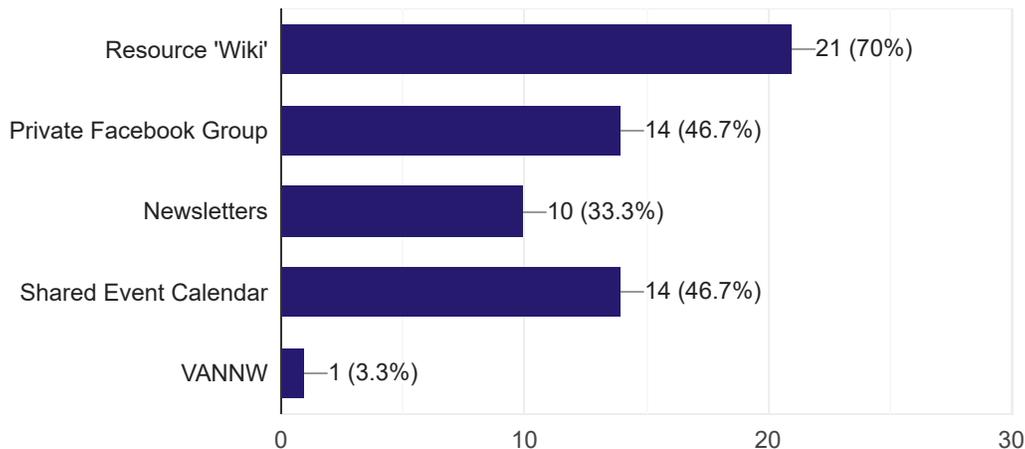

Could we meet on campus?

Please indicate what other community partner networking/learning activities you would like to participate in or think would be beneficial for the Carlson Center to coordinate at what frequency

Are you interested in other ways to connect or share resources with other community organizations that host UW students?

Orientation Notebook

Social networking

Resource and training sharing through online portal

I wonder what it would look like to have a way for the Carlson Center to track students who chose agencies with longer commitments?

The space to share applications / training. Maybe a day focused solely on those best practices. Learning more about the specific volunteer events / days (MLK etc) that you were talking about

Would it be possible to have direct communication with sites that host our students?

Yes

Continued information about all programs of Carlson Center, especially as new programs are approved by UW.

I'm wondering if I could pursue developing an internship for a student who is interested in volunteer management. We have volunteers who run the gamut from citizen scientists to retail shop to teaching, and bringing on new volunteers requires a significant amount of effort. I'd love to be able to expose someone interested in working in the non-profit field to the volunteer side of operations.

longer Service Learning placements

Would you like us to connect you to a particular person/organization/resource after today?

7 responses

thanks for the offer- I grabbed cards and info from those peeps.

no, I connected with some of them.

Panel discussion participants

no

I'm interested in knowing how we might connect with students who are studying conservation or environmental science and are also interested in environmental education.

There was a woman who represented UW early childhood/family studies (Lynn?) who spoke briefly, but departed early

yes

Do you have a training or resource you'd like to share with the network of partners?

6 responses

Yes, I would love to be able to share some of our patient programs/ services with those that may deal with clients/patients with cancer.

VANNW

no, not at the moment.

not at this time

no

Great planning, great execution! Food was yummy too; thank you for making special dietary arrangements. I loved the diverse group and focus on equity.

good day!!!

I'm looking forward to Carlson Center's responses and suggestions regarding the common challenges identified in the last part of the event.

The location was great, thank you.
