

Feds Rule to Force High School Girls to Undress Next to Naked Boys Who Think They're Girls

by Ben Shapiro3 - Nov 2015

On Monday, the federal government declared itself fit for the madhouse by mandating that a Chicago high school allow a full biological male into the girls' locker room for all purposes, including nudity. This biological male, the feds determined, was different because he thinks he is a female.

The feds have ruled that the presence of a twig-and-berries in the girls' locker room has been mandated by Title IX of the Civil Rights Act. Yes, ladies and gents and non-cisgenders: it turns out that the battle against sexism enshrined in the ill-written Title IX was actually intended to force underage young women to look at the penises and testicles of mentally ill boys.

Progress.

The U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights spent almost two years checking out the Township High School District 211 because of the transgender "girl." He filed a complaint with the feds in 2013 after the school refused "unrestricted access" to the girls' locker room. The district eventually agreed to allow the boy into the girls' room so long as he used a privacy curtain while disrobing.

That wasn't good enough. The feds determined that this still constituted discrimination. Why? As John Knight, director of the alphabet-soup LGBT and AIDS Project at the ACLU, stated, this was "blatant discrimination." He explained (well, we think it's a he, unless he identifies differently today):

It's not voluntary; it's mandatory for her. It's one thing to say to all the girls, "You can choose if you want some extra privacy," but it's another thing to say, "You, and you alone, must use them." That sends a pretty strong signal to her that she's not accepted and the district does not see her as a girl.

Perhaps the district does not see "her" as a "girl" because "she" is not a she, a her, or a girl. Nonetheless, the Office for Civil Rights agreed, with Assistant Secretary for Civil Rights Catherine Lhamon averring:

All students deserve the opportunity to participate equally in school programs and activities – this is a basic civil right. Unfortunately, Township High School District 211 is not following the law because the district continues to deny a female student the right to use the girls' locker room.

The student is not female. But never mind that: the subjective opinion of a mentally ill person now governs a student body of some 12,000.

So here, in a nutshell, is the government's new policy with regard to sex and sexuality among youngsters:

- If you're a boy who shows a picture of your penis to a girl in your class, you have likely violated both federal child pornography laws as well as local sexual harassment laws. If this happens consistently in your school, the school has violated Title IX.

- If you're a boy who says he's a girl, the girl must be placed in position to see your penis and testicles. If the school does not allow this, the school has violated Title IX.
- If you're an adult who sexually touches a child with the consent of the child, you have committed a crime, since children are incapable of consent.
- If you're an adult who gives a child hormone therapy or surgery to prevent normal development of the genitals, with the consent of the child, you are a hero.

If this all makes sense to you, you should be working for the federal Office for Civil Rights at the Department of Education.

This is what happens when a society loses its moral moorings. In its quest to destroy God, the left unhitched its wagon from eternal truths and, instead, decided to substitute its own idea of utopia. To reach that utopia – freedom from social expectations and standards – objectivity itself had to be destroyed, so as to avoid blame. Objective truth lost all meaning; only subjectivity mattered. Science became the enemy, since it establishes provable truths; it had to be quashed and quelled. Language became the enemy, since definitions exclude people and things not covered by those definitions; it had to be perverted and hijacked.

And so we now live through the looking glass, waiting for the next philosophically incoherent ruling from our masters of time and space. Or mistresses. Or whatever.

Ben Shapiro is Senior Editor-At-Large of Breitbart News, Editor-in-Chief of DailyWire.com, and The New York Times bestselling author, most recently, of the book, The People vs. Barack Obama: The Criminal Case Against The Obama Administration (Threshold Editions, June 10, 2014). Follow Ben Shapiro on Twitter @benshapiro.